Roosevelt Calls Leaders to Halt Job Fund Revolt

Democrats Are Warned 4-Billion Plan Must Be Unhampered.

Buchanan Ready To Facilitate Bill

Airtight Rule Will Be Sought in House to Push Legislation.

President Roosevelt yesterday was forced to take a hand in an incipient congressional rebellion against his demand for a $4,000,000,000 lump sum work relief appropriation, to be expended by New Deal agencies at White House discretion.

Democratic leaders on both sides of the Capitol were called to the White House and given to understand that the fund must not be "earmarked." If any specific allocations are to be made by Congress, they must be confined to a $300,000,000 budgetary allotment for TVA, rivers and harbors, public buildings and roads, members were told.

Determined to follow out instructions to the letter, Chairman James P. Buchanan, of the House Appropriations Committee, is prepared to seek an airtight rule from the House Rules Committee to keep the legislation intact in the House. If the "revolt" collapses before the bill is offered, rule plans will be dropped.

Senate to Speed Bill.

In the Senate, the bill also will be cleared through the Appropriations Committee, it was decided, although reference to Senator Pat Harrison's Finance Committee was considered for a time.

The President was reported privately to regard minority movements to "earmark" portions of the $4,000,000,000 lump sum for specific purposes as a "log rolling" effort to secure definite allotments for pet projects.

Attending the White House conference were Vice President Garner, Senate Democratic Leader Robinson, Speaker Byrns and House Appropriations Chairman Buchanan.

Buchanan was designated spokesman for the group. He said conferees arrived at complete agreement with the President.

Won't Break Down Fund.

"It is utterly impossible to break the $4,000,000,000 down into specific items at this time," he said. "Relief plans necessarily must change from day to day, with changing conditions. No one can estimate what amount will be needed for this or that emergency agency with any degree of definiteness."

This expression from Buchanan, who last session was an outspoken advocate of concrete earmarkings, was believed to smooth out the most formidable wrinkles in the path of House passage. A different situation may be encountered in the Senate, where legislation by rule is not the vogue, and strong sentiment exists among both Democrats and Republicans for tying strings to the fund.

May Call Relief Heads.

Summoning of Public Works Administrator Ickes, Federal Relief Administrator Hopkins, and other directors of emergency agencies, to give an advance accounting, was regarded as certain, if not in the House, certainly in the Senate.

If this is done, ranking Republican members will attempt to commit officials to the needs of their agencies, and attempt to bind them to give amounts in the law. A similar effort was partially successful last session, but, with the Administration on its guard, is headed for rough sledding at the approaching hearings.

Preceding to the Capitol the $4,000,000,000 work appropriation to find jobs for the 3,500,000 unemployed now on relief rolls will be an independent White House measure asking $880,000,000. This in part will supplement funds of the FERA, which will all be exhausted by February 10.

Agreement Is Foreseen.

The $4,000,000,000 lump sum appropriation may not be started through the legislative mill for another week or ten days. Leaders believe that towering Administration majorities in both houses will cleave to the President's wishes in the matter, despite the general belief that Congress should have advance knowledge of expenditures intended. Leaders said that in a general way there will be a "gentleman's agreement" on what the money will be spent for.

Meantime, the long awaited social security program, embracing in one measure Administration old-age pensions, unemployment insurance and health insurance plans, costing an estimated $100,000,000 the first year, will arrive at the Capitol early next week.

Special Action Is Urged.

Secretary of Labor Perkins conferred with Speaker Byrns yesterday on the contents of this message, and projected legislative action. Miss Perkins favored creation of a special House committee to consider the measure, to which half a dozen regular committees have laid Mary Pickford and Douglas Fairbanks.

Mary Pickford Given Divorce; Almost Cries

Judge Ben Lindsey Grants Decree; Doug Has 'Nothing to Say.'

Los Angeles, Jan. 10 (AP).—Mary Pickford divorced Douglas Fairbanks today in a three-minute court appearance which left her almost in tears.

The case, hanging fire for more than a year, was called suddenly in comparative secrecy.

Lines showed in the actress' face as she took the stand. She testified in a voice but little above a whisper.

Miss Pickford, for more than a decade "America's sweetheart" on the screen, faltered before the case had ended, despite its brevity. Her voice broke and she appeared near tears.

Superior Judge Ben B. Lindsey, who became widely known for his juvenile court work in Denver and later for his advocacy of "companionate marriage" and other domestic relations theories, presided and granted the decree. He was sworn into office here but two days ago.

Suit Uncontested.

There was no contest. The hearing was one of the briefest on record here. It was granted on the suit she filed December 8, 1933, in which she charged Fairbanks with mental cruelty, indifference and neglect.

Miss Pickford and Fairbanks were married March 28, 1920. The actress had just been divorced from Owen Moore, well-known actor of the silent movie days. Fairbanks was divorced in 1919 from Ann Beth Sully, whom he married in 1907.

Rumors that Miss Pickford and Fairbanks would obtain a divorce were oft denied for two or three years before she finally admitted July 2, 1933, that they had reached

U. S. Denies Repudiation In Gold Case

Supreme Court's Hearing Near End; Opinion Believed Divided.

Source of the Power to Alter Liberty Bonds Is Questioned.

By Elliott Thurston.

Arguments before the Supreme Court on the momentous gold cases drew toward a close yesterday with the Government challenging use of the word "repudiation" to describe the abrogation of gold clauses in public and private obligations.

Again an impression prevailed that the court is sharply divided at this hour on the two main questions—first, whether Congress had power to do away with gold clauses and, second, whether promises to pay in gold are to be redeemed in dollars equivalent to the old or the new price of gold.

Moreover, it seemed—though impressions gained from questioning by the bench are not safe guides—that a question of Chief Justice Hughes, late in the day, indicated a distinction in his mind between the Government's cancelling the gold clause in a Liberty bond and the inability of a railroad to redeem its promise to pay gold on its bond.

Questions MacLean.

The Chief Justice, questioning Angus D. MacLean, Assistant Solicitor General, remarked that the Liberty bond had been issued under the war powers of Congress and asked, "Where do you get any power under the Constitution to alter that bond?"

John M. Perry, New York lawyer, had just finished a crisp, brief summary to the court of his own case, in which he is his own counsel. He owned a Fourth Liberty 4¼ per cent bond, issued in 1918 and promising to pay "in United States gold coin of the present standard of value." When the Treasury refused to pay him in gold or in dollars equal to the new value of gold he sued in the Court of Claims.

The Assistant Solicitor General, beset by questions earlier and later, rather haltingly answered that the power to alter the bond was part of the power of Congress to coin money and regulate the value thereof. But this did not seem to satisfy members of the bench, and Justice McReynolds sharply asked if Congress has the right to destroy the value of a Government contract.

Denies Repudiation.

Here MacLean countered that no value was destroyed. "We do not agree," he said, "that the change is a repudiation of anything."

He digressed to mention that the British had done the same thing, but Justice Van Devanter caught him up by observing that the British have no written constitution and Justice Stone alluded to the point that the British do not go in for gold clauses.

The Government, which did not have smooth going yesterday, means to wind up today. Much of the argument has been far afield of the central question: has Congress the power to end gold clauses, those made by itself as well as those made by private issuers of bonds?

Hence the great emphasis laid by the Attorney General upon the "chaos" which would result from an adverse verdict—the incalculable effects upon the price level, among other things—is scarcely germane. Concentration upon what would happen if the court ruled adversely, rather than upon the legality of what has been done, inevitably suggests disquieting implications.

Question of Chaos.

Edward W. Bourne, representing trustees of the Missouri Pacific Railroad's bonds, took issue with the Government on this question of chaos by contending that a decision compelling the makers of gold clauses to pay in the present equivalent of gold would require payment of more dollars than the public and private bond issuers wish to pay, but that it would not mean chaos. Here again much emphasis has been put on the point that by such a requirement the issuers would owe $169,000,000,000 on their $100,000,000,000 of promises to pay gold. The legal question is not the effect but what the proper dollar equivalence of gold is today.

On this point, the Government

Secretary Wallace, top, and Senator Vandenberg.

Vandenberg Wants Sugar Corner Quiz

Resolution Requests Wallace to Forward Data About Market.

By Franklyn Waltman, Jr.

With members of Congress from beet sugar States generally aroused, Senator Arthur Vandenberg (Republican), of Michigan, yesterday introduced in the Senate a resolution calling on Secretary of Agriculture Henry A. Wallace for all information regarding the December sugar "corner" on the New York Coffee and Sugar Exchange.

The details of this sugar "corner" and the fact that members of Congress were quietly investigating the facts in order to determine whether there should be a congressional inquiry were revealed in The Washington Post several weeks ago.

The Vandenberg resolution, which would elicit full details of the sugar operation, including the names of long and short traders, was sent to the table but is expected to be acted on next week. Senate Democratic Leader Joseph T. Robinson objected to suspending the rules for immediate consideration.

Cuba Concessions Protested.

Meanwhile, the usually controversial sugar bowl started boiling in other directions. The Michigan delegation in the House, led by Representative Fred L. Crawford (Republican), sent a letter to Secretary Wallace protesting against granting Cuba any further concessions on sugar.

Mr. Crawford contended that due to the quota given Cuba along with the lowered sugar tariff under the reciprocal trade agreement, the insular republic has now "virtually a monopoly in sugar if she desires to rig the market on the American consumer."

The protest of the Michigan con-

Senate Votes Safe Driving Bill for D.C.

Early Enactment Likely as Measure Passes Without Fight.

Eight Other Proposals Go Through in Record Time.

Early enactment of the motorists' safety responsibility law for the District was seen yesterday after the Senate passed the bill, along with eight other local measures, without a dissenting vote. The bill passed the House last year and is expected to encounter no serious opposition this session.

The antigambling bill, intended to outlaw the numbers game by making possession of gambling equipment prima facie evidence of guilt, also was passed without opposition after it had beeen explained by Senator William H. King, chairman of the Senate District Committee.

Passage of the nine bills within the first week of the Seventy-fourth Congress set a precedent for early consideration of District legislation and resulted from the initiative of Senator King getting the measures on the calendar at the first opportunity.

The automobile insurance bill, which was explained by Senator Pat McCarran (Democrat), of Nevada, is expected to do much to lessen the number of serious traffic accidents in Washington by weeding out careless drivers.

Aimed at Careless Drivers.

The measure places a premium on careful driving by requiring liability insurance only of automobile operators who are convicted of driving while drunk, leaving the scene of an accident in which personal injury occurs without making their identity known, or failing to pay a traffic judgment within 30 days.

A motorist convicted of any one of these violations would be required to surrender his operator's permit and registration certificate until he produced evidence of ability to respond in damages for future accidents.

This ability may be shown by producing an insurance policy, a bond or proof that he has deposited $11,000 in cash or securities with the clerk of the District Supreme Court.

Sponsors of the bill believe it will cover taxicab operators adequately for public protection, but Senator McCarran believes an additional taxicab insurance bill, such as passed the Senate last year, should be enacted.

A bill corresponding to that which passed the Senate yesterday has been introduced by Representative Mary T. Norton, chairman of the House District Committee, and by Representative Clarence J. McLeod (Republican), of Michigan.

Fight Due on Gambling Bill.

The antigambling bill will encounter both opposition and much skepticism in the House, according to present indications, but it probably will be passed because of public demand.

Chairman Norton has promised to bring the bill before her committee at its first meeting Wednesday and will press for early action if the committee votes to report it favorably. With other members of the committee, she is skeptical of its aim and effectiveness.

The other seven measures which passed the Senate in record fashion provide:

A new procedure for recording and releasing deeds of trust so as to prevent future frauds.

Jafsie Faces Charges Of 'Woman in Green;' Reilly Bested in Duel

Condon Clears Up Confusion In Story of Lindbergh Letter

Says Colonel Allowed Him to Read Note From Kidnaper.

Flemington, N. J., Jan. 10 (AP).—The cross-examination duel between Dr. John F. "Jafsie" Condon and Chief Defense Counsel Edward J. Reilly took up today where it left off, as court convened at 10:04 for another day of Bruno Richard Hauptmann's murder trial.

Jafsie bowed low and politely to David T. Wilentz when the attorney general told him to resume the witness stand. He looked kindly at the jurors. Reilly opened up.

Q. I think, doctor, when we adjourned yesterday we were discussing a note found under a rock?—A. Where?

Reilly thereupon switched to the ransom note which led to Condon's Woodlawn Cemetery tryst with John.

"I picked that up under the rock," Condon said when asked to identify another note found under a stone in front of a deserted Jerome avenue hot-dog stand. It did not bear the kidnap symbol, he acknowledged.

Dr. Condon began to describe his trip to the point beyond the Jerome Avenue Subway Station, where he found the ransom note under a boulder.

"Well," he began, "I asked Mr. Alfred J. Reich if he wanted to drive there with me."

Q. Where did you stop?—A. In front of the frankfurter stand described in the letter with symbols.

Q. How far did you go beyond the Jerome Avenue Station?—A. 100 to 150 feet.

Q. What time of night was that?—A. From a quarter of 8 to 8:30.

Q. How long did you stand in front of the frankfurter stand be-

Defense's New Move Hints Doctor Wrote Kidnap Notes.

Mystery Witness Is Going on Stand

Breckinridge Supports Condon; Reilly Fails to Name 'Four.'

(Copyright, 1935, by the United Press.)

Hunterdon County Courthouse, Flemington, N. J., Jan. 10.—Jafsie walked out of the trial of Bruno Richard Hauptmann today and a mysterious "woman in green" walked in.

Defense lawyers said they would put her on the witness stand in an attempt to prove Dr. John F. Condon was involved in the kidnaping.

Were it not for this woman in green, Jafsie could claim an unbroken record of victories over Edward J. Reilly, chief defense counsel, with whom he fenced for almost two days over details of the payment of $50,000 ransom. There were many vague and contradictory statements hanging in the steamy air of the court room when yesterday's session adjourned with Jafsie still on the stand.

But today he came in like a fresh breeze and blew them all out of the window.

Backed by Breckinridge.

Then Col. Henry Breckinridge, former Assistant Secretary of War, and adviser to Col. Charles A. Lindbergh, got on the witness stand and helped blow away any fog of suspicion that yesterday's session may have left over Jafsie. He verified all important details of the old man's story, and ended by giving him a character testimonial.

The defense promises that the "woman in green" would return before Hauptmann's right to live or die is written on a slip of paper and put into the hands of the jury foreman, and drag something from the past that Jafsie will need to explain.

No one has noticed her seated back in the throng of witnesses. Jafsie was on the stand, droning away on testimony that already was a twice-told tale in this courtroom—the story of how he drove up to St. Raymond's Cemetery and paid $50,000 ransom.

It was a sleepy courtroom, for Jafsie's sallies and interruptions did not have the snap and sparkle that they had yesterday. About that time of day thermometers in the courtroom, which stand at 65 when the session begins, crawled up to 86 from the warmth of human bodies packed tightly together.

Reilly Looses Dramatics.

Edward J. Reilly, defense counsel, hasn't been a crack criminal lawyer for 20 years for nothing. When it comes time to play out a courtroom drama, he opens all the stops and lets the spectators have it. He was talking to Jafsie when suddenly he whirled and bellowed:

"Is Mrs. Koernan in the courtroom?"

Nothing happened at first. Then she came pushing through the crowd.

She had on a green suit and a green felt hat. Forty-five might be her age. She is slender and short. Fifteen years ago her hair must have been red, but now it is shot through with gray and some of it straggled out from beneath her hat brim.

Reilly led her around to the witness chair until she was two feet from Jafsie.

"Now, Dr. Condon," he said, "tell us whether you ever saw this woman before."

Jafsie took a minute to answer and then said:

"Why, yes, she came to my house one time with a Mrs. Bush."

Reilly handed two letters to Jafsie.

"Did you ever see those before?" he asked.

"Yes, I have."

"Did you tell this lady standing in front of you that the hand-

Police Charge Mobs in New Saar Rioting

Riot Occurs When Foes Attack Nazi Cordon Around Voters.

(Copyright, 1935, by the United Press.)

Saarbrucken, The Saar, Jan. 10.—Cavalry and mounted police battled with mobs in the streets of Saarbrucken today in one of the worst riots of the dangerous preplebiscite period.

Arrival of German-South Americans to vote in Sunday's plebiscite precipitated the disturbance.

The Nazi German Front had its usual cordon around the railway station. Suddenly opposition groups appeared. They jeered the Nazis and sought to break through their lines in an effort to each the platform. They charged the Nazis were seeking to show the arrivals that all was unified and calm in the Saar, and all in favor of voting for rejoining the Reich under Nazi rule.

Mounted police charged the massed ranks of Nazi sympathizers. They were joined by the Landjager, the native Saar cavalry.

The Nazis retreated in formation, but attempted another demonstration in front of the city hall.

Three Nazis were reported injured in the melee, but none of the 58 South American Saarlanders was hurt.

Max Braun, leader of the anti-Nazi faction, issued a statement charging 1,500 specially trained Nazis have been smuggled across the German border to form a "flying squad" to terrorize his liberty front organization.

Braun warned that if no ade-

$70,000 Thefts Laid to Cashier Of Closed Bank

Aid of Herndon Institution Admits Embezzlement, President Asserts.

Herndon, Va., Jan. 10 (Spl.).—Asa E. Bradshaw, 44-year-old, mild-mannered cashier who has filled his position at the Herndon National Bank for the past 18 years, has signed a confession admitting embezzling $70,000 of the deposits of the institution which was closed Wednesday night, Dr. Ernest L. Robey, president, said today.

Married and the father of two daughters, Mr. Bradshaw could not be reached today. He has been ill at his home for the past two weeks.

The money was taken over the 18-year period during which Mr. Bradshaw has been regarded as a model cashier and a leading citizen in the community, according to Mr. Robey's statement.

FDIC Takes Control.

He entered the employ of the bank 20 years ago, and in two years worked his way up to the position of cashier.

Business was at a standstill in this city today as the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation took over the bank.

FDIC officials, operating under the new deposit guarantee legislation, expect to pay off all depositors up to $5,000 within ten days, they stated today.

An audit was begun by these officials today, and the pay-off will follow completion of this work.

It was learned tonight that Fairfax County has approximately $20,-

Long to Give His Cousin Job If Governor Allen Will Quit

"But Oscar Wouldn't Resign Anything Unless He Was Sure of a Better Job," Kingfish Says, Denying Aid Is "Through."

New York, Jan. 10 (U.P.).—Senator Huey Long announced tonight he would make his cousin, Lieutenant Governor Thomas C. Wingate, Governor of Louisiana if Gov. O. K. Allen would resign.

"But Oscar wouldn't resign unless he got a better job," said Long.

The Kingfish denied reports from Baton Rouge that Allen had relinquished office.

"The man who resigned was just a man named Allen with the Government Employes Commission.

"Oscar is hunting and I wish I was with him. If he would resign I'd make my cousin Governor. But Oscar wouldn't resign from anything unless he got a better job."

Baton Rouge, La., Jan. 10 (AP). While objectors to the Huey Long dictatorship hurled threats in the Senator's direction today a false report that Long's chief lieutenant, Gov. Oscar K. Allen, had resigned, stirred Louisiana with unusual excitement.

The report surged over the State like a tidal wave and its falsity was not established until Long denied it from his Washington office and Mrs. Allen declared it was untrue.

The Governor could not be reached for comment. He was secluded in the swamps of Iberville Parish at a fishing camp accessible only by boat. He has been absent from his executive offices since Monday and attaches there said they could not reach him.

The electrifying report followed closely on the heels of last night's huge mass meeting here at which the "Square Deal Association" was organized on a State-wide scale and hinted that force will be employed if Long's administration fails to heed the Square Dealers' demand for repeal of the so-called dictatorial laws.

Ernest Bourgeois, president of the association, sounded the Square Dealers' threat to carry out their demands, "forcibly if necessary," in the following declaration:

"If the administration does not do what we demanded in the prescribed time, we will force them. We are bending every effort to accomplish our ends without bloodshed, but if it takes bloodshed to get it, there will be more blood-

25 Per Cent Slash in Expenses Of Maryland Is Asked by Nice

By Laurance F. Stuntz
(Staff Correspondent of The Post).

Annapolis, Md., Jan. 10.—Asking State agencies to cut their expenses 25 per cent, Gov. Harry W. Nice today made his first major official act an attempt to reduce the deficit which faces the State on October 1.

The amount of the saving is unknown, even to the Governor. He hopes that it will materially reduce the deficit, estimated to be $2,229,000, but does not expect it to eliminate the shortage entirely.

The Governor's appeal was made in a letter to Walter N. Kirkman, State budget officer. He asked Mr. Kirkman to send a circular letter to the heads of all agencies receiving State funds. In this letter, he suggested Mr. Kirkman should point out the need for "rigid economy" and then ask the reduction in expenditures to be as much as possible up to 25 per cent. The reduction would apply only to payments to be made from unexpended balances. The Governor did not ask that the entire appropriation for this year be cut one-quarter.

The State budget is about $30,000,000, of which $5,000,000 is dedicated to interest and principal payment on State bonds. These expenditures can not be reduced. Another $5,000,000 is for schools, both State and county. To reduce the State aid to county schools would require a change in the law. All school expenditures, as well as all other appropriations, were cut ruthlessly when the present budget was being prepared in 1933.

Of the remaining $20,000,000, a little more than half is the special

Senate Receives 3,616 Names From President for Promotion

(Associated Press.)

Hardly had the names of 3,616 Presidential appointees reached the Senate yesterday before opposition to confirmation of some of them appeared.

An individual contest against confirmation of Eugene O. Sykes, of Mississippi, chairman of the Federal Communications Commission, was promised by Senator Bilbo (Democrat), Mississippi.

"I made it an issue that if elected I would build a fire under him, as long as I was in the Senate until I got him out of the service," Bilbo said. "I always keep my promise."

An examination of the qualifications of all the seven members of the commission and of their views on consolidation of communications systems was ordered by Chairman Wheeler, of the Senate Interstate Commerce Committee, which will pass on these nominations.

One member of the Interstate Commerce Committee indicated a filibuster would be conducted to prevent confirmation of the commission if the members favored a merger of all communications services.

There were hints of opposition to other appointees, including Marriner S. Eccles, of Utah, new governor of the Federal Reserve Board, and James A. Moffett, of New York, Federal housing administrator, but Chairman Fletcher, of the Banking Committee, said he expected both would be confirmed. The Banking Committee will consider these appointments next Tuesday.

The nominations were for the most part postmasters, but the Industry Fights Move to Relax Price Control

Consumers Group Backs NRA at Hearing on Code Terms.

By Felix Bruner.

The gap between industry and the NRA on the subject of price control widened yesterday as business men, representing almost every kind of industry, pleaded for some form of price regulation, in opposition to NRA's announced intention to relax price provisions in codes.

At the same time the consumers division of the National Emergency Council condemned price fixing. As the price control hearings before the National Industrial Recovery Board continued, it was becoming more and more obvious that if the board carries out its intention to relax price control provisions, it will be doing so in the face of business opposition.

Six Objections Listed.

The consumers division of the Emergency Council supported the Recovery Board by giving the following six objections against price control:

1. In codes providing for price fixing there are numerous violations, sufficient in many instances to defeat entirely the purpose of the provision.

2. Price fixing is more widespread than specific code provisions authorize.

3. High prices for particular commodities have discouraged consumption or have diverted buyers to an alternative and perhaps inferior method of satisfying wants.

4. The consumers' option of refusal to buy when prices are not right is not an adequate protection and, when exercised, it defeats the purpose of the act to get consumers to buy more goods.

5. Price fixing does not permit the results of efficient management to be passed on to consumers in the form of lower prices.

6. In many cases of threatened or actual destructive competition, price fixing has not proved to be a desirable, effective or practical solution.

Unfair Prices Charged.

Dexter M. Keezer, of the NRA Consumers Advisory Board, joined in this opposition to price fixing. He declared that code provisions fixing minimum prices frequently result in prices so high as to be unfair to the consumer. He added that code provisions for the dissemination of information about prices have been perverted to use as tools for arbitrary price fixing. He pointed out also that price fixing has created "price bootleggers" and that administration has become "hopelessly complicated."

Following similar lines, Louis H. Bean, Farm Administration adviser, told the recovery board that an increase in national income depends on the effectiveness of NRA in increasing volume and to lower production costs to permit increased consumption. He advocated intercode authorities that can make such provisions as to bring about increased consumption.

Opposed to these opinions of governmental agencies was the opinion of industry itself, still insisting that price control is necessary.

Defending the "efforts of the codes under NRA to prevent price demoralization," George A. Sloan, chairman of the cotton textile code authority, said:

"Until it is shown that industry is earning a return which does more than merely replace impaired working capital, make possible the restoration of credit, replacements and improvements on a reasonable scale, pay interest charges and some small return in the form of dividends, it is idle to class these activities of NRA as producing the evils of monopoly."

Questioned by Hillman.

Sloan defended open price filing and sales below cost provisions. He declared that these latter provisions are used as "shields against the forcing down of prices below fair competition levels through the derangement of the competitive system at such times as these."

Sloan, at the conclusion of his talk, was asked a long series of questions by Sidney Hillman, a member of the Recovery Board. Hillman asked him if it was necessary that the Government "guarantee a profit to industry." Sloan replied that "if it isn't required that one of the prime purposes of the NRA is to restore profits to industry, then we might as well go home."

Blackwell Smith, acting NRA counsel, asked Sloan what he thought the proper limits of Government price control.

"I think the Government," Sloan replied, "is justified in fixing a boundary below which there should be no competition."

David T. Mason, executive officer of the Lumber Code Authority, declared that price control had been highly beneficial to the lumber industry.

William A. Hager, president of the Pennsylvania Retail Drygoods Association, defended price-control provisions.

"Surely," he said, "the code should define some limit of protection against the self-destruction of retailers by cut-throat competition."

C. Claflin Young, chairman of the National Retail Solid Fuel Code Authority, said his organization feels that the code's provisions for establishing lowest reasonable costs, to be included in retail prices, should be retained.

Women Voters Opposed.

The next speaker, Mrs. Harris T. Baldwin, vice president of the League of Women Voters, joined other consumer groups in opposition to price fixing. She declared that "only as prices are kept down to a level which corresponds to consumer purchasing power can this country have genuine and lasting recovery."

The line of demarcation between consumers' organizations and business became more definite as the hearing continued. The NRA was in the position of wishing to relax Government control, while business was in the position of insisting that at least price control should continue.

The NRA board has announced a policy of reducing price-fixing provisions. It hopes, out of present hearings, to obtain sufficient information to make this policy active and to rewrite at least some of the 300 codes containing price provisions to make these provisions less stringent. The hearings thus far have indicated that busines does not want to be deprived of governmental supervision of price control.

Between You and Me

Iconoclastic Cummings; New Trick Foils Patronage; Huey And The Radio.

—By Raymond Clapper

ALTHOUGH the gold case is the first one that Attorney General Cummings has argued personally before the United States Supreme Court, he has shown himself to be at complete ease in the august presence.

All attorneys in the case are conscious of the historic importance of the event. Their chests are well out in front, though there is no special reason why they should be, because some of the legal experts on the sidelines say there has been a good deal of wandering at the bar and that it's a good bet the court will have to disregard the briefs and do its own digging before it reaches a decision. That's what it has had to do in some other important cases like the Minnesota mortgage moratorium.

Gen. Cummings, as the chief barrister for the Government, sits in state flanked by his staff, including the Assistant Solicitor General, Angus MacLean, who in some court quarters is known as "Anguish" MacLean.

The technical questions asked by the court are usually referred to the assistants, Gen. Cummings concentrating on putting the punch into the argument.

Once, questioning the reliability of certain statistics which had been offered, he put it in quite frank language.

"Those figures," the tall, slow-speaking Attorney General said, "are the illegitimate child of a mathematical debauch."

* * * *

Just a few days before Attorney General Cummings made legal history by asking the Court of Appeals to set aside the conviction of two former university students who had been convicted on a charge of setting fire to a fraternity house. Attorney General Cummings intervened after the United States Attorney's office had filed a brief in support of the convictions. Cummings said that his own personal investigation of the case convinced him that the Government had convicted the men on flimsy evidence and that he was convinced of their innocence. Cummings once took similar action in Connecticut. As State's attorney he had convicted a man and later, believing him innocent, interceded for his release.

Cummings also made social history in Washington last spring when he and Mrs. Cummings sent out invitations in honor of their fifth wedding anniversary "to celebrate the triumphant success of their five-year plan."

Except for the sudden death of the late Thomas J. Walsh, of Montana, Cummings might have been in comparative obscurity as governor general of the Philippines. He already had been appointed to that job and when Senator Walsh, who had been selected for Attorney General in the new Roosevelt Cabinet, died suddenly on his way to Washington for the inauguration, Cummings was drafted to fill in. Before he knew what had happened to him he was sitting in with President Roosevelt helping draft the bank holiday proclamation, the emergency bank act. Out of such accidents are eminent careers born.

* * * *

Bitter complaint is heard in some quarters on Capitol Hill over a trick which one executive official is said to be using to thwart patronage hunters.

When a Representative sends a constituent to this official and demands a job for him, the applicant is told that he will get the first vacancy but that none is expected for a few weeks and he might as well go back home and save expenses while waiting.

After the applicant is safely baek home, the executive telephones the Representative and says his man can go to work if he will show up the next morning. The Representative, of course, is unable to produce his man in time to get the job.

* * * *

If sleepy telephone operators around the country had a sudden spurt of calls late the other night, they can blame Senator Long for it. In his broadcasting, as in everything else, Senator Long is the Kingfish. When he went on the NBC network at 11:30 p. m. he told his listeners that he would not say anything important for the first few moments so that they could go to their telephones and call up friends and ask them to listen in.

Although it is a broadcasting rule that speakers prepare their manuscripts in advance, Senator Long is not held to it.

"Why is that?" one broadcasting director was asked.

"He's the Kingfish," was the reply.

Senator Long asked for the time. He is apparently becoming strongly radio conscious, and as he begins his campaign of attack on President Roosevelt, the question is being asked whether Senator Long is taking a leaf out of Father Coughlin's book and is beginning a national radio build-up.

In his last Louisiana campaign Long encountered difficulty in obtaining as much time on the air as he wanted and his Legislature recently authorized the State to acquire a station. A studio probably will be set up on the campus of Louisiana State University.

One of the most potent threats at the Administration just now is the possibility that Senator Long may build up a national radio following comparable with that of Father Coughlin. With two such spectacular left-wingers at work, the problem of keeping public sentiment patient while the Administration continues its efforts at recovery would become more difficult. Ultra conservative opposition has ceased to be a serious problem for the Administration. The main worry now is the thunder on the left.

The New York Life Insurance Co. has found out what to do with former Presidents of the United States. It puts them on its board of directors where in a dignified way they act as prestige builders and insure considerable newspaper publicity. In press agenting they're the top. Herbert Hoover has just been elected a director. That's the same job Calvin Coolidge held after he left the White House.

Mr. Coolidge, as in all things, was faithful in attending directors' meetings. That is how he happened to find out about Queen Elizabeth's corsets. A fellow director told him about it one day at a directors' meeting. This director, a Mr. Plimpton, had heard that the historic queenly harness was to be auctioned off at London. He cabled his agent to bid for them. But the rival agent of a Mr. Folger was the successful bidder. The relics went into the Folger Shakespearean collection and eventually came to Washington, where they are packed away in the Folger Library back of the Capitol. Mr. Coolidge always regretted that he could not visit this library and inspect the great collection. Ordinary visitors, however, are not permitted to see Queen Elizabeth's corsets.

Pair Leave Prison Facing Career Won By Study in Cells

Columbus, Ohio, Jan. 10 (AP).—Two brothers, who refused to abandon hope when they were sentenced to life imprisonment for murder 10 years ago, walked out of Ohio Penitentiary today—free men.

Their sentences commuted by order of Gov. George White, they took with them more than the customary new suit of clothes and $10 given every departing prisoner.

Daniel W. Boggs, 30, had a flourishing mail order advertising business, which he built up from his cell. He hoped to continue it on a larger scale.

John H. Boggs, 33, had degrees of bachelor of laws, aeronautical engineer and radiological technician, earned through correspondence school studies. He may take the State bar examination.

"We're going home to mother (in Jackson, Ohio)," the brothers said. "She waited a long, long time."

The advertising business, which earned Dan Boggs as high as $132 a month, paid off the mortgage on his mother's home. It also financed the education of two sisters. It had given him a bank account which made the State's $10 gift seem puny.

Propeller Is Fouled, Ship Sends S O S Call

Bordeaux, France, Jan. 10 (U.P.).—The steamer Meknes, en route to Casablanca from Bordeaux with 100 passengers, sent out an S O S call tonight. The ship, enveloped in fog, attempted to drop anchor. The chains caught in her propellers and she reported herself drifting helplessly about 50 miles out of Bordeaux.

Tugs were rushed to her aid.

'City Editor' Walker Goes to Daily Mirror

New York, Jan. 10 (AP).—Stanley Walker, for several years city editor of the New York Herald Tribune, today became managing editor of the New York Daily Mirror, it was announced at the Mirror offices.

Walker was with the Herald Tribune for 15 years. He has contributed frequent articles to the magazines and last year published a book on newspaper men and methods called "City Editor."

Liberty League Paid $104,830 By Supporters

$95,062 Expended; Aims of Group 'Political,' Shouse Says.

(Associated Press.)

The American Liberty League, acknowledging its objectives as "political," reported to the House yesterday that it had received $104,830 in contributions and expended $95,062 so far in its efforts to "preserve" the Constitution.

The du Ponts, of Delaware, were the largest contributors, giving $15,100 to the league and its Delaware branch.

No contributions were listed from Alfred E. Smith and John W. Davis, former Democratic presidential nominees, who were among the founders, or from John J. Raskob, former chairman of the Democratic national committee, who is a member of the league's advisory council.

Among the contributors, listed for $100, was Renee W. Baruch, daughter of Bernard M. Baruch, New York financier and a close and frequent advisor of President Roosevelt.

Numerical Force Unknown.

How many have joined the league, regarded as extremely conservative, and critical of some phases of the New Deal, never has been told.

Although asserting the league had not taken any part in the 1934 congressional campaign and had no intention "of placing its own candidates in the field for any public office," Jouett Shouse, president, said, any organization which sought to influnece legislative action was political.

Quickly he added the league was in no way partisan.

"It believes in the two-party system," Shouse said. "It is not for one party against the other. It reserves the right to appeal to both parties to indorse its principles and it will endeavor to persuade elected officers of Government to adhere to those principles."

Shouse Receives $12,000.

The report showed that Shouse had received $12,000 in salaries and $6,000 in travel allowance and expenses from August 15 to December 31. It also disclosed contributions of $9,000 to the Crusaders, an organization formed to work for repeal of prohibition, some of whose officers have been critical of the Roosevelt Administration. Queries at league headquarters brought no explanation of the contribution.

Eighty-three persons contributed to the league, exclusive of the Delaware branch. Among them were Archibald M. L. du Pont, $2,500; Irenee du Pont, $5,000, and Lammot du Pont, $5,000.

The du Ponts who gave to the Delaware branch were Irenee, $1,000; Ernest, $500; Eugene, $100; Eugene E. du Pont, $500, and Mrs. Pierre S. du Pont, $500.

Other contributors to the national organization included:

Sewell L. Avery, of Chicago, corporation official, $5,000; W. L. Clayton, Houston cotton man, $1,000; W. S. Carpenter, jr., Wilmington, Del., $2,500; Robert Sterling Clark, New York, $4,900; S. B. Colgate, Orange, N. J., $5,000; S. T. Crapo, Detroit, $1,000; S. H. Curlee, St. Louis, $1,000; H. B. Earhart, Detroit, estate manager, $4,000; Edward F. Hutton, New York, $5,000; George M. Moffett, New York, $5,000; Rufus L. Patterson, New York, $5,000; A. Hamilton Rice, New York, $2,000; Hal E. Roach, movie producer, $2,500.

fund, derived from the gas taxes, devoted to road construction and maintenance. Any savings in road expenditures would produce a surplus in the special fund. It would not reduce the deficit, which is expected in the general funds.

If the remainder is spent in fairly equal installments through the year, it means that the general cost of the government per month is about $830,000. If one-fourth of this amount can be saved from now until the end of the fiscal year on September 30, it will reduce the deficit by about $1,800,000, to $429,000.

However, it is pointed out, payments may vary seasonably. Expenditures for schools will be negligible through the summer months. Also, various agencies may have made contracts for certain materials which will have to be accepted at the contract price. For this reason, even the chief financial officers of the State were loath to make an estimate of the saving which might be expected.

$150,000 Gem Thefts Are Traced to Gibson

Chicago, Jan. 10 (AP).—Russell Gibson—lying dead in the Cook County Morgue—was identified today as the leader of a gang that snatched $150,000 in jewels in recent months.

A coroner's jury commended Federal agents for slaying Gibson during the siege of his hideout Tuesday midnight, but suggested they use more caution in the future lest the lives of innocent persons be jeopardized.

Judge Finds Ham Is Denied Him Due To Processing Tax

Processing taxes have reacted—gastronomically—on the Supreme Court, the Associated Press says.

Representative Treadway, of Massachusetts, attacking this tax feature in the House, recounted:

"In my own district a small packing concern was forced to discontinue operations because it could not pay the processing tax.

"A justice of the United States Supreme Court who preferred some of the products of this small concern was quite disappointed when he ordered a ham and was advised that the company had been forced to close its doors."

5 House Places Contested; Use Of Cash Charge

LaGuardia May Be Called in Battle for New York Seat.

(Associated Press.)

Use of "whisky money" and relief funds to buy votes, nonpayment of saloon chits, tampering with voting machines and causing "physical discomfort" to voters are among charges filed in congressional election contests in the House.

Notice that election of five Representatives and the Republican Hawaiian delegate will be contested has been served on House Clerk South Trimble. If the contestants push their claims to the seats, the issues probably will have to be settled by the House after election committees investigate.

The legal talent of the chief of Tammany Hall, John J. Dooling, has been employed by defeated Democratic Representative James J. Lanzetta to contest the election of Vito Marcantonio, Republican, from the Twentieth District in the heart of the wigwam area in New York City.

Lanzetta, backed by Tammany, barely defeated fiery Fiorella H. La Guardia, Republican Independent in 1932. La Guardia, long a House member, started to contest the election but ran for mayor on a fusion ticket instead and won.

Now comes Dooling with charges that "aid and assistance of officials of New York" helped bring about Marcantonio's election. The new congressman is going to have a right to answer some two-score charges and La Guardia may be called before a committee to say what part, if any, he played in the campaign.

Some brief and some voluminous charges of many descriptions were filed in the other contests. They are: Wade Kitchen versus Representative Tillman B. Parks, Democrat of the Seventh Arkansas District; George J. Knapp versus Representative John A. Martin, Democrat of the Third Colorado District; Locke Miller against Representative John G. Cooper, Republican of the Nineteenth Ohio; Benjamin B. Goodman versus Representative Christopher D. Sullivan, Tammanyite of the Thirteenth New York, and former Hawaiian Delegate L. L. McCandless, Democrat, against Samuel W. King, Republican.

Grange Attacks Hull Reciprocal Trade Project

Farm Organization's Criticism Recalls Objections by Roosevelt Adviser.

A veiled attack from an unexpected quarter was launched yesterday on Secretary of State Cordell Hull's reciprocal trade agreement program when the National Grange, a farm organization, broadcast a statement warning of "dangers" in the plan.

The statement was distributed by Fred Brenckman, Washington representative of the National Grange, and immediately caused conjecture as to the reason for it. There has been no developments announced in the reciprocal trade agreement field in several weeks.

It was recalled that George N. Peek, special foreign trade adviser to the President, who has been critical of the Hull program, for many years has been closely allied with the Nation-wide farm organizations. There was no evidence that Mr. Peek had any hand in the grange statement, but the letter in effect espoused some of the same criticisms made by Mr. Peek.

Peek Cotton Plan Hit.

For instance, the foreign trade adviser has several times contended to the negotiators of the reciprocal agreements that they were not demanding sufficient concessions for the United States and this same contention was projected in the grange statement.

Some weeks ago Mr. Peek sponsored a cotton barter agreement with Germany to which the State Department's trade experts made serious objection. The proposed agreement was finally sent to President Roosevelt. Apparently there the matter has rested since, but it was learned on unimpeachable authority that the President returned the plan with instructions that Mr. Peek undertake to amend it to meet State Department objections.

The grange statement warned that "we must have proper protection from low-priced foreign labor or American producers will speedily be deprived of their own markets by a flood of imports from abroad."

Damage to U. S. Seen.

"American agriculture is eager to find an outlet for its surpluses abroad," the statement continued, "but if foreign markets can be obtained only by throwing our own workers out of their jobs and disrupting the domestic economic balance through destruction of purchasing power, we have made no gain, but instead suffered a serious net loss."

Urging that the prospect of giving countries with agricultural surpluses tariff concessions on industrial products in the hope the American farmer will benefit "should be examined with the utmost care to make certain that we are not sacrificing a portion of the farmer's home market in exchange for very dubious advantages abroad." The grange singled out 'prospective agreements with Switzerland and the Netherlands for special criticism.

Both these countries, it was contended, produce large quantities of foodstuffs. Citing Switzerland as an example, the grange pointed out that watch manufacturers in that country wish a greater share of the American market, which it was held could be given only to the detriment of American watch makers, with a pay roll of $65,000,000 in the last six years.

A large percentage of this pay roll has gone for the purchase of farm products, it was asserted, and any agreement reducing that pay roll would have a direct effect on the farm population of several States.

House May Ask Survey of U.S. Tin Resources

Study Proposed as War Precaution in Lieu of Big Purchases.

(Associated Press.)

While Senate members assailed war, members of a House committee yesterday decided against the storage of a huge tin supply for fear the action might be interpreted as a belligerent move.

The House Foreign Affairs Committee was told that this country apparently had very little tin, a necessity in case of conflict. Bernard Baruch, among others, recommended a supply be accumulated. But present world conditions caused the committee to lay his suggestion aside.

Instead, a survey of American tin resources with an eye to their development probably will be suggested.

Senate condemnation of war arose during discussion by Senators Clark (Democrat), of Missouri, and Pope (Democrat), of Idaho, of the proposal to make $100,000 available for further inquiry into the munitions industry.

Assails Armament Race.

Urging that the Senate committee investigation go on, Clark, one of the founders of the American Legion, said if the "present insane competition" in armaments continued it would inevitably lead to "another cataclysm of unpredictable horrors." He asserted it "might well mean the actual obliteration of our civilization" through planes dropping "mass cultures of plague influenza, cholera and typhoid."

Pope followed him with a declaration that despite all their protestations for peace "the nations of the world seem to be in the grip of some monster that is driving them to destruction." The Idaho Senator said the United States had played a "sorry role" in blocking efforts to control the arms traffic.

The House committee has concluded a six-months study as to where tin may be obtained. It now is preparing a report and recommendations to be submitted to the House.

Baruch Urges Tin Storage.

In secret session, the committee heard Army and Navy experts tell of the importance of tin in the manufacture of everything from canteens to battleships. They heard Baruch, New York financier, testify that Great Britain seemed to control the world tin supply and that the United States should buy a stock of thousands of tons.

A member of the House committee, who did not wish to be quoted, said that in lieu of adopting Baruch's suggestion, the committee "probably will recommend a sufficient appropriation for the United States to survey and determine tin resources within its own borders."

"If our committee—the Committee on Foreign Affairs—went out and urged the purchase of a huge tin supply," he added, "the rest of the world immediately would say we expect a war. We don't, and we don't want one."

Most of the world's tin comes from French Indo-China, the Malay Peninsula, Burma, Australia, South Africa, the Belgian Congo, Nigeria, Portugal, Spain, Bolivia and the Islands between Sumatra and Borneo. A little is produced in Mexico.

But not a single tin mine is in operation in the United States. The committee was told that tin deposits existed in this country which might be developed.

$70,000 Theft Laid To Cashier of Bank

000 of its funds on deposit in the Herndon National. This is protected by Government bonds, county officials said.

The bank was opened for business 25 years ago tomorrow. It was capitalized for $25,000, and last October listed its deposits at $315,347.

As this little city idled today, financially paralyzed for the time by the bank's closing, there seemed to be a single topic of conversation.

"How did it happen? Who is responsible? It is a fine thing the Government will make things good, isn't it?"

These remarks and questions were typical on Herndon's streets.

Even children in school talked of the bank's closing, and wondered why.

Charge accounts were pressed into service. The bank serves a rich farming and dairy area of about 25 square miles.

The stock in the Herndon is closely held, as there are few stockholders. Under banking laws, stockholders are liable to the extent of their holdings and it was said that there will be little if any loss to the depositors.

Dorchester to Have January Jury Term

Cambridge, Md., Jan. 10 (AP).—For the first time in years a jury term will be held at the January session of the Dorchester County Circuit Court. Formerly there have been two jury terms, April and November, and two nonjury terms, January and July. Because a number of persons are held in the county jail on serious charges, Judge Insley has directed members of the grand jury to present themselves next Monday, and the members of the petit jury to be present January 21.

Ohio Group to Fulfill Pledge, Honor Byrns

Carrying out a decision made last summer, a group of men from Lorain County, Ohio, tonight will entertain Speaker of the House Joseph W. Byrns at a dinner at the Shoreham Hotel. The men are constituents of Representative Dow W. Harter, of Ohio.

Last summer Speaker Bryns visited Lorain County. As a result of this visit, voters in the county resolved to be the first to entertain the Speaker if he were elected. Senators Robert J. Bulkley and Vic Donahey, both of Ohio, are expected to attend the dinner tonight.

shed than this State has ever seen. We ask no quarter and we will give none."

On January 6 the association made formal demand of Gov. Allen and the Louisiana Legislature to repeal the dictatorial laws "within ten days."

Hundreds of persons from every parish in the State attended the rally and pledged their support to the movement.

The Square Dealers fixed midnight of January 16 as "zero hour" for the Governor to assemble the Legislature to repeal laws passed by the recent special session which they consider dictatorial legislation.

"If the Legislature is not called within the time set," Bourgeois told his followers, "come to Baton Rouge en masse; come until you can't get into the limits and we will see if there remains a legislator who can not be made to do the right thing.

"We are not assassins," he continued. "There isn't one here who wants the blood of any man, not even that of Huey Long, but we have demanded action and we expect to get it."

Officers of the association tonight were awaiting a reply from a message wired to President Roosevelt "apologizing" for "Long's cheap conduct and remarks."

Chilean Steamer Goes Aground Off Carolina

New York, Jan. 10 (U.P.).—The 5,020-ton Chilean steamer Chilbar was reported aground on Frying Pan Shoals, off North Carolina, by the Coast Guard tonight. Coast Guard vessel Travis was proceeding to aid the Chilbar, said to be in no immediate danger.

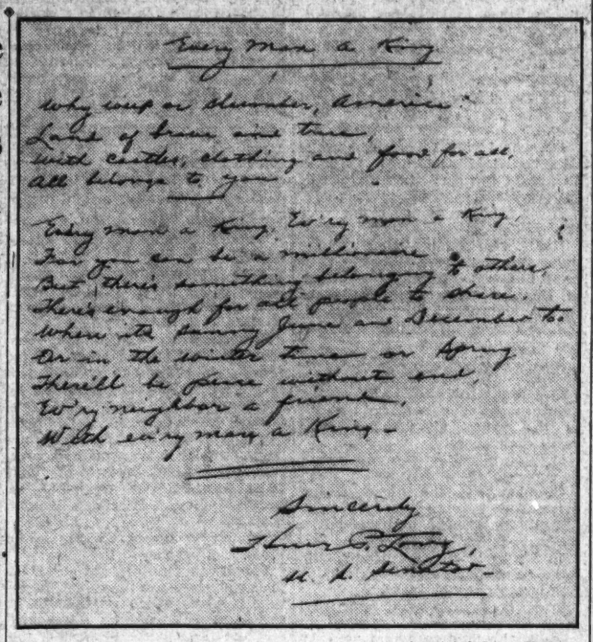
The Chilbar is owned by the Chile Steamship Co., of New York. It carries a crew of 35.

Money in Circulation Equals $43 Per Person

The Treasury yesterday reported that money in circulation on December 31 amounted to $5,535,713,269, which was equivalent to $43.66 for each person of the estimated 126,791,000 population in the continental United States, the Associated Press said.

The figures revealed a decrease of $12,820,668 for the month.

Ordinarily a decrease is interpreted as a hopeful business sign.



Every Man a King

Why weep or slumber, America?
Land of brave and true,
With cattles, clothing and food for all,
All belongs to you.

Every man a King. Every man a King.
For you can be a millionaire
But there's something belonging to others,
There's enough for all people to share.
When with penny, June and December to
Or in the winter time or Spring
There'll be plenty without end,
For my neighbor a friend,
With so many a King—

Ace Pilots Thrill Throngs as Miami Air Races Begin

Miami, Fla., Jan. 10 (AP).—Aces of the air zoomed over the municipal airport here today in the opening events of Miami's seventh annual all-American air races.

Every branch of aviation was represented, with nearly 200 Army, Navy, National Guard and commercial ships here from all parts of the country to participate in three days of events.

From the very first take-off, when five planes cleared in the dead stick landing contest, until the closing tactical flying demonstration by an Army pursuit squadron, the show was a thrilling spectacle.

While the events drew crack airmen of the Nation's military forces and those of civilian aviation, many aeronautical officials of other countries were here to witness the races.

The first day's program consisted chiefly of demonstration flying by the military units. Three speed events were run and contests in bomb dropping and dead stick landing added to the thrills of the more than 7,000 spectators.

Ickes Skeptical Of Connally's 'Hot-Oil' Curb

Does Not Believe Proposed Amendment to Recovery Act Is Adequate.

Secretary Ickes yesterday indicated he did not believe the amendment introduced by Senator Tom Connally (Democrat), Texas, to prevent interstate shipment of "hot oil" goes far enough.

The Connally amendment to the National Industrial Recovery Act would prohibit transportation in interstate commerce of petroleum produced over and above quotas fixed by States. It is designed to supplement the section of the recovery act declared unconstitutional by the Supreme Court.

Ickes, however, declined to comment on the extent of Government regulation he believes necessary. He said he preferred to wait for the report of the Cole sub-committee of the House Interstate Commerce Committee, which has been investigating oil regulation, before making his ideas known.

Interprets Texas Course.

Ickes said he was not surprised that the ruling of the Supreme Court did not result in active resumption of oil production in Texas above State quotas.

"I think the Texas oil people," he said, "would be willing to forego profits from 'hot oil' until Congress adjourns, in the hope that they will not get any new Federal legislation. I think the Texas railroad commission is making a sincere effort to keep 'hot oil' under control, but I think the problem is too big a contract for control by any State. They might be able to control it temporarily, but not permanently."

Benefits of Regulation.

There is more setniment, Ickes believes, for oil legislation than there ever has been before. He said that the Government has shown that oil regulation has been beneficial to the producing companies.

"I think there is still a possibility of controlling oil production without declaring it a public utility," Ickes said, "but we must have the sincere cooperation of the States and the oil industry."

Ernest O. Thompson, member of the Texas railroad commission, told the Associated Press that he believed the commission would recommend to the Texas Legislature that "hot oil" in storage in that State be impounded and sold at auction for the benefit of the school fund. He said between two and three million barrels of "hot oil" are in storage in Texas.

Only $1,500 Given Wallace for Car; 4 to Get Nothing

If Secretary Wallace doesn't appear at many social gatherings next year it may be because his automobile doesn't measure up to those of other Cabinet members, the Associated Press says.

The new budget allots him only $1,500 for the purchase of a new official automobile, while Secretary Hull is to receive a machine costing not more than $4,000.

Secretaries Roper and Cummings are to get new $3,500 cars, but Secretary Dern's will cost only $2,500.

However, Secretaries Farley, Ickes, Morgenthau, and Swanson will be forced to make the old car do another year—they get nothing.

Jailed for Nonsupport.

Los Angeles, Jan. 10 (AP).—Cited by his divorced wife for alleged failure to pay support money, Layne Fitts, brother of District Attorney Buron Fitts, today was sent to jail for three days for contempt.

New Member Is Given House District Unit

McGehee Succeeds Harlan in a Reshifting of Assignments.

The House District Committee yesterday got an unexpected new member in a reshifting of assignments at the Democratic caucus, bringing to six the new membership, with the names or number of Republicans still uncertain.

Representative Byron B. Harlan, of Ohio, was taken off the District Committee in order to accept a preferred assignment on the Rules Committee, and Representative Dan R. McGehee, of Mississippi, was named to fill the vacancy. The other five new members, previously announced by the Ways and Means Committee, were approved.

McGehee, a new member in Congress, is a banker and a planter, being president of the Bank of Franklin, Miss. He also holds a law degree and has practiced. His election to Congress came after a political career in the Mississippi State Legislature.

Harlan, who leaves the committee, playing a lone hand last year, piloted the lengthy District insurance code through the House toward the close of the session.

Representative Howard W. Smith (Democrat), Virginia, yesterday reintroduced two bills designed to permit policemen and firemen to live in metropolitan Washington rather than be limited by District boundaries.

The bill governing the firemen also would grant them sick leave of 30 days, with a provision that an additional 30 days might be granted where illness or an injury is incurred in line of duty. Leave of absence over 20 days would be without pay.

Representative Thomas Sanders McMillan (Democrat), South Carolina, introduced a bill to set up a monument to the memory of Robert Mills, South Carolina architect who designed the Washington Monument, the Treasury Building and other structures.

Jafsie Corrects Confused Story of Kidnap Notes

Condon Routs Reilly in Battle Over Symbols

Clears Up Confusion in Regard to Reading of Colonel's Mail.

fore something happened?—A. Something did happen.

Q. Did you see anyone around there?—A. I saw in this southerly direction—I saw an auto and it seemed someone was in it.

Saw Another Car.

Reilly asked how many persons he noticed in the car.

"I saw only one," said Jafsie, adding the man in the car had his head out of the window.

Jafsie also related "there was another automobile with a canvas cover, a country automobile, I would say," which was parked nearby.

Q. Did you take their license numbers?—A. No, sir.

Q. I thought you were investigating carefully?—A. The automobile didn't affect me at all. I was there to get the letter and I got it.

Jafsie said that he did not cross the street at that time but got into the automobile.

Q. The top of that cemetery wall is not very safe, is it?—A. No, it's plenty dangerous. There are spikes sticking out of the top.

Reilly asked if the venerable doctor had seen guards about the cemetery.

"Yes, I saw one near 233d street inside the gate," he said.

Q. At that time?—A. A little later.

Q. Where was the guard when this man was coming up over the fence?—A. About 30 feet away, near a tree.

Q. There was nothing between this guard and the man climbing?—A. There was; there were some bushes, which have since been removed.

Q. Did the guard give any alarm?—A. No alarm.

Heard a Noise.

"While talking to him (John) I heard a noise," Dr. Condon said.

Q. Did you see the guard?—A. Yes.

Q. Describe him.—A. He was real—of German extraction, I mean, rather stout, I would call him a heavyweight.

Q. It's rather unusual, is it not, for a man to be climbing out of the cemetery at night?—A. I don't think so.

Q. Did you ever climb out of a graveyard at night, doctor?—A. I've never been in one at night.

Reilly returned to the man who scaled the cemetery fence and fled toward Van Cortlandt Park.

Q. Did he run fast?—A. Yes. I would call it the step of a distance runner.

Q. How far did the man run before you caught up with him?—A. Almost 100 yards.

Q. You caught hold of him?—A. Yes, I took him by the left arm and escorted him back to a shack.

Q. Where was Al Reich then?—A. In the car.

Q. And I believe you said that as you were sitting there you heard a cough?—A. Yes.

Q. A hard cough?—A. No.

Q. A soft cough?—A. No.

Q. Did the cough appear to come from his lungs?—A. Yes, sir, that's it.

Q. And you suggested that he take something for the cough?—A. No, I said I'd go to a drug store and get him some medicine.

Q. You'd go to the drug store and get medicine while he waited for you?—A. No, he would have gone along. We didn't go, however.

Q. What would you get for his cough?

Dr. Condon mentioned several remedies which he employed in training athletes.

Q. How long were you sitting there?—A. About an hour and ten minutes.

Q. And he coughed only once?—A. Yes, once.

Describes John's Collar.

Reilly then directed Jafsie to demonstrate how John had his coat collar up to his chin, and the doctor obligingly showed the jury how John hunched down with his coat collar turned up.

Q. Will this hat fit you?—A. I wouldn't put it on, but I can tell you (looking at the hatband).

Q. Have you a soft hat with you today?—A. Ha, I wear a derby.

A slight titter broke the attentive quiet of the spectators.

Reilly turned the questioning back to John.

Q. How many times did he say he was a Scandinavian?—A. Once.

Q. Did you ever say the man you talked to had a scar on his face?—A. No, I did not see a scar.

Q. Who left first?—A. I did.

Q. Do you know what this is?—A. Yes, that is the envelope—the package—in which the sleeping suit was mailed to me.

Q. Who actually received it?—A. I did.

Q. Where did it come from?—A. In the mail.

Q. Is that the first communication you received?—A. Where.

Q. In the mail?—A. You mean in my life. No sir. Not the first.

Q. Two notes came in the package?—A. The two notes were wrapped inside the sleeping suit.

Read Both Notes.

Q. What did you do with the notes?—A. I took them out of the sleeping suit and read them. One was addressed to Col. Lindbergh and one to me. I sent for Col. Lindbergh to come up and see if the article I received was his baby's sleeping suit.

Justice Trenchard took a hand. He asked the doctor to place the date the sleeping suit was received. Jafsie said he placed the date on or about March 17 (St. Patrick's Day) "because that's a great day in my life."

He described the receipt of the suit.

"When you opened the package containing the sleeping suit, you discovered a letter or two," asked the Court.

"Two, yes two."

Reilly returned to the attack.

Q. Ever buy one of these sleeping suits, doctor?—A. Never. Didn't need them.

Q. Never bought any?—A. No.

Q. When your children were growing up, did you buy any of these?—A. That's the woman's part of the household.

Q. Was the sleeping suit wrapped with any special kind of cord?—A. I don't remember.

Condon told the defense counsel that he had surrendered all his ransom evidence: The notes, the letters, the sleeping suit, "everything" to the police.

Reilly produced another letter dated March 19.

Condon examined it carefully for several minutes and said:

"Yes sir, I received that letter."

He said that on the day he received the letter, he had consulted with Col. Breckinridge.

Reilly then brought out still another of the State's ransom documents, postmarked April 1.

Q. Did you acquaint Col. Lindbergh of the contents of the note?—A. No.

Q. No.—A. No. I asked Col. Breckinridge to help in this matter.

Breckinridge was staying at the Condon home, Jafsie volunteered.

Told to Have Cash Ready.

The note directed Jafsie to have the ransom money ready for payment the following night, April 2.

Q. Then on Saturday the money came to you?—A. Yes on April 2.

Q. How many people in your group knew it?—A. What do you mean by group?

Q. You, Col. Lindbergh, Col. Breckinridge——?—A. The three of us. The three of us knew it.

Q. Al Reich didn't know it?—A. You'll have to ask him about that. I didn't tell him. I don't tell my business to anyone.

Q. Who made the box (in which the money was placed)?—A. I planned the making of the box.

Q. Didn't those who wrote the ransom notes suggest the box?—A. Yes.

Q. Then they planned it?—A. They suggested it.

"Who made the box?" Reilly repeated.

"Jafsie," heretofore never at a loss for an answer, fumbled.

Reilly almost leaped at him.

Q. Who made the box?—A. I can't remember the name. A woodworker on Webster avenue. Near 190th street. I'd recall his name if it were mentioned.

"You had a box made," shouted Reilly, "and you don't know who made it?

Wilentz objected.

"Don't shout, don't shout," said Jafsie. "I can hear. I'm not deaf. I can hear every syllable you utter if you use your lips, don't shout."

Reilly wanted to know who instructed him to have the box built.

Q. Who were the orders from, from the chief?—A. No. Col. Lindbergh and Col. Breckinridge.

Reilly took up the story of Col. Lindbergh's futile airplane trip to Gay Head in search for the "boad Nellie" on which the kidnap note said the baby was held.

Difference in English.

"You and I have a great difference in English, haven't we?" Reilly demanded testily when Jafsie told him a question wasn't good English.

"No, it's the way you use it," said Jafsie.

A question about how good the visibility was for the plane flight caused the little interchange.

Condon requested, "Will you please speak better English?"

Reilly snapped back: "Do you want me to talk baby talk? I can't talk baby talk, doctor."

Bit by bit Reilly led Jafsie through a detailed description of the search of the waters near Gay Head, Cuttyhunk and Woods Hole, Mass.

The plane landed at Hicksville at about 6:30 p. m. that day, Sunday, April 3, Jafsie said.

Q. Did you ever go out on a plane after that in connection with this case?—A. No.

Q. There were some insertions of advertisements after that?—A. Oh yes.

Q. You never received any ransom notes after that, the payment of the ransom.—A. No, not with the signature.

Jafsie said he had received "lots" of notes after that, but none with the signature carried by all the 14 "ransom" notes.

Reilly turned his probing to Condon's little shack on City Island.

Q. Was there any conference at your shack at City Island subsequently?—A. No.

Q. Did you visit City Island?—A. When?

Q. On April 10.—A. I can't recall.

Q. You went to City Island on week-ends?—A. Yes, sir, I did.

Q. With whom did you talk on City Island?—A. With my neighbors . . . People I have known 35 years.

Q. Did you ever tell your neighbors on City Island that you believed the baby was kidnaped by a gang?—A. I can't recall now.

Q. Did you tell anybody you were the "Jafsie" of the ad?—A. Yes, everybody.

Q. And you told all your neighbors you were "Jafsie."—A. All I met.

Q. What were the names of the neighbors you told?—A. I can't remember—you give me the names and I'll tell you if I told them or not.

Reilly had him name some of his neighbors on City Island, ticking them off on his finger tips.

Q. In your conversations with these people, did you tell them you were Jafsie?—A. Yes.

Q. You've been talking about this case ever since to anyone who would talk to you?—A. Yes.

Q. Do you remember everything you ever said?—A. No. I don't think it's possible.

Didn't Record Talks.

Q. You never made any record of your conversations with reference to the case?—A. No.

Q. And now you are depending on your memory in 1935 for something that happened in 1932?

Q. Did you ever say a woman took part in the kidnaping?—A. No.

Reilly read three typewritten pages to himself. It was the first time he had referred to notes.

Q. Do you remember telling newspapermen in the office of Attorney McLaughlin in the Bronx that you knew the abductors?—A. McLaughlin's office?

Q. The Bronx, May 15, 1932?—A. I don't recollect.

Q. Were you in that office about that time?—A. Yes, I believe I was.

Q. And did you talk with newspapermen?—A. Before or after the transaction?

Q. On May 15, 1932!—A. Yes, I believe I did.

Q. Did you tell them you knew the abductors?—A. On May 15? I did not. Not to my recollection.

Q. Did you ever go out in a boat in connection with this case? Blindfolded?—A. On a boat, yes. But not blindfolded.

Q. Did you ever stand on the deck of a boat in which you believed the baby was hidden below the decks?—A. No.

Cites Boat Trips.

Reilly then swung to trips Condon made to Froggs Neck in his row boat in connection with the case. On one such trip he described how he saw a boat on which a man named "Coal Barge John" and another person were visible.

Q. You went out to that boat believing those men were the kidnapers?—A. No.

Reilly interjected a new note in the case when he demanded Condon state whether he had ever said "the child's body was brought back to the spot where it was found."

He was trying to establish Condon had told that to a "Marcus Griffin, of the New York Inquirer," in New York.

Jafsie said he had no memory of the incident.

Reilly changed his course to inquire if, after Hauptmann's arrest, he asked a detective for pictures of Hauptmann so he might study them, requesting the detective to tell no one of giving him the photos.

Condon made indignant denial of this.

Q. I want the exact date of the month when you saw Hauptmann in the Bronx last August.—A. I don't remember.

Q. You mean to say you didn't note the date?—A. No.

Q. What was the name of the driver?—A. I don't know.

Q. What was the number of the bus?—A. I don't know.

Q. Did you call out for the chauffeur, "Get that man?"—A. No; it was none of my business.

Q. It is your sworn testimony, then, that you made no effort to capture the man to whom you say you gave $50,000, the man who double-crossed you on the ransom?—A. I didn't say that.

Q. You didn't shout to the driver to run him down?—A. No; it would be impossible to do that. There was so much traffic.

Q. Do you recall a detective investigator by the name of Val O'Farrel.—A. Never saw him. Died, I believe.

Reilly showed him a picture of O'Farrell.

"Never saw him in my life."

Q. He's dead, of course.—A. Yes, but it's the truth just the same.

Questioned on Theater Visit.

Reilly asked if the witness remembered going to the Windsor Theater with Al Reich, his companion.

"I don't recollect it."

Q. Did you ever know Mrs. Day?—A. No sir.

Q. Do you know Capt. Bernard Eels?—A. The name Capt. Eels is familiar. I don't remember the Bernard, though.

Q. Do you remember Mrs. Peacock?—A. Mrs. Peacock, I do.

Jafsie said he knew Capt. Eels at Woods Hole, Mass.

Q. Where did you know Mrs. Peacock?—A. She was a tenant of mine at City Island.

Q. Did you ever tell anyone the headquarters of the kidnapers was at City Island?—A. No.

Q. Did you ever tell any one you were receiving mail from City Island from an agent of the kidnapers?—A. No.

Reilly showed the witness two letters.

Q. Did you receive this letter?

Condon glanced at it and then turned a scornful look on the lawyer.

He read it for a full minute and said: "Yes, I received it."

Q. When?—A. In about November, 1932.

The letters were accepted in evidence.

Q. Do you recall two women calling on you at your home during the ransom negotiations?—A. There were hundreds of them.

Reilly then asked a woman named Mrs. Koren to stand up and come over to the witness stand for Condon to identify.

Jafsie identified her as one who, with a companion named Mrs. Busch, had called on him.

Q. Didn't you give Mrs. Busch these letters (referring to the previous exhibits) and tell them they were in the handwriting of the kidnapers?—A. No, I did not.

Q. Didn't you tell them you knew the kidnapers were four in name?—A. I don't remember.

Reilly asked if Mrs. Busch had not identified herself as a native of Flemington, by exhibiting bank checks.—A. I don't remember exactly.

Won't Read Letters.

"Jafsie" said that the woman had told him she had bought two farm plots near Hopewell, one of which she hoped to work herself.

Wilentz demanded that the letters be read to the jury.

"The contents are not so important," Reilly replied. "It's the handwriting. I will not have the letters read."

Counsel then agreed that the contents had no reference to the Lindbergh case, but were introduced for handwriting evidence by the defense.

Reilly started to ask if Dr. Condon had beeen transferred from a public school where he had been principal in 1902 because of "conduct unbecoming a gentleman, or because of conduct with a woman teacher."

"No sir," snapped Condon while Wilentz objected.

Wilentz said he did not object to thorough cross-examination, but he would oppose "the assassination of a witness' character by inference."

Judge Trenchard permitted the answer to stand and court recessed shortly afterward for luncheon.

The defense's excursion into Condon's record as a public school teacher in New York brought the reply from Jafsie.

"I have been transferred twice during 50 years in school work."

He seemed hurt at Reilly's remarks.

Mrs. Koren and Mrs. Busch were two women who came to Dr. Condon's Bronx home in March, 1932, when his identity as Jafsie was known.

Reilly brought out Mrs. Busch told the doctor she was familiar with Hopewell. A real estate transaction involving two farms was discussed, Condon said.

The defense said it would call Mrs. Koren as its witness in the case.

Reilly announced he was through with his cross-examination of Jafsie. One of the first points the State sought to clarify was Jafsie's confusion over the first communication from the kidnaper.

Jafsie had said he never opened the sealed letter addressed to Col. Lindbergh, but yet described the signature symbol in a telephone conversation to the Lindbergh estate. Jafsie's note in that original communication was not signed by the symbol.

Instructed to Open Note.

"That's an error," was Jafsie's description of his confusion.

Jafsie related how he had called Lindbergh's estate on the basis of that unsigned note and was instructed to open the sealed note at the direction of some one in the Lindbergh home.

"I opened the letter addressed to Col. Lindbergh and read the letter which bore the supposed signatures of the kidnapers to some one at Hopewell," he said.

Condon said he talked to Lindbergh, but a defense objection made him change his testimony to read "some one at Hopewell."

Q. Did you testify that you took

'Woman in Green' Arrayed Against Jafsie

Defense Seeks Anew to Link Doctor to Notes

Produces Mystery Witness in Claim Condon Wrote Kidnap Letters.

writing in those letters was identical with that of the handwriting of the kidnaper?"

"No," shouted Jafsie.

A Ticklish Moment.

It was a ticklish moment for the school teacher who has just turned 74. Reilly had handed him two letters which Jafsie had given away as souvenirs—letters he had written himself, trivial business letters written months or years before Charles A. Lindbergh, jr., was born.

"I demand that the letters be read to the jury," shouted Attorney General David T. Wilentz, springing out of his chair.

"I object to doing that," Reilly said.

And then Reilly made a speech to the Court, promising that before the trial was over the "woman in green" would come back and contradict Jafsie and quote him as saying that his own handwriting was identical with that of the kidnaper.

Mrs. Koerner was led back to her seat and a score of persons gathered around her.

"What is your first name?" she was asked.

"I haven't any," she said coyly.

Patient effort brought out the information that she was Mrs. Hermina Koerner. She refused to give the first name of "Mrs. Bush."

Jafsie never got a chance to explain about the "woman in green" for the defense, sticking to its usual strategy, left the incident in the air, hoping the jury would speculate on it and magnify it.

Letters Were "Souvenirs."

At a recess, however, he said:

"I gave lots of letters away. I gave them as souvenirs to whoever asked me for them."

That's all he would say.

Once he got away from the quick, piercing questions of Reilly and back into the gentler hands of Wilentz, he was able to explain several things that were unexplained yesterday.

One of them was about the letter he got from the kidnaper, which contained another letter for Lindbergh. Lindbergh's letter bore the symbol signature used by the kidnaper—a red spot, blue circles and three holes punched in the paper. Jafsie's letter did not.

He testified yesterday he did not open Lindbergh's letter immediately, but instead went to a telephone and told the colonel that a letter had come for him and that it bore the symbol.

"Now," yelled Reilly, "if you didn't open Col. Lindbergh's letter, how did you know the kidnaper's symbol was on it?"

Jafsie wavered and never made a satisfactory reply.

Wilentz asked one question today that helped the old man out of that hole:

"Dr. Condon, when you went to telephone Col. Lindbergh, did he tell you to open his letter and look at it?"

"He did," Jafsie replied.

"And that is when you saw the symbol?"

"Yes."

"Tried to Pursue Him."

That was Jafsie's rebuttal to the inference of the defense that he knew the kidnaper's symbol before any letters were written and received and that, therefore, he was a party to the plot.

Next he fired an answer to the charge of the defense that he made no outcry and no effort to pursue Hauptmann one day when he came close to him on the street. Jafsie was riding in a bus in New York City, he said, and suddenly he spied the face that he had sworn to follow to the ends of the earth. For this was after the ransom had been paid and before Hauptmann was arrested.

"Now tell us," Wilentz said today, "what happened about that matter of you on the bus."

"When I saw his face," Jafsie replied, "I rang the bell, stopped the bus and got out. I tried to pursue him, but he disappeared over by Pelham parkway."

"Did you report the incident to authorities?"

"Yes, to the Department of Justice."

Sledge-Hammer Blows.

But now that Jafsie is through testifying all the wrangling that has been done over such points can not obscure the fact that he dealt Hauptmann three sledge-hammer blows during his two days on the witness stand and proved to be the most important prosecution witness.

He identified Hauptmann as the "John" to whom he talked during preliminary ransom negotiations in Woodlawn Cemetery.

He identified him as the man to whom he paid the $50,000 in St. Raymond's Cemetery.

He swore that Hauptmann must have been inside the Lindbergh nursery because he recognized two safety pins from the baby's crib when Jafsie took them out of his pocket in Woodlawn Cemetery and showed them to him.

Toward the end of the day the State was starting on its drive to send Hauptmann to the electric chair through the strange curlicues that people make when they write with a pen and ink. Handwriting experts identified sentences and words Hauptmann wrote after he was arrested, but there was insufficient time to develop whether these men saw any similarity between that writing and the script in the notes.

Fails to Name "Four."

Breckinridge, a lawyer himself, was the most polished witness who has appeared. His answers were precise and pithy. He told how he was at Condon's home when the notes arrived from the kidnaper, and he corroborated virtually all of the story Jafsie told yesterday.

It was at the invitation of Jafsie that Breckinridge lived for a month at the Bronx home of the educator, spending days and sleepless nights in preparation for negotiations with the kidnaper.

The importance of his testimony was that it proved that he, and not Jafsie, was the guiding spirit behind the attempt to meet the kidnapers.

There was one significant question that passed almost unnoticed in his testimony, but it was a complete, thorough defense against accusations that Jafsie himself might have had a personal interest in the $50,000 transaction.

"Dr. Condon," he declared, "insisted that the $50,000 should not be paid except on a C. O. D. basis—the delivery of the baby to his parents."

Mrs. Ralph Hacker, Jafsie's daughter, also bulwarked her father's testimony. Once Reilly handed her a photograph of Isidor Fisch. That is the man, now dead in Germany from tuberculosis, from whom Hauptmann says he got the $15,000 ransom money found in his home.

"Did this man ever deliver a note to Dr. Condon's house?" asked Reilly.

"Not to my knowledge," Mrs. Hacker replied.

This was the day that the defense was supposed to name, in open court, four persons—two men and two women—who were the alleged kidnapers. It was not done, and all inquiries on the subject were met with a smile from Reilly and some comment on the weather.

The defense did try, however, to shoulder the blame on Fisch by making pointed inquiries of Jafsie concerning a cough that "John" had in Woodlawn Cemetery. Jafsie said it did not sound to him like a tubercular cough.

Reilly's Move Hints Condon Actually Wrote Notes From Kidnaper.

the sealed letter to Col. Lindbergh?—A. I did. That was an error.

Q. Who was present when you opened the letter?—A. Col. Breckinridge.

Q. And who else—your daughter?—A. Yes, my daughter.

Q. On the matter of your seeing Hauptmann during the bus ride in the Bronx, did you ask the driver to stop?—A. Yes, but he didn't stop. He stopped later and I searched for him.

Condon testified, "I never went to Maine," under the redirect examination concerning the plane ride he took with Col. Lindbergh while searching Massachusetts waters.

His answer was a reversal of his testimony under cross-examination.

Asked whether he reported having seen Hauptmann to the authorities, Condon replied, choosing his words carefully:

"Yes, I reported it to the Department of Justice."

Q. When was the first time you saw the symbol affixed to these notes?—A. About March 12.

Q. When did you receive the first note?—A. About the 9th or 10th of March.

He was asked when he first knew the kidnap symbol, and he answered with "the opening of the sealed letter addressed to Col. Lindbergh."

Wilentz asked Jafsie to explain what he meant when he described John's cough during the Woodlawn Cemetery rendezvous as "pulmonary."

Q. What did you mean by that?—A. To my mind it is plain that any slight difficulty in breathing through the lungs would make a man cough.

Q. You have no way of knowing it was tuberculosis or not?—A. No.

Condon was asked by the attorney general:

"Did you at any time from March 1, 1932, know that the baby's body had been placed in a grave in Mercer County, N. J.

"I did not."

He was asked where he learned that Miss Gow had received a telephone call from Henry "Red" Johnson.

"I got it from general gossip and the newspapers."

Breckinridge on Stand.

Col. Henry Breckinridge, Lindbergh's attorney, was called.

Breckinridge said he had known Col. Lindbergh seven years and that "I advised and consulted with him since March 1, 1933," the night of the kidnaping.

Breckinridge said all parties concerned including Condon had as their objective the return of the child.

He described Condon's night at the Lindbergh home.

"We came back to New York together and proceeded to Dr. Condon's home where I stayed for several weeks," Breckinridge said.

"I was at Dr. Condon's home when the sleeping suit arrived."

Q. Who was present when that package was opened?—A. Dr. Condon, myself and Mrs. Ralph Hacker.

Q. What did it contain?—A. The sleeping garment of the baby and at least one letter.

Q. To whom was it delivered?—A. Col. Lindbergh.

Q. So if the package contained one or two notes or whatever there was in there, it was delivered for Col. Lindbergh?—A. Yes, sir.

Wilentz asked if Jafsie had operated under him in the ransom negotiations.

Q. Did he comply with instructions and suggestions given him by you?—A. He did.

The lawyer also stated he was in the Condon home when Joseph Perrone, the taxi driver, brought the message from John.

Q. Did a note arrive while you were present in Dr. Condon's home?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. The note was instructions?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. You expected instructions?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. You had inserted an ad in the papers to get those instructions?—A. Yes, sir. It was inserted in a morning and evening paper.

As Col. Breckinridge related the period of waiting, Col. Lindbergh leaned forward, cupping his chin in his hand.

Q. Was there ever one cent paid to Dr. Condon for his services?—A. Not one cent.

Q. Did he ever request it?—A. No, sir.

Breckinridge said that $70,000 had been brought to Condon's home on April 2 by himself and Col. Lindbergh.

Q. And it was placed in a little wooden box?—A. Yes.

Q. Who had the box?—A. Dr. Condon.

Q. You knew that the box would be needed?—A. Yes.

Breckinridge was turned over to Reilly for cross-examination.

Q. Now, colonel, it was not generally known that there were symbols on the ransom notes?—A. No, sir.

Q. Do you remember when it first appeared in the press?—A. I believe there were some rumors of it in the press late in March, 1932.

Q. In your contact—in the beginning—you did not know Dr. Condon?—A. No, sir—prior to that we did not know him.

Q. As a member of the bar, of course, you wanted to know more about him?—A. Yes, certainly.

Q. Did you, colonel, cause two letters to be written to Dr. Condon? Letters with counterfeit symbols?—A. No, sir. I know nothing of it.

Q. Did you employ a large number of investigators?—A. No, sir.

Q. Do you remember a Robert B. Edgar, who came to you with a recommendation from the late president of Princeton University?—A. No, sir.

Q. Who delivered the note to Mr. Condon's house April 2?—A. I don't know, sir.

Q. The person who delivered that note was never apprehended?—A. No., sir.

Q. What was there to prevent his apprehension then and there?—A. Nothing, sir.

Q. Was it the desire, intention, or plan to apprehend the messenger?—A. No.

Q. It was the note you wanted and not the man?—A. Yes.

Q. You wanted the return of the child and not the money?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Not only as a friend of Col. Lindbergh, but as a citizen and a member of the bar, did you not feel it your duty to apprehend the man who took the ransom money. You had him right there in the Bronx?—A. We served a superior duty—to recover the child alive.

Q. But you had the man who took the money?—A. Yes, but we overcame Col. Lindbergh's opposition to paying money without receiving the child at the same time.

Mrs. Hacker Testifies.

Mrs. Ralph (Myra) Hacker, daughter of Jafsie, was put on the stand to substantiate parts of her father's story.

Her low nervous voice contrasted strongly with the deliberate, stony tones of her father. At one time when her voice fell almost to an inaudible whisper Jafsie directed her to "speak up." He was seated behind the prosecution table.

Reilly took her for cross-examination.

He then asked her to identify a picture of Isador Fisch, the German-Jewish furrier, for whom Hauptmann claimed he stored the Lindbergh ransom bills. She said that she did not think the picture of the man shown her was that of the man who delivered the ransom note.

Fisch died in Germany last year.

Corporal Inspector William F. Horn of the State police was the first witness. He was present the day Bruno Hauptmann was arrested in the Bronx.

Former Judge George K. Large, a member of the prosecution staff, conducted the direct examination of Horn.

Horn's appearance on the stand marked the beginning of the State's introduction of handwriting standards. Large showed the witness a statement written in the Greenwich Police Station, New York.

"Written Voluntarily."

Hauptmann wrote it, the officer said.

"It was written voluntarily," he explained.

"Hauptmann wrote it after he was detained 15 hours," he said under defense questioning.

"Fifteen hours' continuous questioning?" C. Lloyd Fisher of the defense counsel asked.

Q. Where was he when he wrote this statement?—A. He was in the Bureau of Criminal Identification.

Q. He was there from 9 in the morning until about midnight when he wrote it?—A. That's right.

Q. And how many police officers were around him at the time?—A. About 15.

The defense counsel, after brining out that Hauptmann had no counsel present, asked if Hauptmann seemed nervous when he wrote.

"As far as I could see he was all right."

Q. Was he abused?—A. No.

Q. Did you see him struck?—A. No.

Q. Any threats of any kind made?—A. No, sir.

Q. Any promises held out to make him write?—A. No, sir.

Q. Did he volunteer, or did you use some persuasion?—A. He volunteered.

Matrix Shoes for Men

Help Eliminate Excessive Perspiration

Most cases of foot perspiration are caused by ill fitting shoes which, through pressure, hinder the correct function of minute blood vessels and sweat glands. MATRIX shoes provide space for each joint and muscle—with balanced support. This means free blood circulation which not only corrects much excessive perspiration, but continually enlivens and strengthens the feet.

Aid Supervisor Urges Abolition Of Own Office

Montgomery Director Says Welfare Board Could Perform Task.

Elimination of the office of supervisor of county aid was urged upon the Montgomery County commissioners yesterday by Mrs. Willie Greene Day Perry, present holder of the office. Mrs. Perry's recommendation was contained in a report of the first 12 months of her service, which she has just completed.

Under this proposal the work now handled by the supervisor of aid would be transferred to the Montgomery County Welfare Board, operating under the direction of the State Department of Welfare and in cooperation with the county commissioners.

The report expresses the opinion that under the welfare board the local program could be "most efficiently administered to conform to and be coordinated with the State program."

Social Worker Required.

It is further set forth that the functions of this office demand a trained and experienced social worker with qualifications equal to those demanded for membership in the executive division of the American Association of Social Workers.

Persons with such qualifications, the report holds, are in a position to command substantial salaries. Since the Welfare Board is required to have such a person on its staff, it would be both economical and advantageous to centralize the relief work in that board, Mrs. Perry stated.

The report quoted from a recent address by Gov. Harry W. Nice in which he proposed a State Department of Social Welfare with subordinate units in each county for administration of unemployment relief, old age pensions, mothers assistance and care of neglected and delinquent children. The Welfare Board of Montgomery County is now equipped to do this work, the report sets forth.

Present Duties Described.

The present duties of the Supervisor of Aid as set forth in the report include granting medical and hospital permits, approval of institutional commitments and placements, granting pensions, granting permits for pauper burials and ambulance service, and investigating and assuming responsibility for the aged, ill and homeless.

"To appoint to this office an untrained person who has not had both broad social work training and executive experience is an extravagance of not only the funds to be handled but also a waste of work," the report declares.

Commissioner Robert D. Hagner moved that the office be abolished but could muster no second to his motion and the report was accepted and filed without action on the proposal.

Luray's Main Street Improved by State

Luray, Va., Jan. 10 (Spl.).—The State highway commission is spending $3,000 in making improvements to Main street. An army of convicts was brought to Luray yesterday from a road convict camp in Springfield district to cut off hilltops, fill in depressions and create proper drainage where water has been gathering in rainy seasons.

At times during the last five months automobiles have been negotiating these ponds with water up to their running boards.

claim. It was indicated the Perkins proposal may be followed.

The old-age pension plan is said to contemplate monthly payments to the aged ranging upward to $40, and involve a $25,000,000 initial Federal appropriation to be used for State grants. Advocates of the $200-a-month Townsend plan may seek to expand it. The unemployment insurance measure reputedly involves a 3 to 4 per cent industrial payroll contribution to finance that phase of the act.

Danold R. Richberg, director of the National Emergency Council, was in conference with the President yesterday on proposed revision of the present NRA set-up. Administration amendments to the NRA act will be ready for Congress within a month, Richberg said on leaving the White House.

Madison, Wis., Jan. 10 (AP).—Gov. Philip F. La Follette today asked that State expenditures in 1935-37 be increased by nearly $17,000,000 to permit payment of old-age pensions, increase school aid, cut State employes' hours and raise their wages.

The Governor presented to the Legislature a proposed budget of $53,531,000. He estimated revenues from existing sources at $36,825,068.

Brown called on the firemen. "This looks like a job," they said and hurled it against a wall. There was a great explosion. The object was a hand grenade, a war relic, which the child had found in debris.

Congress' Library Reports on Gifts

More Than 170,000 Items Added to Collection.

The Library of Congress contains in excess of 8,000,000 volumes, pamphlets and other items, according to the annual report of Librarian Herbert Putnam, which was made public yesterday.

More than 170,000 items were added during the year ended June 30, 1934. Cash gifts for the same period totaled approximately $50,000. Dr. Putnam described 1933-34 as one of the busiest years in the library's history, pointing out the need of more space for readers and research workers.

Among the gifts were the following:

Rockefeller Foundation, $20,000 for purchase abroad of source material on American history; American Council of Learned Societies, $14,000 for research in Chinese and Japanese history; Nicholas Longworth Foundation, $6,275 for music collection; Carnegie Corporation, $3,000 for collection of American folk songs and $2,500 for photographs of early Virginia architecture.

Oil Fraud Charges Against 5 Dropped

Collapse of Federal Case Seen in Oklahoma City.

Oklahoma City, Jan. 10 (AP).—The statute of limitations brought dismissal today of 12 of 14 counts against former officials and representatives of the Century Petroleum Co. charged with mail fraud.

Federal Judge Edgar S. Vaught dismissed the counts unexpectedly at the conclusion of a routine hearing on a demurrer filed by J. C. Salisbury, of Dallas, former salesman for the company.

Salisbury said the action meant the collapse of the Government's case. Others indicted, all of Oklahoma City, are Roy S. Randerson, former president of the $1,500,000 company; his brother-in-law, B. H. Stevens; R. V. Kohls and A. J. McCall.

Plaintiff Drops Action Against Roosevelt, Jr.

Philadelphia, Jan. 10 (AP).—Magistrate Howard C. Harbison, of nearby Radnor, said today charges against Franklin D. Roosevelt, jr., which grew out of an automobile accident early New Year's Day, have been dropped.

Harbison said Edward Newman, of Radnor, who was slightly injured when their cars collided, reached an agreement with the insurance company representing Roosevelt to cover car damages and personal injuries, and decided not to press the charge.

contends in effect that a dollar bill repaid to a gold-bond holder today will buy more than it did when it was loaned to a railroad or to the Government. Thus, it is argued, nothing is lost, nothing is being taken away from the bondholder, and nothing is being "repudiated." The Government position is that only the man who thinks of dollars by themselves and not in terms of what they will buy can say that he is losing anything.

Question of Intent.

The court, presumably, will look to the question of intent in the gold clauses. Was the intent to guarantee an unchanging amount of gold or its equivalence? Was the intent, in case Congress had power to take all monetary gold, to guarantee whatever dollar equivalent should then be set by Congress? The lay observer of the legal battle can not resist the thought that had Congress decreed that the price of gold should be lower instead of higher than it was before, some of the claimants of present gold equivalence would change their briefs.

Opposition to the Government's case was sounded first yesterday by Otto C. Sommerich, of New York, counsel for F. Eugene Nortz who is suing on a gold certificate. In a short, clear argument, Mr. Sommerich held that a gold certificate is a warehouse receipt for gold. However, the Chief Justice asked whether Mr. Sommerich's client had, in fact, deposited gold for which he took this gold certificate as a warehouse receipt. The answer was, as expected, in the negative.

"The Government," Mr. Sommerich argued, "deliberately broke its contract."

"This whole subject has been argued threadbare," remarked Mr. Perry when he came on late in the day to take a final fling at the New Deal's case. He contended that the gold "profit" realized by the Treasury took something from the gold-bond holders without due process of law. However, as economists have testified before congressional committees, the other view is that this "profit" was created out of thin air and hence took nothing from anybody.

It is expected that the arguments will end today. Then the court will ponder its decision on what is without doubt the biggest monetary issue since the famous legal tender cases after the Civil War.

Witness Accuses Dillinger Lawyer

Woman Testifies Piquett Offered Her a 'Bribe.'

Chicago, Jan. 10 (AP).—A group of surprise witnesses closed the Government's case late today against Louis Piquett with assertions that the Dillinger lawyer had attempted to tamper with a Government witness.

One of the final witnesses helping the Government to attempt to prove the lawyer harbored the late desperado, Anna Patzke, stated that Piquett promised her $50 weekly if she could persuade Dr. William Loeser "to double-cross the Government and testify for him." Miss Patzke said she had lived with the doctor for 17 years.

Earlier Dr. Loeser had testified he and Dr. Harold Cassidy had performed face-lifting operations upon Dillinger and Homer Van Meter at Piquett's behest. Both physicians have pleaded guilty to harboring charges for performing the operations.

Newton Heads Sixth Federal Reserve Area

Atlanta, Jan. 10 (AP).—Oscar Newton, chairman of the board and reserve agent for the Sixth District Federal Reserve Bank here, today was elected governor of the bank to succeed the late Eugene R. Black. Newton was elected at a meeting of the directors originally scheduled to be held tomorrow.

H. Warner Martin, former president of the Lowry National Bank and an assistant to Mr. Black while the latter was governor of the Federal Reserve system in Washington, is expected to be named to succeed Newton as reserve agent.

Mercury's Fall To End Spring Preview Today

Threat of Floods Appearing in East After Unseasonably Mild Weather.

Dame Nature's spring preview will fade today, the Weather Bureau promised yesterday in forecasting slightly lower temperatures for today and tonight. The weather will still be cloudy, with occasional light rain.

Throughout the East, the warm airs brought thaws and the threat of floods. Yesterday the mercury climbed to 56 degrees at 4 p. m., contrasting with highs of only 44 at this time last year here. The minimum, of 51 degrees, was reached yesterday morning at 7:30 a. m., whereas the minimum for this date a year ago was 34 degrees.

Fog Reported Clearing.

Fog along this section of the coast was reported to be clearing slowly, but in England, according to the Associated Press, the mists were as paralyzing as they have been here. Airplane traffic was resumed here. The warm weather here is being balanced by undue cold over Europe, according to the same source. Part of Poland has temperatures of 30 below, and there is heavy snow in the Balkans.

In Baltimore, a Baltimore mail liner approached its dock just one week late, due to fog. Many ships are still at anchor in the bay. The Majestic arrived two days late in New York.

Susquehanna Flood.

The greatest danger of flood was reported to be along the Susquehanna River at Wilkes-Barre, Pa., where the river has risen 10 feet in less than 24 hours. At this rate, it will reach the flood stage in another 13 hours.

The Connecticut River was at a higher winter stage than it has been since 1926, and the Housatonic River is already at flood stage. The Associated Press also reported that rivers and creeks were flooding roads in upper New York State, and that motorists were being warned against using the Storm King highway along the Hudson.

Officers Are Chosen By Petersburg Bank

Petersburg, Va., Jan. 10 (Spl.).—The Citizens National Bank of Petersburg has elected the following officers for 1935: Charles E. Plummer, president; W. M. Rucker, vice president; Benjamin T. Kinsey, vice president and cashier; W. C. Temple, assistant cashier; directors, William B. Beach, J. G. Bohannon, J. W. Brown, Dr. H. C. Jones, B. F. Keeler, B. T. Kinsey, C. E. Plummer, Paul Roper, W. M. Rucker, W. R. Seward, Shelton H. Short and V. W. Stewart.

The City Savings & Loan Corporation elected Harry L. Snead, president; W. W. Presson, vice president; Allen G. McCabem, cashier, and I. B. Davenport, assistant cashier. Directors are E. B. Hodges, Harry L. Snead, W. W. Presson, B. F. Keeler, H. R. Boyd, C. S. Dodd, Remmie L. Arnold, I. B. Davenport, George D. Harlow, Robert R. M. Rainey, Morris R. Lyons and I. Val Parham.

Censors Find Movies Getting More Decent

Richmond, Va., Jan. 10 (AP).—The State Board of Motion Picture Censors today reported two reel comedies had been the most objectionable type of films reviewed this year, but on the whole the quality and decency of the pictures submitted in the past fiscal year showed improvement in both decency and quality.

Edwin S. Reid, chairman of the board, said only three films were finally and completely rejected in the year 1933-34. There were 334 eliminations in 123 pictures, most of them affecting the two-reel comedies. One of those completely rejected was a nudist picture.

Winchester, Va., Jan. 10 (Spl.).—Joseph M. Fawcett, 79, a native of Frederick County and the first rural carrier to use an automobile in the delivery of mail from the local postoffice, died at the home of his daughter, Mrs. Emma Brumback, of Boyce, today after a brief illness.

He is survived by his wife, Mrs. Ida Siebert Fawcett, one son, Edison Fawcett, of Frederick County, and two daughters, Mrs. Brumback and Mrs. Guy Frye, of Frederick County. One sister and one brother, Dr. Nora Fawcett, of Chicago, and Dr. W. P. Fawcett, of Alderson, W. Va., also survive.

Virginia Farm Benefit Placed at $2,433,374

The Federal Farm Administration yesterday announced, according to the Associated Press, that adjustment and benefit payments to Virginia farmers on November 30 totaled $2,433,374, made up of $731,095 on wheat, $717,780 on corn and hogs, $675,619 on tobacco, and $308,787 on cotton.

The high went to Augusta County, with $155,281; Pittsylvania was second, with $145,126.

Embassy for Finland Is Asked As Reward in Debt Promptness

U. S. Appreciation Due Tiny County, Says Foreign Affairs Chairman.

Construction of a new legation in Helsingfors as a friendly gesture to Finland for promptness in war debt payments will be asked of Congress, it was learned yesterday.

Chairman Sam D. McReynolds, of the House Foreign Affairs Committee, revealed he would introduce a bill to make possible the tangible expression of good will to the tiny republic, the only foreign power which has paid every debt installment when due.

"I'm informed our legation in Finland is located on the top floor of a department store," McReynolds commented. "Finland has been so loyal and has paid its obligations so regularly, we don't want it to be treated that way."

He predicted the expense would be moderate, although the size of the appropriation necessary remains to be determined.

"It won't cost much to finance this nice gesture," he said, "and I feel sure we'll be able to put this bill through without any difficulty. All of the members have the highest regard for the Finnish government and its people."

Representative Frank Kloeb (Democrat), Ohio, another committee member, declared the existing legation "is the worst sort of a disgrace," and predicted the measure would be passed without opposition and probably without a formal roll-call vote.

Edward Albright, American Minister to Finland and, like McReynolds, a Tennesseean, originally proposed the improvement. He has been dissatisfied with the legation ever since he went there last year, after Secretary Hull obtained his appointment.

Eero Jarnefelt, Finnish Minister to the United States, voiced gratification over the prospective congressional action.

Maryland U. Club Elects Hatfield

Graduates Pick Successor to Retiring President.

M. Rankin Hatfield was elected president of the Graduate Club of the University of Maryland when the group gathered in the University Horticultural Building at College Park Wednesday night to hear talks and see exhibits sponsored by the school's horticulture and entomology departments.

Hatfield succeeds Fred Grau, who is leaving the university to attend Pennsylvania State College. Richard White was elected vice president, succeeding Hatfield.

A Department of Agriculture horticulturist, Dr. E. C. Auchter, gave an illustrated lecture on the influence of the Boulder Dam construction colony on plant life of the Southwest, and other talks were given by Dr. John H. Beaumont and Dr. Paul Knight. Mr. and Mrs. Harlan Randall sang duets. C. O. Hesse was in charge of the program.

Virginia Liquor Law Seen Temperance Aid

Richmond, Va., Jan. 10 (AP).—T. McCall Frazier, a member of the State Liquor Control Board, told the Richmond First Club today that he believed the control law "has helped to promote temperance and caused a greater respect for all laws" in Virginia, but that time alone will tell whether this system is the best for meeting an age-old problem.

"What the average man thinks about the ABC law is a matter of vital importance," he said, adding that when the board made mistakes it would like to be asked the reasons for its actions so it can explain them. He said that profits from liquor sales are a secondary consideration with the board.

Dead Senator's Kin Found Shot to Death

Baltimore, Jan. 10 (AP).—Patrolman Kaspar Becker, brother-in-law of the late State Senator Thurman C. Atkinson, was found shot to death today with his own pistol in the police department's printing bureau.

Senator Atkinson died unexpectedly on New Year's Day. Becker was said to have been melancholy since then. He and his wife had moved into the Atkinson home this week at the request of the Senator's widow.

A Well-Explored Issue.

In a current pamphlet, published by the American Bar Association, are collected texts of resolutions passed by the bar associations of 35 of the States of the Union, all favoring membership by the United States in the World Court.

The unanimity of informed legal opinion on this subject, to say nothing of the numerous other agencies which have indorsed the project, is impressive evidence that this long-delayed issue should be disposed of by the Senate without extending Fabian tactics further. After all, when the United States Chamber of Commerce and the American Federation of Labor unite nowadays to support a matter of national policy, it is hard to credit the argument that the foundations of the republic are menaced thereby.

As reported out by the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, the World Court measure more than amply protects the most timorous conception of completely untrammelled sovereignty. A more real danger is that the other members of the Court may reject a demand for privileged consideration which no other country has deemed it necessary to make. Since, however, the special safeguards requested are to a large extent already implicit, this probably need not cause undue apprehension among Court advocates.

The Isle of Pines Treaty with Cuba, signed in 1904, was ratified after the Senate had held it up for 21 years. Second in the role of delayed action is the protocol for adherence to the World Court, now delayed for 12 years. It really doesn't seem necessary to challenge the Cuban treaty record more closely.

Distinguished Son.

There is more pleasure than surprise in the news of the reelection of Mr. George W. White as president of the National Metropolitan Bank. In accepting the office he will embark upon his fiftieth year of banking, during the past twenty-five of which he has served as president of the same institution.

Entering the employ of the venerable bank—it is observing its 121st anniversary—in 1885 as a runner, Mr. White progressed steadily upwards through the organization, leaving it only once, some years ago, for a short period. Today he is universally honored as a community leader whose outstanding abilities, always generously placed at the service of others, are in constant demand by many another commercial as well as civic and charitable enterprise.

A member of the Oldest Inhabitants Association, as were his father and grandfather before him, Mr. White has the further distinction, rare among Washingtonians, of being a native of this city. For that very reason, the Capital will redouble its congratulations on his well-nigh habitual election, and rejoice in the inspiration of his achievement in the city with which he and his forebears have for long been so honorably identified.

Undue Self-Determination.

Saarlanders who prefer to live under League supervision rather than return to a Hitler-dominated Germany are said to be working for a division of the territory in case next Sunday's plebiscite favors the Reich.

One may fully sympathize with their wish to escape the tyrannical domination of a dictatorial government, and yet find their proposal undesirable. The unhappy results of the postwar plebiscite which divided integral portions of Upper Silesia between Poland and Germany should serve as a sufficient warning against another experiment of similar character. While the Treaty of Versailles permits transfer of the whole or only a part of the Saar as a result of the coming expression of popular will, it is evident that extreme economic confusion would result from a partitioning of the region. The political consequences of such an inconclusive disposition of an area smaller in size than Rhode Island would probably be even worse.

The Saar is a compact and industrially unified district which will be forced to make painful economic adjustments even if it is returned intact to its former allegiance. However, there appears to be no room for doubting that a majority of the inhabitants are prepared to submit to the sacrifices involved in a reorientation of their trade and financial connections, and in an exchange of a stable frane for a mark that is hedged about by a multitude of exchange restrictions.

If the majority of the Saarlanders are not shaken in their desire for German citizenship by a knowledge of the social, economic and financial disabilities incidental to reincorporation in the German State, they should be permitted to have their way. To attempt to provide for the dissatisfied minority by putting segments of the territory under permanent League control would merely add to the difficulties of economic adjustment, and create political animosities that would further endanger the peace of Europe.

Problems Of Price Control.

Public hearings on code price provisions are now in progress, to determine in the light of experience whether present policies should be modified or continued. The Research and Planning Division of NRA has made a detailed analysis of pertinent price data in preparation for the conference and opportunity is being given for industrialists, workers and consumers to express their views. Subsequently the Recovery Board will announce its decisions and amend code provisions accordingly.

This is a rational and properly objective method of approach to one of the knottiest problems that confronts the administrators of the recovery codes.

The man who knows anything about the fixation of prices in modern society also realizes that competition does not guarantee that ready and swift adjustment of supply to demand which is considered one of the chief advantages of a laissez faire economy. In the study prepared by the Research and Planning Division for conference use it is pointed out that there are two types of competitively determined prices. One kind reflects a flexible adjustment of supply to demand at varying prices and the other is a relatively rigid system resulting from the practice of first quoting a price and subsequently adjusting production to amounts that can be sold at that price. It follows that even under a competitive system prices are fairly inflexible over an extensive area, failing to drop in conformity with declining demand, and lagging behind when demand increases.

This situation is characteristic of industries with heavy overhead charges, such as those manufacturing capital goods at high per unit costs. When price cutting is engaged in by such industries it is apt to lead to sales below cost. These, if continued, bring heavy losses to efficient as well as inefficient concerns. Some measure of control short of establishing fixed scales of minimum prices, which would prevent necessary adjustments, seems entirely feasible. The Recovery Board states, in fact, that it "recognizes that minimum prices may be proper for the normal operations of certain types of industry, but, in such cases, Government supervision and control would naturally be increased."

The question that confronts the board, therefore, is to determine how the desirable amount of protection can be afforded without establishing fixed schedules of minimum prices that would interfere with the effective functioning of the industrial system.

As a matter of fact, a large proportion of the existing codes of fair practice contain specific provisions in regard to prices, such as prohibitions of sales below cost and of destructive price cutting. There are also a large number of open-price associations, which some critics regard as a concealed form of price fixing. In many cases, of course, these price provisions are unenforceable or undesirable. Nevertheless, the opening hearings indicate that a large majority of the speakers before the NRA conference favor some measure of control under the codes in order to eliminate predatory price cutting. Open-price associations were especially commended as a means of avoiding the rigidity of fixed-price agreements, while discouraging price cutting and price discriminations by insistence upon publicity. In other words, it is taken for granted that there is a middle ground between outright price fixing and unregulated competition.

The line of distinction between legitimate price control and the sort of agreements that are socially deleterious may be tenuous, but there is a difference which is readily perceived by practical business men. Price control, moreover, is not synonymous with higher prices. It aims at maintenance of fair and reasonably stable prices, conducive to an expansion of demand. One of the most important tasks ahead of the new recovery administration is to try to prevent destructive price cutting without encouraging extreme forms of price fixing.

The latter would result in exploitation of consumers, protection of inefficient concerns against extinction, and interruption of the march of progress by artificial restraints upon output.

Inadequate Bus Service.

The move of the Capital Traction Co. to terminate its Massachusetts avenue bus line at Nebraska avenue has brought a vigorous protest from citizens living between that street and the District line. The traction company's proposal comes at a time when this neighborhood is developing rapidly and when there is call for better and not worse transportation facilities. It would be a farce, indeed, to take such a backward step when the whole transportation system is about to be reorganized with the object of rendering more adequate public service.

It frequently becomes necessary for the Public Utilities Commission to protect residential areas from the withdrawal of service that may be temporarily unprofitable to a common carrier. Fairness demands that a company which reaps profits from heavily traveled lines must also maintain service to developing parts of the community. In this case, withdrawal of bus service to the upper Massachusetts avenue section would be particularly unfair because of the understanding that was reached when street car service to this vicinity was discontinued.

When this matter is fully presented to the P. U. C., rejection of the traction company's petition will certainly be in order. The commission might well take advantage of the opportunity to call for a more adequate transportation system in this neighborhood. One way to make the line profitable would be a less circuitous routing and a reasonably frequent service.

Define The Program.

Controversy over the gigantic work-relief project advocated by the President is concentrating upon the form which the necessary appropriation should take. It is anticipated that Congress will authorize the expenditure of several billion dollars for this purpose. In fact, there is evidence that some legislators consider the $4,000,000,000 request of the President too small. From the practical viewpoint, therefore, the chief issue is: what is the program for which this money shall be spent?

In accordance with a custom which was permissible only during the most acute period of depression, Mr. Roosevelt asks that $4,000,000,000 be appropriated "in one sum, subject to allocation by the Executive principally for giving work to those unemployed on the relief rolls." The President has not yet outlined any specific plans for the distribution of this fund. He has merely indicated that a vast outlay for special projects, which ordinarily would not be undertaken, is desirable to make work for the jobless.

Senator Byrnes goes so far as to say that it is not possible for the Administration "to be more specific at this time." If this statement is true, it tends to impugn the entire job-creating program. For nearly two years the President has been wrestling with unemployment. There has been plenty of time to survey every angle of the problem. If the Administration is not yet able to formulate a program tangible enough for enactment into law, what justification can there be for entrusting it with $4,000,000,000 to squander at will?

In the critical days of 1933 both Congress and the people recognized the need for emergency measures. Congress acted on the theory that something had to be done and that the Administration could be trusted to do it. In blind trust vast sums were placed at the disposal of the President. Has performance to date justified that trust? An affirmative answer will be most difficult if the experience of the last two years has not ripened into a well-rounded program for so elementary a problem as scientific unemployment relief.

Congress should certainly call upon Secretary Ickes, FERA Administrator Hopkins and other officials who may be charged with the execution of the public works plan. In a large measure the efficacy of the spending program will depend upon their detailed designs for the conversion of $4,000,000,000 into pay rolls. They should be put on the carpet and made to show exactly what sort of program they have in mind. And if rational proposals are not forthcoming, the Legislature can not hand over such a vast sum, to be spent by administrative agencies, without abdicating the responsibility which has been entrusted to it by the people. The moral of the recent Supreme Court decision applies here very strongly.

The Good Old Days.

It is one thing to reminisce on the past and quite another to harp on the subject of the "good old days." The former is to obtain a delightful glimpse of frequently picturesque and often entirely different ideas and customs. The latter is apt to be as boring as looking through the mirrored end of a sugar-coated Easter egg on an idyllic, but lifeless, scene.

Now comes George Jean Nathan, with admittedly "sufficient years to have lived through a portion" of them, who says that the good-old-days fallacy is a lot of hokum. But being Mr. Nathan, he doesn't call it "hokum." He expresses it, in his latest book, as a "subtle bacteria induced by the pathos of distance."

Mr. Nathan gives a few pointers which may well serve to stop grandad from lapsing into frequent and ecstatic regrets for his yesterdays. The great stage beauties and the much mourned "Florodora" girls could today get no nearer Hollywood than Berea, Ohio. The theaters were dirty and smelly, "with green hangings that looked like crystallized Mills Hotel pea soup."

Mr. Nathan, in the role of Mr. Nathan, is expected to come out perennially and blow off steam. He is the critic to end all shows, unless they be very good shows. The question is whether Mr. Nathan does not forget that what seems good to us today may similarly appear exceedingly dull 30 years from now. This applies even to good critics. In the meantime, it is always refreshing to have someone open the attic windows.

Dr. Harry Wade, of Detroit, seems to favor getting Huey out of the picture by electing him Vice President. But, my dear doctor, wouldn't such a consummation give everyone the jitters worrying about the health and safety of the President?

"A man can't love two women at the same time for very long," declares a novelist. Alas, how true! One of them is bound to find out about it pretty quick.

"Are Women People?"

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I've just been reading in your good paper about the pros and cons of the New Deal as discussed in an open forum recently. It seems that all went democratically on until toward the close, when a woman attempted to present the feminine angle. The reaction reminded me of accounts of the old pioneer days when such cries as "Order! Order!" "Shame on the woman!" greeted the attempts of the fair sex to exercise the right of free speech. Isn't it strange that men can listen to each other's harangue with the patience of Job; but just as soon as a woman takes time to air her views, masculine interest wanes? And would you believe it, feminine, too!

What's the reason for this? Deep down in their subconscious minds, a certain percentage of both men and women do not think women's opinions are worth listening to. But then, women aren't really "people" and "citizens," in the same sense that men are. If they were, they would be recognized as men's equals; and equals would be bound by all the principles of democracy and courtesy to respect the right of free speech.

We have made some progress, however, as evidenced by the following report in a prominent newspaper of the country in 1853: "This convention has completed three of its four business sessions and the results may be summed up as follows: First day, crowding a woman off the platform; second day, gagging her; third day, voting that she shall stay gagged. Having thus disposed of the main question, we presume the incidentals will be finished this morning." The great editor of this paper was for many years a stanch friend of the women who pioneered in this difficult field. "And the earth helped the woman."

The Hammock Habit.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Much amusement recently was afforded a Washington audience when a lecturer whose subject was Venezuela, described the custom of a tribe that inhabited the upper reaches of the Orinoco. A husband, he said, always took to his hammock six weeks before the arrival of an heir. There he would loll, day after day, and night after night, his meals being brought to him, until the birth of a son or daughter, when he would return to normalcy.

When the custom originated, or the reason therefor, the lecturer could not learn. Perhaps a species of New Deal philosophy, a creed of laissez-faire, had been inculcated into tribal teachings at a time so remote as to be forgotten. Papa-to-be was a worthless egg, a nuisance in the bamboo hut, so he took to his hammock.

Today, in the United States, although the alphabetical organizations, formed to meet an emergency, have aided millions and will aid other millions, yet there are many men, even women, who are lolling in hammocks, confident that in due season Uncle Sam will prove to be their Santa Claus.

A story going the rounds in Prince Georges County, Md., concerns a man who felt so certain that the HOLC would absorb his mortgage and give him a moratorium on payments to boot, that he journeyed with his family to Florida. While in Miami his dream was rudely shattered. He received word that his application had been rejected because funds had been exhausted.

Another form of hammock occupancy is related by occupants of the Municipal Court Building. Week after week they have observed a happy-go-lucky park his car one block from Emergency Relief quarters on John Marshall place, then stroll over, take his place in line and await his dole.

It is unfortunate that New Deal philosophy should offer the chiseler new and unexpected opportunities.

"The Stark Fact."

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I desire to congratulate the artist for that most striking and truth-telling story, expressed in the cartoon, "The Stark Fact Before Us," in The Post of January 5.

For many years I have dealt with the human element, and feel I know something of the pulse of human suffering. I know many in that long march depicted who have found it a long, long trail. I speak, I am certain, for thousands of unmarried women all over the country who ask for the opportunity to earn once again their livelihood. Courage may be taken from some of the excellent ideas given by the President in his message to Congress on January 4, but how soon will they be put into a practical and workable program to give work to those unemployed, especially to the unattached women?

Many of these women who by education, training and experience have filled places in business, civic and public affairs are the last to seek aid or ask for relief, and true it is, that when they have sought assistance, it has been refused, sometimes because they "had no dependents." This is truly a forgotten group. Many of them have diligently and unceasingly searched for work but to meet defeat on all sides. Great numbers of them have no home, no income and no friends able to help. All that is left to them is the faith, to which they still cling, that the often and long-promised day will soon arrive when those capable of and desiring employment may be given work and receive just remuneration.

Washington's Good Name

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Please let me thank The Post for its editorial of January 8 on the 60-day reprieve for Charles Harris (Bernstein), which so admirably expresses the viewpoint of all civilized persons—namely that sentence of execution should not be carried out so long as there exists a reasonable doubt of guilt in the minds of reasonable informed persons.

In the case of Charles Harris this doubt has been steadily mounting as more and more facts in the case are revealed.

We are glad that Washington's good name has not been sullied with what would have been an appalling — because irretrievable — miscarriage of justice. T. H. R.

Washington, Jan. 8.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: In an editorial under the caption, "A Record Upheld," in The Post of January 8, you write: "We (the people of Washington) take pride in freedom from the charge of ever having tolerated capital punishment where guilt has not been conclusively demonstrated."

When the passions of the public aroused by the assassination of Presdent Lincoln had abated, it became widely conceded by many lawyers, statesmen and prominent persons that Mary E. Surratt may have been innocent of knowledge or participation in that lamentable tragedy.

It was shown that a number of the young men, friends of her son, frequently congregated in the evenings at her son's room, on the top floor of her house, socially, and no doubt prior to any assassination plans. She did not mingle with those young men, and it seems not to have been introduced as a fact that her only connection with the affair was being the innocent manager of the rooming house. It is believed by many persons that if her trial had not occurred at a moment of intense feeling on the part of the whole country, she would not have been convicted.

Mrs. Surratt may have been innocent, but she was condemned and executed in the City of Washington.

Making The CCC More Useful.

It is obvious that the Civilian Conservation Corps is going to be materially increased in size and importance in the near future. One plan suggests that it be enlarged to provide for nearly a million men, which would be almost three times its present membership. Gen. March would use it as a supply source for men for the Army. It is true that military training is not included in the routine, but the CCC men gain robust health in the woods and they are benefited by discipline in the camps.

A proposal made recently to extend the benefits of the CCC to older men and to married men does not seem unreasonable. The original purpose was to take unemployed single men off the streets and to provide them with an occupation, thus caring for a class which had been overlooked, and improving their morale. An army of young men wandering about the country might easily have become a menace to the security of the Nation.

Members of Congress are now urging that the plan be expanded to include married men, some of whom, it is reasonable to believe, are in greater need than many single men. Word comes from Washington that it is "one of a number of proposals being studied as a possible means of putting more emphasis on work relief rather than outright grants of assistance."

"Why," said the smallest boy, "he ought t' be here any minute, an' everybody's gotta see him, ain't they?"

Time—Sunday, 3 p. m. Place—State street, Trenton. A dense crowd in front of Charley's hotel—dense in the lobby, too.

We remembered that New Jersey contained at least one very remarkable man, a Republican Governor, elected, like Maryland's—in last November's landslide, mind you—along with a Democratic ticket. We remembered that this Governor was due in Trenton to assume office. So we inquired:

"You mean Gov. Hoffman?"

"Naw," said the smallest boy, disgustedly. "Mean Jafsie."

Of the Hauptmann trial at Flemington, Trenton is the only scene concerning which too much is not being written. Every week-end half of the trial moves there!

We found this out while waiting for Jafsie.

Oh, yes—we too waited for him. We have not the trivial vice of curiosity. We were much more interested in speculating on what the President would tell Congress next day. But we just thought we'd just wait.

All of the hotel's dining rooms were doing a pre-Depression business. The soda fountain had to send out for extra flavor containers.

We asked Charley Hildebrecht: "Is it true about Jafsie?"

He said sure it was. He said: "Attorney General Wilentz, the prosecutor, keeps a floor here for himself and his staff. They drive out to Flemington every morning. And Wilentz said a few minutes ago he'd got a wire from Jafsie. He's on his way here from New Brunswick—ought to be here any minute. Now the whole town's heard about it, I don't know how."

* * *

So, without any interest in Jafsie, we battered our way through the lobby. We fought a passage up the teeming stairs to the wide landing that fronts the front-door. We bribed a bellboy to say "You're wanted on the 'phone" to the most decrepit of the old ladies occupying the twenty chairs there. And then we took her chair, which commanded a perfect view of the entrance.

4 p. m.—Jafsie ought to arrive any minute.

A neighbor said:

"Yes, it's the whole third floor the prosecution has, except one room. A State detective tried to put the occupant out of that, but she was a school-teacher. She said she'd lived there for five years, and if he got fresh she'd have him up for trespass."

Another sort of neighbor said: "Why, everybody's here except the defense, over Sundays, and I do believe Hauptmann would come if they'd let him. The check-room's so full, there's no space for the special correspondents and radio-talkers to park their pet phrases. I saw several sob-sisters' 'tense moments' and a pair of Boake Carter's 'trembling like an aspen-leaf' lying in the corridor."

5 o'clock—Jafsie ought to be here soon.

We had a waiter bring to the landing our early—or was it late?—Sunday dinner. Mr. Wilentz, passing, said he hadn't time to join us.

"Too busy waiting for Jafsie?" we asked.

He replied that he would answer any legitimate questions at his evening press conference. We countered that all we wanted to learn was what the State proposed to do about those Lindbergh ransom bills which turned up in Neuchatel and Hamburg within a month of the ransom payment—that and when Jafsie was coming. Mr. Wilentz said he'd never heard of the bills and he said we knew just as much about Jafsie's arrival as he did.

6 p. m.—We concluded that nobody's knowledge of Jafsie's intention was precisely expert. . . .

We fell to recalling how President Roosevelt the Elder once wrote a minor message in such a major manner that Mr. Cortelyou told him nothing could keep it from filling the front pages except an earthquake—and how the San Francisco earthquake promptly intervened. Also we dozed. . . .

Charley woke us with an invitation to supper and the admonition that we'd better hurry before the crowd had eaten all the food in Trenton. When we said no thanks, we'd just dined, and anyhow, having waited this long, we might as well see Jafsie, Charley said: "You ate at 5. It's 9:30 now—and Jafsie came in that door a half-hour ago. I don't see how you slept through it; it was a regular earthquake!"

So Jafsie will always remind us of San Francisco. His arrival may have been insufficient to wake us. But it was nevertheless an earthquake; it kept a President's message to a modest place on the excellent front pages of Trenton's next day's newspapers.

Flandin Turns France To Economic Problems

Successor To Doumergue Elects To Shelve Politics In Fighting Depression.

By Andre Vulliet.
(Special Correspondence of The Post.)

Paris, Jan. 1 (By mail).

FOR the first time since depression set in, France has a government which seems to be fighting its way through the rocks of parliamentarism on a purely economic platform. In presenting the Chamber of Deputies with a clear economic doctrine, that of liberalism, for which he seems ready to fight and fall, French Premier Flandin has temporarily shelved those purely political questions which caused his predecessor, old, yet wily, Doumergue, to be overthrown.

When 70-year-old Gaston Doumergue came out of his seclusion last February to pull the French out of their revolutionary mood with his beloved smile, his unfailing wisdom and his southern drawl, he had France in the palm of his hand. His singing accent made friends over the radio and his soothing smile and experience were priceless in bringing about political appeasement. Yet, he did not strike while the iron was hot.

France was then in the grip both of depression and of a big scandal, the Stavisky affair, in which an international crook had found political protection to swindle the people. These were the crucial questions for a government to tackle.

Now, it seems that one of Doumergue's gravest mistakes was to keep too much above the scandals which were the cause of his rise to power. "I did not want to be interested in the Stavisky affair and its consequences," he declared after he had been overthrown, "I did not follow it and I did not even read the papers."

As to depression, Mr. Doumergue did not do much either. Both his ideas of justice and action, as it were, were embodied in his plans for a constitutional reform which would give the head of the government more power and the cabinet more stability. But, having waited eight months to propose his idea, he was turned down with the accusation of dictatorship. Parliament had regained strength and was unwilling to give up any of its prerogatives.

* * * *

ALMOST 30 years younger than his predecessor, long-nosed Pierre Etienne Flandin takes the present problems from another angle.

A deputy at the age of 25, a minister at the age of 32, he has risen to be the youngest premier France has even known. He is now 45. He always went up the political ladder with the determination of a man who knows where he wants to go and how to get there.

Under a small, bald head, he has a clear mind, makes rapid decisions, carries them through. For additional authority he uses every inch of his 6-foot-5 body, the tallest in Parliament.

He speaks slowly, clearly, with a deep voice which he never forces. One of his enemies, a Socialist, said of him: "He knows what he wants to say and only says what he wants to say, contrary to Andre Tardieu, who jumps up at every interruption and can not resist the pleasure of crushing his opponent. Mr. Tardieu is impulsive. Mr. Flandin is remarkably cool-blooded. He also has political sense, a sort of quiet audacity, the experience of assemblies."

An aviator, a sportsman, one of the best shots in France, Flandin is just the opposite of M. Doumergue. He is not only a different man. He is of another generation. You could not dream of anybody more different from the Doumergues, Barthous, Poincares, than he. They were born before the present regime, grew with the Republic, almost nursed the constitution. They were republican and parliamentarian to their bones.

Pierre Etienne Flandin is a post-war man, with all the good and bad such a thing implies. He developed during the business period and catty people have something to say about that. Be as it may, it seems beyond doubt that he is the nearest approach to a business man France ever had at the head of its government. He is also an economist, and a classical one, too. As such, he seems to be determined to face the economic problem in an economic fashion.

* * * *

IN his ministerial declaration, when he took office, he emphasized the following points:

"The system of controlled economy has failed everywhere. In order to overcome the evils of unemployment, low prices and shrinking trade we must return gradually to a more liberal system. This can only be done if we are given time. By the sudden transfer from managed economy to a regime of liberty, the remedy would be worse than the disease. But, the principle being agreed, the authorities can gradually work for improving the cost of production, adjusting costs to prices and facilitating trade in order to promote the movements of products, encourage competition and reduce unemployment.

"The reduction of the rate of interest is essential to any revival of business. * * * Appropriate measures will be taken to see that sound enterprises are able to obtain the necessary credits through the normal channels;

"Agriculture is suffering from low prices. * * * As a remedy, the market must be placed on a sound basis as a preliminary to a return to freedom of action;

"The negotiations for the stabilization of currencies and the abolition of barriers to trade and the revival of foreign trade are to be intensified."

This program was outlined before the Chamber of Deputies on November 13. Since then, the following facts have taken place: The vote of the budget and the putting on a sound basis of the agricultural market.

The French budget, a $3,000,000,000 proposition, was passed in a record time, with an estimated deficit of about $33,000,000. This was regarded as the first indispensable step to bring about a reduction of the interest rate.

Incidentally, it may be recalled that French government bonds are now capitalized at a little over 5 per cent. French railroad bonds, whose coupons are guaranteed by the government, yield 6 per cent, while first-class industrial bonds give as much as 7 or 8 per cent. At such rates corporations can not borrow for long terms.

The rise of government bonds must be the key to recovery, it seems. This very rise is linked to the budget. With an unstable budget, a government is compelled to fill all the gaps with new loans. For the period from January 1, 1933, to August 31, 1934, that is in 32 months, the French public debt swelled by $3,000,000,000. Almost $100,000,000 a month. This policy was the greatest obstacle to any drop in money rates.

* * * *

"THE state can no longer be a sort of providence incessantly used for the benefit of private interests," French Finance Minister Germain Martin recently declared. And A. L. Jeune, noted financial writer, thus commented, "The rise of government bonds does not concern their owners only, but the whole country. It is an essential condition of easier money rates for individual's communities and the state itself. Moreover, such a rise bears a direct influence upon the country's morale."

The French premier has announced other economic measures. In an outstanding speech, delivered on November 28, he made known that, "together with the agricultural market, the industrial market must also be put on a sound basis."

Another project has also been presented by Mr. Flandin's government and voted by the Chamber of Deputies. It provides that retail traders who bought their shops between July 1, 1925, and July 1, 1933, and still have installments to pay shall be granted the faculty of obtaining a reduction of price, notwithstanding any clause to the contrary.

This is regarded here as quite an important step to lower the high cost of living as most shop owners, especially in the food business, have paid abnormally high purchase prices.

"Never has any French government," the French premier declared, "accomplished so many things in such little time. We know what we want and where we are going.

Asserting that he, too, had ideas of his own on the necessity of a reform of the state and constitutional amendments, he explained that he thought it wiser to attend to more urgent tasks. "If your house runs the risk of being burnt," he said, "you'd better put the fire out before making plans for a new decoration."

And, reminding President Roosevelt's famous phrase, "This Nation wants action and action now," he added, "President Roosevelt did not call an Assembly to change the Constitution before setting to work."

Pierre Etienne Flandin is thus struggling with economic problems. Whether the thousand and one interests he is going to push out of his way will not prove just as strong as the political interests that sent Doumergue back to his retreat, whether Flandin will find clear sailing all the way through, are questions the answer to which may soon be forthcoming.

War on Cedar Rust Gives Jobs to Many

Richmond, Va., Jan. 10 (AP).—Valuable work in the eradication of cedar rust is being accomplished in the commercial apple district of Virginia with the aid of FERA funds, according to State Entomologist G. T. French.

Mr. French said that approximately $12,500 had been allocated to this work in Frederick, Shenandoah, Warren, Rockingham, Augusta, Madison and Albemarle counties, and that a large number of men had been given employment. The cedar rust eradication program consists in cutting all red cedars within a 2-mile radius of commercial apple orchards.

Appenzellar Bank Head.

Chambersburg, Pa., Jan. 10 (Spl.).—W. Ralph Appenzellar has been elected president of the Chambersburg Trust Co. to succeed J. A. Strite. Robert Strite, son of the former president, has been elected secretary of the bank, succeeding the late John P. Glass.

An Interesting Afternoon.

LIKE an afternoon in Paris is an afternoon in the NRA, or an afternoon in the NRA is like an afternoon in Paris, either way one wants to take it. Strolling through its wide and spacious boulevards one encounters friends whom he left on the farm or with whom he attended school and who is now the representative of some particular code industry. And when one does this one is overjoyed at seeing an old friend and there is the exchange of pleasantries such as has long been the practice between old friends when they meet.

BARGERON.

"Well, fancy running into you here," one is apt to say, and the other one being good at repartee invariably rejoins, "Well, fancy seeing you here."

One encounters in this way Bill and John, who were always good at speechmaking at school, so when the country's economy got around to the point that business had to pay men to come before a Washington bureau periodically and make speeches, naturally they fit right in.

* * * *

The multitudinous offices lying off the boulevards probably draw one's greatest attention, however. They are thriving little industries turning out man-hour after man-hour. Each industry is a beehive of activity, typewriters clicking, telephones ringing, executives executing and so on until there is one rhythmic coordination of endeavor. Each man or woman represents a PWA project. There are some authorities who hold that in its great experiment of putting people to work it is here that the PWA has been most successful.

One walks interminably through the dusk, occasionally entering a most picturesque grotto and emerging subsequently into another broad avenue with its enchanting vista. One's thoughts turn inevitably to the Hooverites, a race of people who inhabited the country before the Renaissance. On every hand there is evidence of the manner in which these people lived. There are still remnants of their architecture and occasionally there are indications that these people had washing machines even in their day although the present Administration insists it invented them.

* * * *

Coming suddenly into the salon des charts one is awed by the exquisitiveness and the plentitude of Renaissance art. On every hand there is a chart showing how the lumber industry has done, the cotton industry, the brick industry, the nail industry, any industry, in fact. They have gone up, come down, reversed and gone forward, backed and filled, done a cake-walk to the northeast and a rumba toward the northwest. They make a fascinating study of how many lines man can get in a given space. The trick is never to put the pen down.

For the nonce the salon has been given over to a convention of the code representatives, they holding that in order to hold their jobs they should meet frequently this way in Washington.

* * * *

There is the air of the cathedral about the salon now. Up at front men listen intently to a speaker on the stage who relates that his industry has created 100 more manhours since the last meeting. The rear rows are occupied by people who seemingly dropped in to rest their weary feet, to lean their chins on their hands and nod, to breathe of the quietude of the place.

On the stage is a wisp of a man, slightly bald and with a palpitating jaw, Mr. Whiteside, who from his benign expression might well be the prelate. He remains always on his feet, his head tilting first to one side and then to the other and occasionally dropping forward as if a barometer of the worth of what the speaker is saying. He takes a sharp dig at the consumers' counsel, Mr. Dexter Keezer, and the audience heartily laughs. One wonders why this should be that the consumers should be laughing at their representative in this way, and then one learns that those who are laughing are not consumers but NRA man and woman hours who have dropped in for a space.

Agriculture Census Begun.

Chambersburg, Pa., Jan. 10 (Spl.).—Thirteen enumerators today began taking the census of agriculture in Franklin County in connection with the United States decennial census. Four enumerator positions have not yet been filled.

"We Are Betrayed" Takes Vardis Fisher's Hero Farther on His Painful Journey.

By Theodore Hall.

ALONG toward the end of Vardis Fisher's novel—"We Are Betrayed" (Doubleday Doran—Caxton printers, $2.50)—his troubled hero, Vridar Hunter, sets down a few notes on his reading. Nothing could set forth the theme of Fisher's work better than one of these:

"The apple-woman in 'Lavengro' is swell; she attributed the vices and follies of her life to being able to read; his mother, she said, who could not read, lived respectably and died in peace. If ignorance is necessary to peace of mind, then of what value is intelligence? Some one tell me."

For Vridar, the pained and sensitive young man who grew up in the Antelope country of Idaho (see Fisher's first volume of the tetralogy, "In Tragic Life"), and fell in love with a beautiful, childlike, and amoral minx named Neloa (see the next volume, "Passions Spin the Plot"), now finds that he is ashamed of his marriage to Neloa and tries by all the intellectual arts to solve his subjective troubles.

In essence, he reads and reads, and then breaks out into passionate denunciation against his wife, upbraiding her for being the kind of woman she is—which is not at all bad—and assailing her for not being the kind of woman he thinks he wants.

* * * *

Plainly enough, Mr. Fisher has pushed his hero farther and farther out on a familiar limb—the precariousness in this world of the highly intellectualized and verbalized idealist. Poor Vridar does so want the world to be all of a piece, honest and sincere and lovely and comfortable in all its parts. A quarter-century of life never showed him that the world was like that, but still he insists.

He joins the air corps—this is during the war—and resigns because he is appalled that men can be stupid, vain and cruel. He takes a rather softly vicarious mud bath as a small-town taxi driver, keeping himself distinctly out of the mud, but learning all he can of its dirt. He teaches in a small Western college, and the shock of discovering petty ways in a "temple of learning" sends him head-long into books. Fiercely and desperately he plows through them, swallowing and then disgorging great masses of philosophy, history, theology and so on. He plunges into the sea of great letters and comes up with a few pearls. But nothing gives him comfort, nowhere does he find what he thinks of as the essential stuff of life.

Novels, for quite a while now, have given us no man so unhappy as Vridar.

* * * *

All the while he is married to Neloa. He loves her acutely, and at the same time he doubts and despises her. There is a continual coming together and drawing apart, kept at so intense a pitch that the reader is likely to become a bit weary. Very obviously, Vridar has put onto his wife the onus of his own inner megrims.

Even when he finds a girl named Athene, whom he thinks he can admire, and whom he thinks he loves, he is too undecided to move forward or back. Wavering on a dreadful peak of anxiety, with eyes blind from overstudy, Vridar finally goes mad. And even then the climax of the book is not reached until Neloa, still loving him in her dumb, childlike way, takes poison and dies. Vridar recovers to take up the burden of his life.

In more ways than one, "We Are Betrayed" is not a pretty tale.

* * * *

I tried to leave underscoring from this brief resume. But sufficiently clear must be this story of neurasthenia, of the stubbornness of adolescent "great expectations," of sheer insufferable priggishness. Vridar was revolting from the torture, to his overly sensitive mind, of that Idaho farm. But he revolted too far; he revolted clean out of life. He went searching after his imaginary whole loaf of bread with such neurotic abandon that the half-loaf in his grasp was only a thing to be spat upon. Perhaps that was all very "intellectual." But the last thing you can call it is intelligent.

This is no place for preaching, though. Mr. Fisher may take his characters over any mental hurdles he chooses. The point is that he has made such painful writhings vivid in time and place, set them in the texture of small town and college life (seen through the neurasthenic lens, of course), and performed his literary feat with notable skill.

Still, I can't help wondering. For three volumes of the tetralogy, now, this high temperature of heart-ache and complexity has been rising. The fourth is to come, and a cooling of some kind, one supposes, offered. With a hero distressingly unhumorous, unadapted, self-idolizing and stupid, what in the name of a novelist's head-scratching will that solution be?

Limericks, Requiems

By

Wm. Lyon Phelps

LAST summer I wrote an article in this column on a new volume of original poems called "Aftermath," written at the age of 80 by the Hon. Robert Underwood Johnson, formerly American Ambassador to Italy, and for many years secretary of the American Academy of Arts and Letters, a position he still holds.

And now, in his eighty-second year, this fiery and indomitable poet has just produced another volume, called appropriately, "Heroes, Children and Fun." With the exception of about six poems in a humorous vein, these pages were all written during 1934. They show absolutely no sign of age except experience. They are full of amazing vigor, mental force, lively fancy, intellectual and emotional alertness.

* * * *

I particularly admire the poem revealing his attitude toward life at certain places in this terrestrial journey; for I think this poem will amuse many octogenarians, and will give renewed hope and faith to intelligent readers between the ages of 20 and 79. Here are some stanzas:

When forty arrived I was thick in the fighting,
And the days for the struggle were all too short,
For many a wrong that needed righting
Was calling in vain to a world of sport;
And hardly a ship of my boyhood sighting
Had weathered the storm and come to port.

And I, who have never dared to think it,
Plod on through a longer lease of days!
I lift the chalice of Life and drink it,
With thanks for all the joy that stays
And all that comes, in the hope to link it
In one reverberant song of praise.

* * * *

Many of the poems are addressed to his grandchildren, as his son is the famous novelist, Owen Johnson.

The author is interested in the latest productions in art, literature, politics and humor. He has a poem to Mickey Mouse, called "The World's New Playmate," a number of limericks, serious verses addressed to contemporaries both living and recently dead, Albert of Belgium, Chaliapin, Brand Whitlock, Dollfus; his lifelong friend, the late Augustus Thomas, and others.

The word heroes in the title is there because Dr. Johnson believes this present age of 1934-1935 is the heroic age.

Some of these poems make us feel like cheering up; and some make us feel like cheering. No one should lose his interest in the present and future, no one should stop thinking, no one should close the doors of his mind because of old age.

The volume is attractively bound in green cloth, has 144 pages, and is published by the author at 745 Fifth avenue, New York.

G. W. Alumni Luncheon Will Honor Hoover

J. Edgar Hoover, director of the Bureau of Investigation of the Department of Justice, will be guest of honor and speaker at a George Washington University alumni luncheon at the Mayflower Hotel, under the auspices of the General Alumni Association, tomorrow.

Mr. Hoover is an alumnus of George Washington University. He received his LL. B. degree in 1916 and his LL. M. in 1917. The luncheon will be attended by a large number of the alumni in Washington and nearby Maryland and Virginia.

Admirers of Bellamy To Form a Club Here

Washington is to have a Bellamy Club, an organization devoted to the reading and study of the writings of the late Dr. Edward Bellamy, whose books, "Looking Backward" and "Equality," startled the world at the turn of the century.

Clyde R. Faris arrived here yesterday from Springfield, Mass., to lay the groundwork for the organization. He is being assisted here by Louis Bessemer, of 1322 Fifteenth street northwest, a former Cleveland newspaperman, who is a student of Bellamy's prophetic works.

To Hollywood . . . And Oblivion

Nearly every incoming steamer brings to the United States at least one foreign actress ready to take her place in the Hollywood heavens . . . and every second outgoing steamer carries home one foreign actress, disgruntled and unhappy, who no longer boasts a California mailing address.

There are many reasons for the failure of these imported beauties. They may have broken hearts by the thousand in their own countries . . . only to discover that Americans shun them like an epidemic of influenza. Perhaps they are not given the right material. Again, it is a case of temperament or studio politics.

In this Sunday's Post, Frances Fink discusses these unfortunate actresses who arrive in a blaze of well-publicized glory, flicker for a while, and then slip back into oblivion. Be sure to read the story . . . in the World Court Question Embarrasses New Deal

Senator Robinson Finds Progressives In Senate Are Also The Irreconcilables.

By Elliott Thurston.

STUDENTS of political behavior might well study the procedure to be followed in the Senate now that the aging World Court controversy has again been disinterred from the Foreign Relations Committee. The consensus among competent nose-counters is that President Roosevelt can get the court protocols ratified if he wants to—but does he want to?

Senator Robinson, Democratic leader of the Senate, says that he will call up the court matter for action "when I think the time is proper and opportune." If this sounds a trifle vague it should be remembered that the Senate leader occupies a none too comfortable position. He has long been an advocate of the court—at least, his own constituency has so regarded him, and innumerable peace societies, bar associations, chambers of commerce, sewing circles and other groups filled with aspirations to make this a better world, look to him now to lead an obstinate and, they suppose, perverse Senate to this outpost on the way to universal righteousness.

The Senator from Arkansas is under strong compulsions from vast numbers of purposeful people. However, the Senator is getting to be a veteran of politics. Few, if any, know better than he that a venerable if not admirable rule of politics is, "Never do today what you can put off 'til tomorrow." If all the voting citizenry were only moved by the same ennobling motives which animate the passers of bar association, chamber of commerce and ladies' auxiliary resolutions, all would be well.

* * * *

UNHAPPILY, there are other groups, noisy and presumably potent, which do not see eye to eye with these resolution passers. Thus the American Legion is extremely suspicious of the World Court, reservations or no reservations. It is assumed by Senators, and no doubt correctly, that large numbers of voting-age citizens, who do not attend meetings devoted to uplift and horizon-broadening, have no intellectual or emotional reflexes concerning the World Court other than latent, native suspicion waiting to be fanned into resentments and animosities on election day by such expert fanners as former Senators James A. Reed, of Missouri, or George H. Moses, of New Hampshire, and present Senators Hiram Johnson, of California, William E. Borah, of Idaho, Henrik Shipstead, of Minnesota and Robert La Follette, of Wisconsin.

These and other so-called irreconcilables are already in a lather over the exhumation of an issue which they have fought successfully for a dozen years. They have, in that time, stirred up a public curiosity and conjured up horrifying visions all out of proportion, it would seem, to the court per se. Jim Reed alone has caused innumerable innocent children, to say nothing of their parents, to lie awake nights shivering over the calamities, which, according to him, would follow American entry into the court. The scathing and scornful Missourian's best performance, however, has been his labored reading of the names of the judges.

He would stumble, painfully over such names as Dionisio Anzilotti or Didrik Galtrup Gjedde Nyholm or Epitacio da Silva Pessoa, to say nothing of Mikhailo Yovanovich and Wang Ch'ung-hui. If the audience laughed, Jim Reed always unlimbered a warning finger and, with his most ferocious scowl, brought the light-hearted sternly back to earth by asking, "How would you like to have this foreign court pass upon whether your boys will be dragged off to fight the battles of Europe?" That usually quenched unseemly mirth.

* * * *

AFTER so many years, the Jim Reeds have assembled a vast arsenal of arguments and perfected an almost sure-fire technique. Making an anti-world court oration, with soul-stirring apostrophies, plus gestures, has become practically a function of the subconscious mind with such practiced professionals as Hiram Johnson. Small as their group is, the irreconcilables have some of the country's most vociferous tub thumpers on their side and they are backed up by segments of the press which make their own thundering sound like a genuine storm.

Some of Senator Robinson's oldest and closet Democratic colleagues are even now begging him to draw upon his deep knowledge of parliamentary tactics to keep the court protocols suspended at that point in mid-air where they will seem to be about to be acted upon, yet will not descend to complicate the New Deal's relief-reform-recovery program or to move the Messrs. Johnson, La Follette, Shipstead, Borah and numerous others in and out of the Senate to fresh oratorical paroxysms. After all, the New Deal, is still courting the progressives all of whom, except perhaps Norris, are also irreconcilables.

In other words, the reinjection of the court issue at this time is causing acute political embarrassment for the New Deal. Echoes might even be detected around the White House. Specialists in political behavior, normal and abnormal, should take notice.

Q. What is the profit motive?

A. It is the motive that stirs a man to sell something for more than he paid for it.

Q. Is it something new?

A. No, Gideon; history shows that it has been in existence for centuries.

Q. Can a habit of such long standing be broken?

A. Well, in times like these the doctors are trying everything.

Q. In the Utopia where money has been pretty evenly split up, will everybody be satisfied?

A. Everybody will be satisfied of one thing.

Q. What is that one thing?

A. That he ought to get more money.

Q. Will there be something of a struggle to get more money through individual ability and ambition?

A. Yes, Cedric.

Q. How will this be done?

A. Through the profit motive.

Q. But I thought the profit motive was to be abolished.

A. Aw, go to bed; you believe everything.

Sewerage Plant Bids Submitted in Culpeper

Culpeper, Va., Jan. 10 (Spl.).—Bids for construction of a new sewage disposal plant for Culpeper were submitted at the meeting of the Town Council last night, but no contracts were let. The construction of this plant is expected to be started soon as the town's chief project this year.

Other business included raising the town manager's salary from $2,400 to $3,000 a year; adding one member to the police force; extension of time for the collection of delinquent taxes and special ordinances passed for automobile parking in the business district.

Dr. Weaver Named Head Of Carroll County Bank

Wesminster, Md., Jan. 10 (Spl.).—Dr. Jacob J. Weaver, jr., was named president of the Carroll County Savings Bank at Uniontown at the annual election of officers and directors.

Other officers elected were Jesse G. Garner, treasurer; M. A. Zollicoffer, assistant treasurer; G. Fielder Gilbert, secretary. Directors named were Dr. Weaver, Jesse Garner, William U. Marker, Mr. Zollicoffer, Mr. Gilbert, John E. Formwalt, Lewis E. Green, Dehton Gehr, Alva C. Garner and Thomas L. Devilbiss.

Charles Town Lodge Of Red Men Elects

Charles Town, W. Va., Jan. 10 (Spl.).—Officers of the Charles Town Red Men's Lodge were elected and installed at a regular session in the lodge room last night. They were: C. F. Reininger, as keeper of records; Samuel Blum, collector of wampum; I. H. Russell, keeper of wampum. Others elected for six months are: Harold Blum, sachem; Robert Newton, senior sagamore; Mike Feigley, junior sagamore; J. W. Birkitt, prophet; Robert McGolrick, inner guard; H. T. Smallwood, outer guard. Herman William Willis is the elected representative to the great council of West Virginia.

Named Lonaconing Librarian.

Lonaconing, Md., Jan. 10 (AP).—Miss Mary Ayres, of Moscow, Md., has been named librarian at the Lonaconing Community Library. She was recommended by Miss Mary Walsh, of the Cumberland Free Library. Mrs. Lowell Sawers is chairman of the library committee.

New Effort On To Get Berlin Back in League

England Makes a Bid to Reich on Eve of Council Session at Geneva.

Geneva, Jan. 10 (AP).—New moves to get Germany back into the League of Nations stirred enthusiasm in Geneva tonight on the eve of the league council's January meeting, which will consider the result of the Saar plebiscite.

Great Britain's bid to the Reich to send representatives to the council sessions during discussion of the plebiscite, although declined by the Berlin government, was taken here to be the first step toward getting Germany to return to active league membership.

The British initiative also was considered as probably an outgrowth of the new Franco-Italian accords.

Germany Still a Member.

As Europe's statesmen began arriving for tomorrow's initial session of the council, officials emphasized that Germany remains a full fledged member of the league until her resignation becomes effective in October, and hence the Reich's delegate could attend the council session without an invitation.

The council session, opening one day after the league's fifteenth birthday, faced five major issues, of which the Saar plebiscite, involving as it does the disposition of the future national allegiance of that rich territory, held most immediate interest.

They are:

1. The dispute between Iraq and Persia over alleged border violations by the latter.

Italo-Ethiopian Row Listed.

2. The border conflict between Italy and Ethiopia which, while not officially on the agenda, probably will come up for discussion.

3. The Greek complaint that Greek minorities in Albania are being mistreated and deprived of their rights guaranteed them by treaty.

4. The long war in the Chaco boreal between Paraguay and Bolivia.

5. The Saar plebiscite. The council must decide whether the voting Sunday indicates that the Saar has chosen to rejoin Germany, unite with France or retain League of Nations government. Should the Saar or any part of the Saar ballot for league sovereignty, the council must immediately fix its form of government.

It was considered possible that the January session might not be able to dispose of all questions concerning the Saar, and hence an extraordinary session for February might be called.

Rockville Firemen Reelect Prettyman

190 Calls Were Answered by Department Last Year.

William F. Prettyman was reelected president of the Rockville Volunteer Fire Department at its meeting in the firehouse Wednesday. Other officers are vice president, the Rev. Lloyd Black; engineer, Clarence E. Anders; surgeon, Dr. W. S. Murphy; electrician, R. D. Weddle, chief, W. V. Wilson; assistant chief, Frank Higgins; treasurer, Marberry Gates, and secretary, Ramond Karge. Captain No. 1, J. C. Wilson; captain No. 2, Ernest Helbert; captain No. 3, Albert Hamke; captain rescue, Leslie Thompson; lieutenant No. 1, William Wootton; lieutenant No. 2, Richard Hickman; lieutenant No. 3, Frank Poole; lieutenant rescue, Wayman See; house committee, William F. Prettyman, W. V. Wilson, Clarence Anders, Francis Lyddane and Marberry Gates.

The treasurer reported general fund receipts of $6,584.84 and disbursements, $6,142.18; house fund receipts $2,779.08, and disbursements, $2,732.42. The Rockville Fire Department has been in existence for 14 years. Its property and equipment are worth $57,000 and the only indebtedness remaining is $3,000. During 1934, 190 calls were answered, of which 96 were rescue and 94 fire calls.

Student Farmers Report Net Profit of $525,080

Winchester, Va., Jan. 10 (Spl.).—Virginia students who were members of day classes of vocational agriculture during the session of 1933-34 realized a net profit from their projects of $525,080, including allowance for their labor, according to information received here from the office of Sidney B. Hall, superintendent of public instruction, it was learned today.

During the same period for 1932-33, the last for which data are available, Virginia farmers who attended evening classes in vocational agriculture increased their earnings by approximately $130,000 by the application of improved methods, it was pointed out in the report.

U. S.-Japanese Naval Parleys Are Sunk in Sea of Cocktails

Norman Davis and Yoshida, Roving Envoys, Crossing Atlantic Together, Agree to Eschew Talk About Warships.

Neither the American State Department nor the Japanese foreign office knows anything about it, but The Post is in a position today to reveal that, just after the London naval conference, Norman Davis and Shigeru Yoshida entered into a pact.

The two men, each a roving ambassador for his country, had left London and were about to cross the Atlantic on the steamship Washington when the agreement was reached.

Ambassador Yoshida, a rotund, bespectacled little diplomat, told about the entente as he sat puffing a cigar yesterday in his suite at the Mayflower Hotel.

Agreement Was Kept.

"Mr. Davis and I agreed," said Ambassador Yoshida, "that we would not discuss naval affairs on the trip across, and we didn't."

"But what did you talk about?"

"About everything except naval affairs."

When they weren't talking, Ambassador Yoshida confessed, they generally were drinking cocktails. And judging from his chuckle, this was one field in which there was complete equality between America and Japan, the 5-to-3 ratio being forgotten.

Traveling with Ambassador Yoshida—he is on a tour inspecting Japan's various embassies and legations—is his daughter, Miss Kazuko Yoshida, whose beauty caused people to whirl around in the Mayflower lobby yesterday.

Her mother was the eldest daughter of Count Makino, keeper of the privy seal, and, as such, one of the Emperor's advisers.

Ambassador Yoshida was secretary to Count Makino when the latter came through Washington in 1919 on his way to the Versailles peace conference. That was Yoshida's last visit here until yesterday.

Naokichi Kitazawa, who used to be an attache at the Japanese Embassy here, but who is now traveling with Ambassador Yoshida as secretary, recalled that his chief was responsible for the new embassy building on Massachusetts avenue.

Approved Embassy Plans.

As vice minister of foreign affairs, Kitazawa said, Yoshida approved the plans for the embassy and gave the word to start its construction.

"Wait," Yoshida broke in, "if it is nice, I am responsible. But if it is not nice, I had nothing to do with it."

Thereupon the party left the Mayflower to visit the embassy. That Ambassador Yoshida thought it was "nice" and, therefore, was willing to take credit for it goes without saying, for it is one of the architectural jewels of Massachusetts avenue.

Sugar Corner Quiz Is Sought By Vandenberg

Senator's Resolution Requests Wallace to Give Data on Incident.

gressional delegation was inspired by the presence in Washington of Jefferson Caffery, American Ambassador to Cuba. The protest to Secretary Wallace implied that part of Mr. Caffery's mission here was to obtain additional sugar concessions for Cuba.

Cubans' Part in "Squeeze."

At the State Department it was explained that Mr. Caffery's visit to the State Department was a routine one, devoted to making a report on the Cuban situation and discussing first hand with the department's staff recent developments. The sugar situation has been a part of these developments, it was asserted. But whether Mr. Caffery is pressing further concessions for Cuba could not be confirmed.

Cubans had a part in the "squeeze" which took place in December futures on the sugar market. The beet sugar spokesmen contend that the Cubans thus took unfair advantage, through a price-pegging decree, of the opportunities given them in this country, and there have been suggestions that the Cuban sugar quota b reduced. Such a step would, it is held, have serious consequences for Cuba.

Senator Vandenberg said he did not wish to "presume or pretend to judge the equities involved" in the sugar "corner," and that it has been "exceedingly difficult to get at the facts." He said he made no charges against any one.

But, he argued, the "episode challenges the inquiry whether or not the conditions created by the Jones-Costigan act may not invite other and more far-reaching manipulations to the jeopardy of the public interest."

"It seems clear that one factor in the recent December corner was the act of the Cuban government, responsive to Cuban sugar interests, in pegging the price to be paid for sugar in the United States upon the Cuban supply," he asserted, adding that this could not have been possible except for the existence of quotas and a limit on domestic production. He also held that financial help from American banks was necessary to the scheme.

"In other words," he continued, "we are put on notice to inquire whether the Jones-Costigan act has not unwittingly encouraged market manipulation inimical to the people of the United States.

"The whole sugar policy of the Administration has been amazingly generous to Cuba, not only in respect to the Jones-Costigan act, but also in respect to the subsequent Cuban reciprocal treaty. We are put on notice, by the chain of events in respect to December sugar futures, to inquire whether this generosity does not unintentionally permit our actual exploitation."

Regulation of Exchanges.

He also said full information about the sugar corner was necessary to determine whether the sugar exchange should not be placed under Federal regulation.

In his resolution Senator Vandenberg held that such speculation, price-fixing and manipulation as led up to the "corner" in December "threatens the welfare of domestic consumers and may threaten the welfare of domestic producers, and, in any event, jeopardizes the integrity of the Jones-Costigan act and may nullify its domestic purposes."

The Vandenberg resolution specifically asked Secretary Wallace to report to the Senate all information at the disposal of his department or the AAA regarding the December sugar "corner;" the history of all dealings of all government departments with the merchandising of the 1934 Cuban sugar quota; names of all "long" and "short" traders in December futures on the New York sugar and coffee exchange and the identification of any banks or financial institutions in this country known to have been connected with financing or the refusal to finance the 1934 Cuban sugar crop.

He also asked Secretary Wallace to submit "such recommendations as he may care to make for additional legislation to protect the Jones-Costigan act, and for legislation, if deemed necessary, to control commodity dealings on the New York Coffee and Sugar Exchange."

U.S. Aid Sought To Keep School Term Normal

Dr. Hall Says Federal Funds Will Be Needed to Maintain 9-Month Year.

Richmond, Va., Jan. 10 (AP).—Federal funds to insure a normal nine-month school term in Virginia will be asked, Dr. Sidney B. Hall, State superintendent of public instruction, announced today after conferring with Gov. Peery.

Dr. Hall said that while nearly all counties and cities in the State will be able to finance the eight-month term required by law, extra funds will be needed in many instances to extend the school year to its normal nine months' length.

Report on Funds Needed.

Gov. Peery has asked Dr. Hall to investigate the financial condition of the localities and report on just how much money will be needed to complete the normal terms. The Governor then will make a formal request to Federal authorities.

Last year Virginia secured Federal aid amounting to $710,000 for 72 counties and this year, with a larger Federal fund available for distribution, a questionniare has been sent to the States asking what aid they will need. Recent estimates submitted to Washington by Virginia school superintendents suggested that approximately $1,000,000 was needed.

Dr. Hall said today the State is paying an average of $42 toward the salaries of the 16,500 school teachers in Virginia. The localities are required to pay at least 20 per cent of the teacher salary item and to bear the burden of all other school and instructional costs, but where a locality is ruled too poor to provide its 20 per cent of the salaries, this figure may be lowered to 10 per cent.

Even this 10 per cent may be supplied by the State from a discretionary fund which can be used only with permission of the Governor, and this will have to be done this year in about five counties, Dr. Hall says.

Rail Veterans, Auxiliary Install New Officers

Cumberland, Md., Jan. 10 (Spl.).—The Baltimore & Ohio Veterans Association and Ladies' Auxiliary installed the following officers last night: Association president, Joseph F. Barnett; vice president, Myer Light; treasurer, George Light; secretary, Chris McCullough; recording secretary, H. W. Bloss, and guard, Robert Turner.

Allison Auxiliary, No. 4—President, Mrs. George Crass; vice president, Mrs. Jasper Flora; secretary, Mrs. Myer Light; treasurer, Mrs. Carrie Heron; marshal, Mrs. Carrie Hobday; guard, Mrs. M. L. Turner; chaplain, Mrs. Aria Grimm; social committee, Mrs. A. Souders; entertainment committee, Mrs. J. F. Barnett and Mrs. Elizabeth Menefee.

S. D. Edmiston's Rites Are Held in Cumberland

Cumberland, Md., Jan. 10 (Spl.).—Samuel Dixon Edmiston, 64, veteran telegrapher of the Baltimore & Ohio service, died yesterday at Allegany Hospital. He served 40 years at various points, but of late years was employed at the Cumberland office. Mr. Edmiston was a native of Baltimore. He is survived by his wife, Mrs. Jennie E. Edmiston, New York; two sisters, Mrs. William R. Mendenhall and Mrs. Milton W. Wonn, Cumberland, and a brother, James G. Edmiston, Luray, Va.

The Rev. William W. Shearer, rector of St. Timothy's Episcopal Church, Catonsville, Md., conducted the funeral service this afternoon. Burial was in Rose Hill Cemetery.

quate protection were provided against these strong-arm men, his group would introduce its own patrols on the streets.

Every arrival of Germans from abroad is marked by clashes of rival factions. The anti-Nazis claim the German Front (Nazi) organization is cutting the returned voters off from contact with all but pro-Hitler groups.

The army of occupation so far is keeping in the background. However, the patrols tonight indicated they were ready for business should the rioting assume serious proportions.

Nazis Active in Austria; Italians Mass on Border

Vienna, Jan. 10 (AP).—A reported increase in Nazi activities in Austria coincided today with reliable information that Italian troops were concentrating along the Austrian border, ready to help quell any Nazi putsch after the Saar plebiscite.

Newspaper and other reports indicated the outlawed Nazis were busy throughout the nation, and Chancellor Kurt Schuschnigg's government, alarmed at possible consequences of the wave of pro-German sentiment, expected to follow the Reich's victory in the Saar vote, took extreme precautions.

So worried was the director of public security in Salzburg Province that he ordered radio owners not to tune in on German stations January 12 and 13, the day before and the day of the plebiscite. Violators of the decree faced three months' imprisonment.

Hundreds Arrested in Tyrol.

As hundreds of Nazis and sympathizers were arrested in Tyrol Province, Nazi stronghold adjoining Germany, and police and auxiliary forces there were placed under emergency orders from Saturday until Tuesday, reports from border points said Italian garrisons from the entire Verona district were concentrated along the Brenner-Brixen line.

As was the case when Premier Benito Mussolini rushed thousands of troops to the border during the abortive Nazi putsch of last July, the Italian soldiers, who replaced Fascist militia stationed there, were reported ready to cross into Austria if the Nazis got out of hand.

The newspaper Linder Volksblatt, meanwhile, revealed that authorities discovered and raided secret Nazi propaganda headquarters near Linz and confiscated great quantities of illegal propaganda material.

It was also reported from Voecklabruck that the gendarmerei there had uncovered a well-stocked secret Nazi arms and ammunition storehouse, in which a number of gas masks was found, and at Ried, not far from the German frontier, authorities discovered a newly organized Nazi district headquarters.

a parting of the ways. She filed suit the following December 8.

For the past several years Fairbanks has made frequent trips abroad, leaving Miss Pickford alone at the spacious $500,000 estate of Pickfair.

Follows Ashley Case.

Several months ago it appeared that the noted movie couple might make up their differences. Then came the trial in London of the suit of Lord Ashley against Lady Sylvia Ashley for divorce, in which Fairbanks had been named co-respondent. Lord Ashley won his divorce and the court assessed charges for the case against Fairbanks.

The case had not been set, or even assigned to a court as far as public records were concerned, until late this afternoon, when it became known the actress and her attorney appeared at the courthouse seeking to shroud their movements in secrecy.

Doug Has No Comment; Lady Ashley There, Too

Saint Moritz, Switzerland (Friday), Jan. 11 (AP).—Douglas Fairbanks, sr., awakened tonight by the news Mary Pickford had been granted a divorce in California, refused, members of his hotel staff said, to answer any requests for comment.

Lady Ashley, divorced in a suit which named Fairbanks corespondent, is staying at the same hotel, and they frequently have been seen skiing together.

Fairbanks had been asleep for two hours when the news of the divorce reached this Alpine resort.

Six-Hour Day Will Be Sought By Rail Labor

Delegates of 21 Brotherhoods to Ask Same Pay as for Eight Hours.

(Copyright, 1935, by the Associated Press.)

Chicago, Jan. 10.—Railroad labor today opened a drive for a six-hour day.

The men who operate the Nation's carriers will seek to have the new program established without any shrinkage in their pay envelopes.

Shorter Trains Sought.

A plank embodying these aims was placed at the top of the platform being formulated by the legislative committee of the American Railroad Labor Executives Association as the vanguard of 1,500 representatives of every line in the United States and the officers of the 21 brotherhoods gathered for their annual meeting.

The committee members favored the principle of the six-hour day without "any reduction in the compensation" they now receive for an eight-hour day. They pointed out that while an employe might work longer than the specified time on certain days, under the projected provisions, his service week would average six hours a day.

Other legislative proposals which they will submit to the convention include:

Creations of Jobs Seen.

Federal "full crew" regulations to supersede State laws.

A new Federal "hours of service" statute cutting the allowable service period to 12 hours against the 16 successive hours now permitted.

New regulations shortening the lengths of trains.

The committee said a Federal bill setting out the number of men needed to man the trains would make for uniformity in all States, remove some of the travel hazards and create jobs for several thousand persons. Members argued a shortening of trains would result in better service to the public and speedier operation and woo shippers back from the truck lines.

Wage problems were not expected to come up for discussion in the general assemblies. Under agreements reached last year the 10 per cent pay slash is being restored.

D. B. Robertson, of Cleveland, chairman of the Brotherhood of Firemen and Enginemen, headed the legislative committee. Other members are George M. Harrison, of Cincinnati, chairman of the Railway Clerks Association; E. J. Manion, of St. Louis, head of the Order of Railway Telegraphers; Charles M. Sheplar, of Washington, and Victor Gauthier, of the Federated Shop Crafts.

Joseph B. Eastman, Federal railroad coordinator, will address the convention Saturday.

I. C. C. Raps Carriers For Special Lawyer Fees

Railroads were sharply criticized by the Interstate Commerce Commission yesterday for special payments to lawyers and others for services during the low revenue years from 1930 through 1933, the Associated Press says.

One hundred and twelve Class 1 railroads answering questionnaires of the commission in its investigation of railroad expenditures reported $84,831,060 of special payments.

Special criticism was made of payments by 78 railroads for legal services of a special nature totaling $11,000,000. Two-thirds of this amount, the commission said, was paid by 13 railroads.

These payments, the commission added, raised the question "whether it would not have been more economical for carriers to maintain permanent and adequate legal staffs."

"Some of the expenditures reported," it was said, "are so large as to present a serious question as to whether they meet the requirements of the law for efficient and economical management."

Murder Charged To 2 in 'Fright' Death of Boy, 10

Doniphan, Mo., Jan. 10 (AP).—First degree murder charges face Carl McMurty, 25, and George Bond, 21, for the "fright" death of James Ainley, 10, the night of December 23.

Officers say James and two other boys were going to church that night when some men appeared in the darkness and started threatening them. The boys fled in different directions. Searchers three hours late found the body of James.

Doctors said the boy died from "excessive fright." McMurty and Bond will go to trial January 17.

Escaping Gas Causes Death of D. C. Resident

William T. White, 65, was found dead from illuminating gas in his room in the 900 block of L street northwest late yesterday.

He apparently had retired without realizing that the gas was escaping from a half-closed jet. Coroner A. Magruder MacDonald, who will conduct an inquest, said the death probably was accidental. The body was taken to the District Morgue.

Premier Puts French 'NIRA' Up to Deputies

Flandin Inaugurates His New Deal With Bill to Codify Industry.

Paris, Jan. 10 (AP).—The new deal that Premier Pierre-Etienne Flandin promised France last November was presented to the Chamber of Deputies today.

A "modified American NIRA plan," the government-introduced legislation seeks adjustment of French industry to emergency conditions.

The plan, compared by Minister forts, would force French industries to adopt self-made antidepression codes to "save them from ruin."

of Commerce Paul Marchandeau to President Roosevelt's recovery ef-

Obligatory emergency agreements among "important industries in grave difficulties as the prey of absolutely disorderly and disastrous competition" are advocated in the bill given the Chamber of Deputies.

Declaring the depression forced upon the United States and other countries the same necessity of regulatng industry, Marchandeau said "the solutions vary with each country."

"Discipline and organization in industry" is needed, he declared, to end "production disorder" and the bill is designed "to readjust production to consumption, the government considering it dangerous to attain this result solely by free competition."

Individual initiative will be respected, he promised, inasmuch as producers are asked to "discipline themselves" by regulations. A special arbitration committee, the legislation provides, will approve the codes devised by the industries, after which the government will enforce them.

Pecora, in D. C., Pays Constitution Tribute

Judge Ferdinand Pecora, who investigated the New York Stock Exchange for the Senate, said that the Constitution had been a vital factor in this country's progress when he spoke yesterday at the luncheon of the Washington Kiwanis Club at the Mayflower Hotel.

Pecora, who now holds a judgeship in New York, declared that the Constitution will be a much-discussed document during this year. He was introduced by A. B. Van Voorhees, general program chairman. Harold N. Marsh presided at the luncheon.

Childs Adopts 'Atmosphere' As New Motif

Each Branch of Restaurant Chain to Have Different Background.

By Kay Ware.

One of the biggest innovations in the restaurant business is introduced. The Childs chain has decided to "atmosphere" its spots. All over the country the grills leave the windows, the white tile and metal fixtures are replaced by fancy settings. Each one is different, each has its own style and atmosphere.

Washington's two most important renovations are these: The Pennsylvania avenue Childs goes Mexican, with adobe, irregular walls, iron railings, scenic paintings, Mexican posters and a hostess resplendent in ruffles and roses behind her ear.

The New York avenue branch runs in the opposite direction. Here the setting is colonial, with paneled walls, wide boards in the floors, antique lighting fixtures and a hostess in hoop skirt.

One wonders how, with all the branches in the country, each Childs restaurant can manage to be individual. However, they're doing it, and judging from the Washington samples, they ought to be good.

Madrillon's high spot on the floor show is Rudiss and Renel, doing the Continental and a South Sea Bolero. Frances Delaney, specialty singer, is a permanent attraction.

Best band of the week is Moe Baer at Club Habana. Special tangoes, and music that has real punch. Consuelo Flowerton, lovely to look at and charming to hear, does sophisticated songs with a New York flavor. Tarrant and Dacita are a dance team above the average.

Heigh-Ho "won't tell" about that new star. Rumor has it that it's a local bit of talent, hitherto not featured, and Heigh-Ho, knowing a thing or two about smart features, plans to announce this hit in about three weeks.

Until then, Baron and Brady are held over another week, the next dance team is undecided, though the Canzinos, or a return of Enters and Borgia are rumored. Be patient, and you'll know pretty soon.

Lombardos came up en masse Wednesday night after the broadcast. Also Joan Abbott, featured in their stage show.

Please, can anyone give Marty Rubin a rhyme for "English?" He's got a parody-writing fever.

Latest service at Mayflower: A prominent lady appeared, wanted a drink really different. Teddy went into conference, and the lady was pleased. So pleased, in fact, that she requested the recipe to be put on file under her name. So if she appears again, it's all hers!

Lord and Lady Dorchester were guests of Arthur J. White recently. Bert Wheeler, film star, and Miss Patsy Parker were seen at the Lounge.

Carlton cocktail lounge is a particularly good selection for these gloomy days. Maybe it's the color, perhaps the fine products of the bartender, or the smooth arrangements of Gilbert and Sullivan airs as played by Sidney's unit.

Leonora's Beauties is the name of Lotus' new show. Consists of a well-trained chorus, a dance team, Ganschi and Sonnan, with original numbers; another team, Gilbert and Fleurette with a modern jazz bit and their version of La "Cockaroacha" as Mr. Benny says. Judy Ellington and Dick Koons duo with the Strickland Capitolians. Kay Wilson sings, and Bob Gilbert goes Russian in his dancing.

Three shows a day.

Tiny shuttles from Shoreham Lounge to ballroom, sings with Barnee and at his own piano. He puts out innumerable choruses to "You're the Top." Incidentally, his contest is bringing good results. If you haven't entered, get out a pencil and write your version of "You're the Top." Tiny offers two champagne cocktails for the best.

Earl Lindsay's Revue is the ballroom show; it consists of many specialty numbers, choruses and what-not.

Casino Russe's big number is Mischa Markoff, guitarist and singer. Next in line is Lee Gould, product of Paris' Comedie Francaise, with dramatic sketches, and Armand Faure, concert pianist.

La Paree features De Costa and Duncan with waltzes and modernistic numbers; Trudy Hummel, Cherrrylynn Wolff and Mitzi Melvin. First two are a sister team, last is an acrobatic dancer.

Pilgrim Club's rough hewn walls, bucket lamp shades and general rough and ready atmosphere are fine for the celebrating spirit. Bert Bernath, orchestra leader, is said to have balked at the puritanical costume, but Pilgrims must be Pilgrims, for all that.

Helen Lloyd, personality singer; Maurine and Nora, dance team, round out an evening's fun.

Club l'Hiver's big moment is Grace Morgan, another personality singer. The town now boasts of three young women performing in that capacity. Billy Scully and band perform in the best New York manner.

Willard's Bamboo Room still soothes the spirit. Maybe it's the greenish atmosphere that prevails. Or Johnny Slaughter furnishing music for all and sundry debutantes.

Ernestine Gardner and Fenton Froom solo and duo, as vocal chorus requires. Ernestine's "Solitude" leads the requests.

U.S. Asked to Pay For Chewin' Seized In Virginia in '65

Representative Burch, of Martinsville, Va., yesterday asked Uncle Sam to pay the heirs of Reuben Ragland, of Petersburg, Va., for a quantity of tobacco Union soldiers seized at Wilmington, N. C., in 1865.

The sum asked, according to the Associated Press, was $28,588.58, with interest at 6 per cent from April 22, 1865, the date the tobacco was sold at auction in New York City by order of the Treasury Department. The sum named is the amount records show the tobacco brought on the auction block.

All was chewing tobacco. There were 223 boxes of "Virginia Navy W," cut plug and 316 drums of "R. Ragland Twist." They were taken from the Harriss & Howell warehouse in Wilmington, placed aboard the seized schooner Emiline C. Johnson and sold in New York. The proceeds were placed to the credit of the United States Treasurer.

Ragland, who fought for the Confederacy, was pardoned by President Andrew Johnson on July 11, 1865, under a special amnesty order.

The case has been pending before the Court of Claims since August 17, 1887.

Drama

FLEMINGTON, N. J., Jan. 10. I saw a 74-year-old man dig a grave 6 feet deep and 6 feet long here yesterday, and though he used no shovel, he completed the task in 15 minutes. The gravedigger was Dr. John F. (Jafsie) Condon, and the man for whom he prepared the grave was pale-faced Bruno Hauptmann.

I say that Jafsie took only fifteen minutes. That is correct. From the time that the battered old clock in the Flemington courtroom passed from 11:20 a. m. to 11:35 a. m., Dr. Condon twice cried out that the "John," who chose a cemetery to receive $50,000 in blood money, was Bruno Richard Hauptmann. At 2:10 that afternoon, after the luncheon recess, Jafsie repeated the identification.

Each time that 74-year-old Dr. Condon was led up to the electrifying charges, I kept my gaze full on the icy-nerved Hauptmann. Others may tell you that he preserved his steely calm, but don't believe them. The first time Jafsie named him dramatically, the muscles of Hauptmann's neck quivered like the neck muscles of a fighter who has been hit with a tremendous right hand.

* * * *

Calming himself by a terrific effort, Hauptmann stilled the telltale shiver in his neck, and then three seconds later, his neck muscles quivered and trembled again. This time, like a stricken fighter getting back to his feet after being felled to the canvas, Hauptmann shook his head in a feeble negative, and then once more, the muscles in his neck went flabby. It sent cold terror into my heart.

Outside, the sun shone brightly. The asthmatic puffing of a steamroller was plainly audible through the open courtroom windows. The courtroom, which reminds you of a church in a small town, with a balcony that is strongly reminiscent of a choir loft, was strangely peaceful. Only the movement of Western Union and Postal Telegraph messengers down the aisles with copy that had been released by Condon's identification of the defendant, indicated that this was tense drama.

Inside the courtroom, a 74-year-old, gray-haired, pedagogue, with a huge watch fob dangling down the center of his vest, was digging a grave. He was strangely benevolent in appearance as he bent to his work, this gravedigger, and there were no traces of clay on his feet to hint at his awful work, but as the clock, tacked to the balcony of the courtroom, reached 11:35, a grave 6 feet deep and 6 feet long had been prepared.

* * * *

Up to the time that I hurried from the courtroom to file this column, Jafsie had not been exposed to the merciless probing which Ed Reilly, for the defense, conducted. Neither Reilly nor anyelse could shake Condon's story.

Condon, anxiously regarded by Bronx authorities as the one doubtful factor in their case because of his reluctance to identify Hauptmann, yesterday gave the State of New Jersey clear-cut emphatic identification on which to hang their charge of murder. The old gentleman was garrulous, and he was dramatic, but he was definite.

Hauptmann yesterday did not call out "Liar!" He sat as if paralyzed, and when I spoke with Reilly and Al Reich in the enclosure during recess, I looked carefully into Bruno's face. It was absolutely drained of blood. He had crossed his knees and his right hand was wedged between his legs.

Condon had hit him repeatedly, murderous, damaging blows, and even the steely-nerved defendant couldn't stand up under the torturous punishment. His face had the pallor of a death mask.

* * * *

Jafsie, called to the stand after Al Reich had completed the testimony which he started the day before, acted up like a self-conscious actor when Attorney General Wilentz started questioning him. He smirked and acted "cute," but once he shook off the trance, he was deadly effective.

The story he told often has been told in the papers. Coming from the veteran's lips, it took on deeper significance. At every stage, Condon was appealing to "John's" emotions, reminding him of his mother, of the cruelty of the thing that was being done to the Lindberghs.

At every stage, "John," or Hauptmann, played with him as a cat plays with a mouse. But today the mouse turned and swallowed the cat. Condon, by his faith in Hauptmann, his insistence that Bruno would confess of his free will, exposed himself to widespread belief that he was one of the kidnap band. Yesterday, Condon struck back. The ledger today was completely balanced, Condon completely vindicated, Hauptmann completely identified.

In the space of 15 minutes, Jafsie went behind the hedges of St. Raymond's Cemetery, dragged Hauptmann forth into the glare of a blinding spotlight, and said: "This is the man."

I do not know much about law. I do know quite a bit about human nature. And from that knowledge, I say that Condon dug a grave that even the brilliant Reilly will not be able to refill. Condon, on cross-examination will not be shaken.

WHAT ARE YOUR SPECIFICATIONS FOR A "PERFECT WHISKEY"?

SIX YEAR OLD WHISKEY gives this mellow BLEND its rich flavor and rare bouquet

Three different blends at three different prices:
De Luxe (Rye and Bourbon)
Imperial · Regal

Penn Maryland De Luxe is offered as "America's Richest Blend," containing 51% fine six-year-old whiskey

Try this mellow old-time type of blend and see how close to 100 it rates

RELEASED only a few weeks ago from the warehouses of National Distillers, this fine whiskey has been hailed everywhere as the type of blend which delighted connoisseurs before the war. Only fully matured, mellow, old whiskey, that had been aging quietly, peacefully in charred oak casks for more than six years, has been used as the base. That, plus skillful blending with the world's finest blending medium,* gives PENN MARYLAND its fine flavor and rare bouquet. Why not try a bottle of this good whiskey today? You will find it measures up to all your specifications.

* Grain neutral spirits are traditionally recognized as the most perfect blending medium known to the distilling art. They possess the unique power of bringing out the fine flavor and delicate bouquet of the six-year-old whiskey with which they are blended to create PENN MARYLAND.

Party Given For Visitor From Spain

Vidal, Military Attache, Fetes Maj. Franco at Westchester.

Ambassador and Senora de Calderon Are Among Guests.

By Evelyn Peyton Gerdon.

The military attache of the Spanish Embassy, Maj. Jose Vidal, entertained yesterday at a large cocktail party in his apartment at the Westchester for Maj. Ramon Franco, of the Spanish Air Corps.

There was an air of good cheer in the large living room where Maj. Vidal received his guests and presented them to Maj. Franco.

In the adjoining room there was a buffet spread with sandwiches and sweets, and a huge silver bowl of delicious punch. There were also cocktails which vied in popularity with the punch. The Ambassador of Spain and Senora de Calderon were among the guests, as were other members of the staff, including the Minister-Counselor, Senor Don Luis Yrujo, regrettably without the charming Senora de Yrujo, who is recovering from an attack of grippe; the First Secretary Senor Don Luis Olivares, who has just returned from a holiday in Spain, and the Agricultural Counselor and Senora de Echegaray, still being congratulated on the successful party they gave New Year's Eve. Senora de Echegaray was in a frock of black crepe trimmed with narrow pleatings of white and a small black hat with a nose veil.

Guests from Other Embassies.

From the British Embassy there was the naval attache, Capt. A. R. Dewar, and from Argentina, Senora de McKinley, wife of the naval attache, who looks exceedingly Spanish in spite of her almost English name. She wore a black crepe frock (which is apparently the smart thing for afternoon wear), trimmed with dainty collar and cuffs of lace.

The new Italian Air Attache and Signora Coppola were there, having just bid farewell to Col. Coppola's predecessor and Signora Sbernadori, who left yesterday for New York to sail January 19 for Italy. The Military Attache of the French Embassy, Col. Emmanuel Lombard, was seen in conversation with a group, and nearby was the Naval Attache of the German Embassy, Capt. Robert Witthoeft, just back from a holiday cruise to the West Indies.

Navy Is Represented.

The genial Minister of Ecuador, Capt. Colon Eloy Alfaro, who is so frequently seen with service people because of his attachment for the United States Army, of which he was once an officer, was there. Capt. Alfaro is a graduate of West Point and has always kept his contacts with his fellow officers.

There were a large group of Navy people present, including Lieut. and Mrs. Gerald Linke, and the latter's sister, Mrs. R. B. Buchanan. Mrs. Linke wore a frock of black with a white tunic and a small black velvet turban, and her sister was also in black with ruffles at the throat and wrists of tiny flesh colored ruffles.

Tea Is Planned For Delegations

Women Democrats Will Entertain Tomorrow at Club House.

The Woman's National Democratic Club will give a tea tomorrow afternoon at the club house, 1526 New Hampshire avenue, to honor the Congressional delegation from Utah, Iowa and the State of Washington. SENORA DE TRUJILLO, wife of the President of the Dominican Republic, who has been visiting Mr. and Mrs. Joseph E. Davies. Senora de Trujillo will leave today for New York and will sail for Europe January 19.

Mrs. Roosevelt Made Honorary Opera Chairman

"La Traviata" to Be Given at Constitution Hall on January 29.

Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt has accepted the honorary chairmanship of the Washington committee for the Cosmopolitan Opera Association of New York, which will present the first opera ever to be given at Constitution Hall, January 29. This event is planned to be a forerunner to the elaborate ball in honor of President Roosevelt's birthday the following night.

Max Rabinoff, general director of the Cosmopolitan Opera Association, also announces that Mrs. James A. Moffett, wife of the head of the Federal Housing Commission, will be active chairman of this committee in Washington. Mr. Ray Baker is vice chairman.

The opera is Verdi's "La Traviata" and a new young soprano who has filled the Hippodrome in New York to its capacity during the fall season of nine weeks, which closed early in December, will sing the title role. She is Edis de Philippe and her role as Violetta already has charmed thousands of music lovers. Armand Tokatyan, Metropolitan Opera tenor, already a favorite with Washingtonians, will sing the role of the hero. Jean Fardulli, a young Greek baritone, who has won operatic and concert laurels in Paris and in Italy, will sing the role of the elder Germont.

Mr. Rabinoff is having special scenic effects designed for Constitution Hall and the stage will be enlarged to permit a ballet. An orchestra of 50 musicians will play the score.

S. W. Gregg to Wed Miss Mary Power

Engagement Announced at West Islip, L. I.

Mr. and Mrs. Edward William Cameron Arnold, of Oknok, West Islip, Long Island, have announced the engagement of the latter's daughter, Miss Mary Trenchard Power, to Mr. Samuel Walter Gregg, jr., son of Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Walter Gregg, of Bradford, Pa.

Miss Power has frequently visited in Washington as the guest of her brother-in-law and sister, Mr. and Mrs. Marshall Marston. She has another sister, Miss Joan Anthony Power. They are daughters of the late Mr. John Anthony Power. Miss Power was graduated from the Spence School in 1930 and was presented to society the following autumn.

Mr. Gregg prepared at Culver Military Academy for the University of Pennsylvania, from which he was graduated in 1934. He is a member of Alpha Sigma Phi and the Mask and Wig Club.

Deb's Diary

Who, What and Where —as She Sees It.

DEAR DIARY:

Why do people—in their so-called lighter moments of leisure and relaxation—take to "sports" that cause their brains much more worry and work than their everyday occupations? The other evening I was looking on at a bridge party. Dorothy Kurtz, in lame, black and the trickiest of silver turbanish hats, Gerard Gullfoyle and Charles McDaniels looked as though they were sitting in on a conference of world peace or the fate of the nations or something. Not far away sat Leonard Lyon, who also takes cards seriously and plays a most agreeable game. It has been suggested that he write a book on the subject.

Don Bean strenuously objects to the trend in fashion that feminine head coverings are taking. Recently he told Mary Win Brown (and she, simply too delighted, repeated it all to me) that her cute little black hat (that the rest of us all like, and is very much like one in brown Bette Hartz wears) looks exactly like a soup tureen. Laughing, Win, her eyes twinkling, demonstrated the different angles at which the bonnet could be worn, finally returning to the tureen effect, and said, softly "It may be a broth holder to him—but well you know the old saying about 'soup to nuts'?"

When doing the round of "at homes" Wednesday Mathilde Rodgers—scintillating as usual, attired in black velvet with a silver cord tied at the neck and a tall crowned black velour hat—and I seemed to be following each other about from one place to another. Stellita Stapleton was wearing a frock and hat of deep, deep blue—just the shade of her merry eyes. Down at the Carlton I glimpsed Mary Cootes, tall and striking in her tomato red suit with touches of black.

Women Take Stand Against Price-Fixing

National Body Finds Practice Harmful to Consumers.

A DEFINITE stand against price fixing in NRA codes has been taken by the National League of Women Voters. Mrs. Harris T. Baldwin, of Washington, vice president of the league, speaking at a hearing yesterday before the National Industrial Recovery Board, declared price fixing in NRA codes is unnecessary and extremely harmful to consumers.

"The League of Women Voters is convinced," Mrs. Baldwin said, "that the interest of consumers is identical with the public interest, and that only as prices are kept down to a level which corresponds to consumer purchasing power can this country have genuine and lasting recovery."

Mrs. Baldwin reported the league's opposition to price-fixing as based on a Nation-wide study of "daily experiences as purchasers and consumers." The principal league conclusions are:

1. Price-fixing leaves the consumer at the mercy of the producer and the distributor.

2. Price-fixing eliminates the protection to the consumer, which competition under the antitrust laws gave, without substituting any other adequate safeguard against prices that are above a fair level.

3. The entire history of price-fixing, both before and during NRA, seems to indicate that price-fixing almost inevitably leads to the policy of high prices and reduced volume.

Cheneys to Be Hosts.

DR. AND MRS. Walter Lynn Cheney will be hosts to the Faculty Women's Club of the George Washington University at 2:30 o'clock today at their home, 3509 McKinley street, Chevy Chase.

Dr. and Mrs. Samuel Flagg Bemis, of New Haven, Conn., will be the guests of honor. Dr. Bemis, formerly professor of history at George Washington University, is now a member of the faculty at Yale University. He will speak on "Changing Conceptions of College Education."

Mrs. William John Cooper, chairman of the hospitality committee, will be assisted by Mrs. John Donaldson, Mrs. Ralph Hoskins Hudson, Mrs. Charles William Hyde, Mrs. Arthur Frederick Johnson, Mrs. Clarence A. Miller and Mrs. W. B. Philip.

Catholic U. Card Party.

THE SECOND annual cooperative alumni-alumnae card party and dance, sponsored by the local chapters of the two branches of the Catholic University Alumni Association, will be held at 8:30 o'clock tonight in the foyer of the John K. Mullen Library on the campus of the university. Miss Sheila Doody is general chairman of the committee on arrangements.

THE LADIES AUXILIARY of the District of Columbia Fire Department will hold its annual installation of officers tonight in the board room of the District Building. New officers are Mrs. Myrtle Moffit, president; Mrs. Madaline Baber, senior vice president; Mrs. Mildred C. Bell, junior vice president; Mrs. Grace Weitzel, secretary; Mrs. Violet Ratcliffe, treasurer; Mrs. Katherine Bucheler, color bearer; Mrs. Carrie Berry, guard; Mrs. Ethel Davis, chaplain.

Mrs. Hibbard to Broadcast.

THE DISTRICT of Columbia Federation of Women's Clubs will present Mrs. Adelaide Hibbard, widely known for her characterizations with the National Theater Players and now a member of the faculty of the Clifford Brooke Academy of Dramatic Art, on the weekly "Among Women" broadcast at 1:15 o'clock today over Station WRC. Mrs. Helen Morrison Hunter, chairman of the radio program, will introduce Mrs. Hibbard.

Experiences in free lance writing with emphasis on marketing will be the subject for discussion at the journalism meeting of the District of Columbia League of American Pen Women at 8 o'clock tonight at the league's studio, 1120 Vermont avenue northwest. The speakers will be Dr. Mary Meek Atkeson Moore and Jackson Turner. The members of Myrta Ethel Cawood's class in feature writing at the Young Women's Christian Association will be the guests of honor.

Mrs. J. H. Dellinger, who has just recently returned from Europe, will be the guest speaker at the meeting of the Women's Alliance of All Souls' Church at 11 o'clock today. She will tell of her experiences in Portugal and England. Mrs. J. M. Aldrich will be the luncheon hostess.

Miss Roche to Speak.

Miss Josephine Roche, Assistant Secretary of the Treasury, will speak before the Woman's National Democratic Club at 7:30 o'clock tonight in the clubhouse. Miss Roche will talk on "The Economic Phases of Public Health Work."

Ten Outstanding American Women Make Stirring Plea Against War

Mrs. Roosevelt, Mrs. Blair, Judge Allen, Mrs. Maloney and Jane Addams Contribute to New Book.

MRS. FRANKLIN D. ROOSEVELT says the war idea is obsolete and should be abandoned.

TEN forceful indictments against war and warmakers are presented by ten women leaders of the United States in a volume published this month entitled, "Why Wars Must Cease." The book is being published in observance of the tenth anniversary of the national committee on the cause and cure of war. The committee will hold its tenth anniversary conference in Washington January 22 to 24. Delegates from 11 national women organizations will attend.

Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt is represented in the volume, "Why Wars Must Cease," by a chapter entitled, "Because the War Idea is Obsolete." Mrs. Emily Newell Blair, of Washington, is author of the chapter, "Because in Modern War You Never Know What You Are Fighting For."

Other Contributors.

Other contributors and their chapters are:

Mrs. Carrie Chapman Catt: "Because if we do not destroy war now, war will destroy us."

Dr. Mary E. Woolley: "Because wars waste human life."

Mrs. William Brown Maloney: "Because wars cost too much."

Florence Brewer Boeckel: "Because wars produce economic chaos."

Judge Florence E. Allen: "Because wars unleash demoralizing instincts."

Dr. Alice Hamilton: "Because every war breeds another war."

Jane Addams: "Because war handicaps the evolution of civilization."

Dorothy Canfield Fisher: "In conclusion."

The book contains many carefully assembled facts about war as well as the arguments and personal expressions of the contributors. It presents figures to show the increase of crime, disease and death both among adults and children, as a result of the World War. It tells how many ships were sunk by submarines, how many persons were killed or injured by air raids and poison gas. It points out that no nation has yet been able to pay its share of the money cost of the World War and probably never will.

Mrs. Blair's Charges.

Mrs. Blair in her chapter attacks the subterfuges under which war is waged, pointing out that every war, after it begins is a "war of defense." She says that while trade rivalries, fears, national prejudices and prides are the chief contributing factors of war, men can not be roused to fight for such things. Consequently, war propagandists must sell a war on the grounds of national defense and the brutality of the enemy. She asserts no nation could recruit an army by announcing that its markets were in peril or that a foreign nation had refused to pay its loans to private citizens of that country. Therefore, these must be rationalized into more emotional terms.

Judge Allen charges in no uncertain terms that the World War caused an increase in crime and produced many serious social problems. She cites the fact that the homicide rate per 1,000 rose from 6 per cent in 1915 to 9.2 per cent in 1932. War by unleasing callousness, cynicism and greed, she says, helped break down the solidarity and standards of the family and caused a lack of social self-control in business, industry and government. The post-war sex craze, the increase of kidnaping and banditry—all these she lays at the door of the World War.

Mrs. Catt is chairman of the committee that compiled the book, which is published by Macmillan.

MRS. EMILY NEWELL BLAIR says all wars are wars of defense after they once begin.

JUDGE FLORENCE E. ALLEN says the World War abetted crime, particularly banditry and kidnaping.

The Notrump Value of Long Suits.

Recognition of the value of the long solid suit for purposes of notrump play should gain a good many points over a period of time. There is probably no more exasperating type of partner than the one who, every time he has a long suit of his own, insists on playing the hand in that suit despite constant reassurance from his partner that every other suit is stopped and that notrump will be the best game declaration.

The South player on the hand below, however, was not one of this type. He not only permitted his partner to play three notrump with the seven-card suit in the dummy, but he redoubled when East unwisely opened his mouth and entered the biddnig.

South dealer.

2♡(3)	Pass	3NT	Dbl.(4)
Redbl.(5)	Pass	Pass	Pass

1—The length and solidity of the heart suit justified the opening bid on this hnad despite the lack of outside honor strength.

2—A doubtful vulnerable overcall, particularly at the level of two-odd.

3—South, with nothing in any suit but hearts, can not stand a double of such a low contract.

4—This double must be attributed to a combination of extreme ego, blind faith and lack of common sense.

5—Without the double by East, South probably would have gone to four hearts—not because he feared a notrump contract, but because he felt that four hearts would be as easy to make as three notrump and he wanted to get in his honor score. However, the double changed things entirely. South saw the opportunity for a swing in his favor and seized it. He knew his partner probably had at least two small hearts and therefore it was better than a ten-to-one shot that there would be seven heart tricks. All that was now needed was a stopper in each of the other suits to make him reasonably sure of fulfilling his contract.

East, on North's double of his partner's two diamond bid, knew that to open that suit should avail little, and he decided to tackle the spade suit, hoping to strike gold there. He almost did. The low spade opening was won by West's King and the spade nine returned. When North covered with the ten and East won with the Jack, South as the dummy began to have misgivings. East now laid down the spade Ace, and the declarer cleverly kept the diamond ten in dummy and discared a club, hoping to give East the impression that he held the diamond Ace. East bit, and after finding out that the spades did not break, did not shift to a diamond but led the club ten. North was now able to spread the hand for four-odd, scoring 400 below the line and 400 above the line for the overtrick, in addition to the rubber score of 500.

Squash Racket Players of U. S. Are Improving

By Ware Torrey and Janet Owen.

SQUASH RACKETS IS on the crest of the sports wave, with local tournaments now and the English Wolfe-Noel team just ahead, making its first appearance the second of February.

American players who went over last year to play for the Wolfe-Noel Cup and take part in the English championship sharpened the edge of their form notably. The improvement in American play is very evident, and is expected to show up still more clearly in the various meetings with the English team.

English Have Wider Courts.

Playing on the wider English courts, using a faster ball than the American one, and meeting English technique brought specific results. The Americans gained increased power in hitting, among other departments of play, and a command of angle shots exemplified by the brilliant and strictly English sidewall nick shot.

The English team will first play the 1934 All-American team on February 2 in New York, and the results can be compared to those of last season as an index of American rise. Two days later the English players are expected to enter the national singles championship in Boston, and on February 12 to Wolfe-Noel Cup series will open in Boston, the English team meeting the 1935 All-American team. The English will play in a further schedule of tournaments, after the Wolfe-Noel matches.

Among the more immediate events are the Pennsylvania State Open championship, at Philadelphia, January 14; New York vs. Westchester, the winner vs. New Jersey, New York, January 15, and the New Jersey State Open championship, January 22, at Plainfield, N. J.

Practical Jokers Would Like to Recall Letter Sent Newspaper.

By Mary Haworth.

DEAR MISS HAWORTH: What should be done in this case? Some time ago a man past his first youth made the statement, in the hearing of several girls who are acquaintances of his, that he would be happy if he were married again.

* * * *

He did not indicate a particular interest in any one girl in the group, and apparently was just generalizing about his desire to marry again, providing he found the right person.

* * * *

As a joke, a letter was written to the press in another city which placed him in an embarrassing position, as it notified the paper he was thinking of marrying again. I think now it was a very mean trick to have played upon this man, and I am sorry for my part in it. Although it was intended only as a joke, it seems now a cheap and common thing to have done.

* * * *

The man is not well and the thoughtless trick has made him very nervous, I hear. I am sure at this date I do not know what can be done to rectify the wrong. Do you? Very sincerely,

MARGARET.

Write to Editor.

DEAR MARGARET: If anything approximating public and adequate atonement for the injustice done this man is to be achieved, it seems to me it will have to be done with the cooperation of the newspaper which printed, in good faith, your regrettable first letter.

* * * *

I suggest all those who participated in compiling and mailing that document get together and draft a concise explanation and retraction of the unwarranted statements contained therein, and mail it to the editor.

* * * *

Inasmuch as his paper was a participant, however innocent, in the unfortunate incident, he should be willing to make whatever redress is fair and necessary to the lucklessly injured party. That may be met either by printing the letter of retraction, or by a paragraph or two of apology and explanation.

* * * *

If such a letter is sent, and there is no question but that it is owing in conscience to the man, a carbon copy should also be mailed to him. There is no justification you can offer for violating his friendly confidence, but you can express your heartfelt personal apology and mortification for the humiliation you have brought upon him.

* * * *

Are your companions in the joke willing to go all the way with you in effecting atonement, or will the burden devolve upon you only? If so, and you see it through along the lines suggested, you are a gallant person, justly entitled to absolution from further cause for self-reproach. M. H.

Miss Haworth will be glad to help you in solving your problems. Write to her in care of The Post Woman's Page.

Birth Control Data Will Be Provided

Birth control advice and instruction will be provided for married women in Birmingham, England, as a result of the recent action of the Birmingham City Council, a news service reports. When a vote was taken in the council there were 58 in favor of the measure and 55 against it. Two unmarried women councilors voted against it. The measure provides that birth control knowledge shall be provided to those women whose health might be endangered without it.

New Way of Evaluating Child Health Is Studied

After ten years as director of the child and maternal health division of the Children's Bureau, Dr. Martha M. Eliot, above, was made assistant chief of the bureau. Here you see her at her office in the new Labor Building.

By Virginia Lee Warren.

A NEWER and better method for evaluating the physical health of children is on its way. Within a few years the old height-and-weight standard may be considered as obsolete as the horse and buggy. Other methods now in use may also be discarded. It all depends upon the conclusions reached by a group engaged in what is known as "The Study of Physical Fitness in School Children."

Chief instigator of the study is Dr. Martha M. Eliot, recently appointed assistant chief of the Children's Bureau. She has long wanted to find out just how much can be learned from the methods now in use; has questioned if they are as efficacious as a physical examination by a physician.

Dr. Eliot sat in her office in the shiny new Labor Building yesterday afternoon and told of the manner in which the study is being conducted.

"We're taking every child in the New Haven, Conn., public schools between the age of 5 years, 9 months and 6 years, 3 months," she explained.

Different Methods Tried.

"We're trying out all the different methods that are now being used to evaluate health. In addition to the height-and-weight standard, we're experimenting with the A. C. H. index, originated several years ago by the American Child Health Association. It consists of taking measurements of the arm, chest and hips. We're also trying out the gain-in-weight method."

Dr. Eliot herself believes the gain-in-weight system is the most reliable and most important one now in use. By that method, she is convinced, it is at least possible to learn whether the child is progressing.

While the height-and-weight standard is rather generally in disrepute, Dr. Eliot defended it to the extent of explaining it was never intended by its originators as an accurate measure of the nutritional condition of children.

"It was intended to be merely a guide to a physician giving a physical examination," she said.

Will Continue Three Years.

The study of New Haven children, which began last September and will continue for three years, is being carried on by the Children's Bureau in conjunction with the Institute of Human Relations of Yale University, the city departments of health and education, and the Pediatric Department of Yale College of Medicine.

It was also in New Haven that Dr. Eliot began a study in 1923 of the effects of cod liver oil on babies suffering from rickets. That study is still going on. But the experiments have reached the stage where a few conclusions can be drawn.

When she began the work with rickety children, Dr. Eliot saw that 450 babies had doses of cod liver oil and sun for three years. Records were kept of this 450 and of another 800 who did not take the treatment.

Already it has been proved that mighty few of those treated retained any permanent ill-effects from rickets.

The main difficulty with the cod-liver-oil treatment lies in getting many mothers to regard it as an essential food.

"It really isn't medicine," Dr. Eliot sad. "It's an essential food, and I'm trying to teach that to mothers. They should act as if they expect the babies to like it, and they do. Some of them even lick the spoon, and I know one little boy who gets cod liver oil as a reward for eating other foods he doesn't like."

Dr. Eliot helped rear 8,000,000 babies while she was director of the Children's Bureau's division of child and maternal health. She held that position for ten years before her appointment as assistant chief of the bureau.

Her book, "Infant Care," has been a Government best seller. It has been sent by the Children's Bureau into 8,000,000 homes.

Riggs House Razing Revives Old Memories

Washington Belles Were Hostesses to Two Princes of Wales.

By Jessie Fant Evans.

IF GHOSTS come back, many old Washingtonians are of the opinion that the gentle but disturbed wraiths of Miss Alice and Miss Jane Riggs must be fluttering in horrified bewilderment about the old Riggs mansion at 1617 I street northwest. It is an irony of fate that the house is to be razed to provide an area for automobile parking, and the motor car was a modernism that the Misses Riggs never accepted.

The proposed razing of the old house has aroused in Washington many memories of the social life that once centered about the Riggs sisters. When the Prince of Wales, afterward King Edward VII, visited Washington during President Buchanan's Administration, he danced with the Riggs sisters, then Washington's leading belles. Virtually the last public appearance of the sisters was when as regents of Mount Vernon they helped receive the present Prince of Wales and accompanied him to the tomb of Washington to lay his memorial wreath.

Dwelt in Seclusion.

During their later years the sisters lived in seclusion and with quiet but determined persistence held at bay all efforts to purchase their home. They also refused to accomodate themselves to usages and customs which they felt ill-accorded with the more stately conventions and procedures which had been a part of their training. Alice Riggs died in 1927 and Jane in 1930. Their brother, Thomas, with whom they had lived in the family mansion after the death of their parents, died in 1881.

Why the Riggs sisters, known in their youth as the "Beautiful Riggs Girls," never married, often puzzled Washingtonians. To the Riggs home came not only the elite of Washington society, but gallants from the foreign legations. The mansion was the mecca of the wealth, fashion, civic and intellectual leadership of the day. While the girls had many suitors, it was reported that none could qualify with the dominant father, George Washington Riggs. The two dutiful daughters, as was the custom of the era, accepted their father's negations and neither ever married.

Clyde Once a Shallow Stream.

The Clyde at Glasgow, a river now wide and deep enough to take care of the launching of great liners, once was so shallow that waders could cross it. This was a century and a half ago before engineers decided to narrow the channel so the stream would dig a deeper bottom.

What Today Means

"Capricorn."

IF JANUARY 11 is your birthday the best hours for you on this date are from 9:45 to 11:45 a. m., from 1:45 to 3:45 p. m. and from 7:45 to 9:45 p. m. The danger periods are from 7:45 to 9:45 a. m., from 3:45 to 5:45 p. m. and from 10:45 p. m. until midnight.

On this January 11 "lucky breaks" may be productive of an exuberance of good spirits. Be careful that they do not cause you to indulge in an overdose of generosity which later on may be regretted.

Lack of regard for social conventionalities would prove a great mistake if indulged in at any formal affair. Married and engaged couples as well as those with a deep attachment which they expect will eventually end in a wedding ring, should be careful of their personal appearance.

If a woman, and January 11 is your birthday, you are of that affectionate nature and temperament that love, as well as admiration, is essential for your complete happiness. The sooner matrimonial bonds encircle you the happier, probably, you will be. You are the type that can successfully combine a business or professional career with a married one.

If a man, and January 11 is your natal day, you are gifted with the ability and capability of not only visualizing but supplying or fulfilling public needs. Opportunity is all you require to enable you to put your ideas into practice, and to win a recognized place in the business or profession you embrace. Engineering, journalism, chemistry or art offer the line of activity which you could make your greatest success.

Here's a Way Of Dressing Up Complexion

New Soap on Market for Women Who Wish to Look Better.

By Ruth Anne Davis.

THE DAY has long passed when a woman need be content with the skin nature has given her. If she wants a few more roses for her cheeks she buys them. As for crimson lips, they are hers for a few paltry pence. The olive-skinned beauty, with a well-chosen bleach, can be lily-fair in a few days, while the girl with a pallid countenance can impart a healthy-looking tan by means of lotions and powders.

The woman with oily skin can counteract the too active secretion of the oil glands just as the woman with dry skin can bring about the proper functioning of hers. Of course, it's all in knowing how, and in knowing what a large part even small things play. For instance, suppose you are treating a dry skin with rich and beneficial creams, but suppose also you wash your face with a soap that dries it out. You are then counteracting much of the good of your cream.

To meet emergencies of this kind, a certain manufacturing concern puts out a complexion soap which comes for both dry and oily skins. If your are bothered with a dry skin, whatever treatments you are taking will be helped by a beneficial scrubbing with the soap every night or morning. If your case of dryness is very mild, the soap itself might be sufficient unto itself. It's the same with the soap for oily skin. You will save both time and money and see quicker and more direct results from your treatments by supplementing them with such a soothing, mellow soap. It costs only 25 cents a cake and lasts for a long time so, as you can see, it spells economy.

Keep Tab on Weight.

Nothing spurs you on to peel off surplus avoirdupois or gain a few pounds more quickly than watching the daily increase—or decrease—of your weight. In fact, health authorities strongly advise every one to have scales conveniently close.

You know it is a lot easier to lose 1 or 2 pounds than it is 12 or 20, and if you keep tab on your weight you will know immediately when the day comes to go without sugar and whipped creams. And it's the same the other way around. Gaining back several pounds at once isn't as easy or as healthy as making up immediately for one or two lost ones.

Inasmuch as these valuable little health and figure preservers may be bought for as little as $1.88 it does seem a shame so many would-be beauties neglect to have their own scales.

Want Round Knees?

A very rich cream originally created for improving the neck and effacing those age-telling hollows has also another use which is particularly applicable now. Inasmuch as so many of the lucky ones have leisure to wind their way southward for the season this cream meets one of their prime needs. When they bask on Southern beaches in scant but smart attire, dark, wrinkled, and crusty-looking elbows and knees will be much in the spotlight. So they must—positively must be filled out and bleached. But how?

It's really quite possible. Whereas everyone can't have pink dimpled knees everyone can have them smooth, and round. This very cream which does so much for crepy necks does equally as much for rusty knees and elbows. Inasmuch as a jar is far less expensive than you'd imagine when you learn the firm name, and since it takes only the merest dab to do the work, it should be a matter of personal pride to put it high on your shopping list.

Even those of us who will stay at home and brave the wintry blasts don evening dresses and look with regret at our shrunken discolored elbows. So, you see a jar of cream does good both at home and far away.

Seersucker for Blouses.

Silk seersucker blouses are setting new styles in wearing apparel—and fast becoming a blouse fad. There are several reasons for their popularity. In the first place, to see them is to want one, or two, or three, and to have one is to realize what a neat little standby it can be. A silk seersucker, such as these, takes to the washtub like a duck to water. You can scrub it for all you're worth and it won't fade and seems never to wear out. And then after the scrubbing as soon as it dries on your back it goes. The seersucker quality makes it unnecessary to iron it.

The blouses are available with shirt colors, big bows or ruffle jabots in prints and mixed colors.

Bench Hampers Popular.

Bench hampers answer two purposes. They are large and roomy for the laundry and also comfortable to sit on while you slip on your shoes and hose.

Some people like them in the bathroom, where they are ready waiting for the towels. Others prefer them as small window seats in the bedroom, where they also serve to hold the laundry, too.

They are available in white, rose, blue, green, and ivory for a very small sum.

Gingerbread Brings 'Spicy' Touch To Refreshing Tea Time in Home

Gingerbread, warm, brown and fragrant with spices, with a filling of snowy, whipped cream cheese and a hint of tart currant jelly somewhere between the layers, will form a perfect accompaniment for a cup of hot tea.

Wise Housewife Permits Family and Friends to Extend Hour.

By Dorothea Duncan.

WHEN THE SUN rolls westward and droops, a flaming ball to touch the tallest tree top, it is high time to light the fire and put on the kettle. Tea time—that good old-fashioned custom—never fails to bring an hour or two of cheerful repartee and deep contentment.

Sunday is perhaps the only day in the week when time permits the working ones to escape to the fireside and enjoy a fragrant cup of tea. The wise housewife will permit her family and friends to linger an extra hour or two over their cups and conversation on this particular day. This will extend the tea hour through supper time, and thus eliminate the one meal of the week that is really unessential.

For the tea hour that embraces the supper one as well, tea unaccompanied is hardly sufficient. Something spicy but not too sweet and a dish that is dainty as well as nourishing will be the perfect one to serve with tea. Gingerbread seems to fill all the requirements, especially if it is served with a snowy topping of cream cheese whip, and possibly a hint of tart currant jelly somewhere in its makeup.

Gingerbread is one of the few dishes that still holds the glamour of childhood memories. Be certain then that your recipe will turn out a bread that is a picture of perfection—warm, brown and fragrant with spices. If you hold your recipe in the slightest doubt, try this one.

Gingerbread.

½ cup sugar
4 tablespoons butter
1 egg
½ cup sour milk
½ cup molasses
1¾ cups flour
¼ teaspoon salt
1 teaspoon ginger
1 teaspoon cinnamon
½ teaspoon allspice
½ teaspoon cloves
½ teaspoon nutmeg
1 teaspoon soda
1½ teaspoons baking powder
2-3-ounce package cream cheese.

Cream sugar and butter; add beaten egg, then add sour milk and molasses alternately with dry ingredients sifted together. Pour into a greased and floured shallow pan and bake, 30 to 45 minutes, in a moderate oven (375 degrees F.).

When cool, trim the edges of the gingerbread, split into two layers. Spread the bottom layer with tart currant jelly and cover with a generous layer of the cheese which has been softened and beaten to a creamy consistency with either milk or cream. Press the other layer on top and serve in pie-shaped wedges.

'Wrap-Over' House Dress Comfortable and Convenient

Pattern No. 770.

HERE IS THAT comfortable fashion, a simple little house frock that is really easy to slip on. Just put it on like a coat, wrap it over, and button it up. You are dressed in the twinkling of an eye, and not a hair mussed in the process. Furthermore, it is just as easy to wash and iron as it is to slip on. One-piece, and cut so that you can lay it out perfectly flat on the ironing board.

This dress is just one of the many good-looking frocks for the home-maker featured in our pattern book. We have made it in a wide range of sizes, from 14 to 42. Size 18 (36) requires 3½ yards of 39-inch material.

Cod Liver Oil For Wounds.

PROF. WILHELM LOHR recently reported rather startling results following the use of crude cod liver oil in the treatment of wounds. He applied this substance to ulcers, burns and, in fact, any wound in which there was a loss of one or more layers of the skin. He followed the application with the use of a plaster of Paris bandage which insured rest for the part.

It appears that Lohr had been much impressed with the effect of cod liver oil on wound healing when given by mouth to children. He reasoned that if the cod liver oil were valuable as a strengthening or supporting treatment (possibly through its vitamin content) it would function as effectively when applied directly to the wound itself.

Cod liver oil is practically sterile and has some effect in destroying bacteria. Inasmuch as the oil was too fluid for application he combined it with another fat, so that the resulting mixture was a soft paste. This was applied directly to wound surfaces and it was discovered that the growth of bacteria was greatly retarded and the toxins rendered harmless. Furthermore, it was found that the foul surface of infected wounds quickly took on a healthy appearance and that healing proceeded with unusual rapidity. When the wound was producing great quantities of pus the treatment resulted in the rapid throwing off of dead tissue.

In an old infected wound the plaster of Paris cast is not used until the wound is fairly clean. Placing the injured part at rest by means of a plaster bandage, however, is considered an important part of the Lohr treatment. In fairly clean wounds the plaster bandage is applied at once.

What vitamins have to do with the healing of wounds remains for further investigation. Lohr's results are too favorable to be disregarded, and the household medicine chest of the future may contain a bottle of cod liver oil as "first aid to wounds."

The Alleged Great Aunt

By Henry Kitchell Webster, Janet Ayer Fairbank and Margaret Ayer Barnes

When Gilbert Meade sets out to discover whether Lily De Long, one time opera star, really married his great-uncle and is entitled to a share in his fortune on his death, he comes to these conclusions: That Lily is innocent of intrigue, but her banker, Charles Bradley, is perpetrating a fraud; that Bradley is responsible for her leaving her house suddenly, with the announcement she is going to California; and that the reason for Bradley's apparent perturbation lies in the fact that a girl who has been retained as secretary to Lily bears a striking resemblance to her. Although Lily does not know it, Jane is actually her granddaughter; in that case she, instead of Bradley, would control Lily's money on her death. Jane and Gilbert decide to examine Lily's scrapbooks.

THE book that Gilbert had taken down that morning still lay on his desk. It was an old billhead with a rough woodcut of a ramshackle barn on it and below was printed: "Lion's Livery Stables. Horses Boarded. Funeral Carriages Furnished." Above the picture was the address, "Middlebury, Vermont."

"What has this to do with Lily?" Jane's voice was puzzled.

"I can't imagine. Maybe she was born there."

"If she was, she certainly lived it down. See, Gilbert! Here's something interesting."

It was a program, evidently of school exercises, written in a painstakingly fine elaborate hand. Among other attractions a significant one stood out in a larger lettering. "Little Lily Long—Tenting Tonight."

"My goodness, she must have been the livery stable keeper's daughter! Look, Gilbert, it says Middlebury and the date is 1864. Say she's 80 now, that would make her 10 years old then!"

Proud Parent's Work.

Gilbert's voice broke in eagerly. "And she would have sung a war song. That was the last year of the Civil War. Of course she was Long's little girl and I must say it will be a shame if my book's never written!"

Jane's eyes were shining. "Wouldn't it be wonderful! A spectacular diva sprung from a place like that. The gutter might be credible; genius often springs from the gutter. But New England at its densest—and a father who furnished funeral carriages—oh, she's marvelous!"

The first scrapbook had been kept with a certain amount of care. Possibly a proud parent had treasured its now yellowed pages. It was extraordinary at how many places the child Lily had sung — at churches, granges, bazaars, the meetings of temperance societies. The last Middlebury item was the printed program of a traveling road company which played at the opera house, in which "Lily Long" was billed to sing. After that there was nothing but an envelope stuffed full of clippings from small town newspapers, which indicated that Lily had made a New England tour.

Reached New York.

"I'll bet she ran off and joined the show," Jane laughed.

"Sixteen years old? Of course she did."

The remaining books were not numbered but set haphazard on the shelves, and Gilbert could only determine in what order they came by the date on an occasional letter or clipping. Before the second book was filled, Lily had reached New York, and there she had apparently repeated her early experience in Middlebury, singing wherever she had a chance.

Lily Long sailed for Europe before she was 20. The date on the ship's program for the British seamen's benefit at which she sang "Auld Lang Syne" proved that. The next three years were a mystery. It was not until she was singing small roles in opera in provincial Italian cities and had added the "De" to her name that she preserved any further record of her career. After that, however, there was a fairly steady and orderly succession of notices of her triumphs all over Europe.

"What a life she's had," Jane said, wonderingly. She had come upon a discreetly veiled reference to an intimate interlude with a scion of the Hapsburgs. "And what a long way she traveled, spiritually speaking, from Middlebury, Vt."

Countless Roles.

Lily sang in New York in 1885. It was, so far as they could discover, her first return to the United States. Her success was immediate and critics praised her voice, her dramatic power and, above all, her beauty.

"I don't blame Uncle Gilbert," his nephew said, feelingly. "That enchanting girl bursting on New York in the eighties, trailing behind her clouds of glory——"

"And a chignon and a bustle!" Jane interrupted him frivolously. "Look at this!"

It was a cabinet photograph of Lily in a sealskin sack and a little tip-tilted bonnet, taken in a simulated snowstorm. There were countless others in the conventional costumes of the ill-fated heroines of "Lucia," "La Somnambula," "Rigoletto," "El Trovatore" and "El Traviata." In sereval of them Gilbert pointed out the resemblance to Jane.

The shrill ring of the telephone broke in on them. "Albany!" she exclaimed, and they both started for the door. Jane was the first to reach the telephone.

No Trace of Her.

"Hello—Hello! Long distance," she added, over her shoulder. Then, "It's the Attorney General's office." The nerves along Gilbert's spine tingled and his mind came to focus entirely on Lily. "You'd better take it."

Jane handed him the receiver, and he heard some one saying: "I'm speaking for the Attorney General. Is this Mr. Meade?"

"Yes. Go ahead."

"We've had the Century checked and no old lady got off at any of the stations. We also had the personnel of the passengers covered and there's no one answering your description on board."

"Thank you very much," said Gilbert heavily. "You've been very kind."

"The handwriting expert," the voice went on, "is on the way to Stanwix Falls—he left Albany about an hour ago."

Jane read his face as Gilbert hung up the receiver. "She's not on the train," she said. "I knew she wouldn't be, didn't you?"

"Yes. I'm afraid I did," Gilbert answered, despondently. "Of course, she may have missed the connection or changed her mind or——"

Drew the Curtains.

Jane shook her head. "No," she said slowly. Then, after a long moment, "Well, we can't do a thing until the handwriting man gets here. Let's go back to the scrapbooks."

When they returned to the study, dusk was already creeping in the corners.

"It's getting dark, Gilbert," said Jane. She glanced at the garden, a faint, fearful apprehension in her eyes.

"It's half past 6. We'd better turn on the lights." Gilbert snapped a button on the globe that swung over his bed and Jane lighted a lamp on the desk. Making no explanations, he went over to the windows and drew the brown velvet curtains.

"That's better," said Jane gratefully.

"Much better," said Gilbert. He was thinking that the drawn curtains within and the dark night without made him seem pleasantly alone with Jane.

"I'm dying to find out if we can discover anything about your Uncle Gilbert," Jane declared. "In 1885 we must be getting warm."

No Mention of Him.

For so completely self-centered and egotistical a person, however, Lily had kept this record which she had made of her life singularly free from personal reference. Although they searched carefully they came upon no mention of the original Gilbert Meade's name.

"No gossip column then," smiled Gilbert, "and a good thing too."

The only thing they found which was even remotely connected with her lover's life was a small item cut from a newspaper to the effect that Miss De Long had gone to her home in upper New York State at the end of the opera season. It was dated 1886.

On the next page they came upon a tintype of Lily in an entirely new role. Dressed in a striped blazer, pleated skirt and flat-crowned straw sailor, she was standing in a rowboat, holding up an enormous fish, a pole in her other hand. Apparently she was inordinately proud of this feat for, contrary to her usual custom, she had scrawled beneath it in her large, irregular writing, "Moosehead Lake, August, 1886."

Jane looked at it curiously. "I wonder where that was taken."

"It might be anywhere. There's a Moosehead Lake in every State of the Union."

After that Lily had evidently gone back to Europe, for throughout the remainder of that book and the whole of the following one, there was nothing but musical criticism from the Paris, Berlin, Vienna, Milan and London press. Gilbert was unreasonably disappointed.

"I must confess," he said, "that I'd been hoping we'd find proof that Lily and Uncle Gilbert were really married."

"But I don't believe they were," Jane said. "At least, if they were married up here, where every one must have been all agog about them, I think it's very odd that no one found it out. You can't tell me that in—when did they spend the summer here?"—she glanced at the scrapbook—"in 1886, they could have slipped over to the county seat unobserved and——" Her voice died down, then rose again sharply, "Gilbert! It was 1886, wasn't it?"

"Why, yes, I think——" He was turning over the pages. "Yes; May, 1886. Why?"

"Because," she looked at him earnestly, "that marriage record in the county building read June 18, 1887."

Democrats Go Out of Office In Montgomery

Fusion Ax Swings; Walker Retained, However, in Dispensary Post.

More Democratic heads fell yesterday before the Fusionists in Montgomery County, Md. One surprise appointment, however, continued for six months more the post of John C. Walker, of Chevy Chase, organization Democrat, as manager of the county liquor dispensary system.

Walker's salary was reduced to $3,000 a year, but he was given a six months' appointment. Two members of the liquor control board were appointed by the county commissioners. They were Jack S. Eaton, of Chevy Chase, secretary of the Fusion central committee, and Frank P. Welsh, of Wheaton, both Progressive Democrats. Kenneth Lyddane, Rockville attorney, who resigned his $2,000 a year job as counsel of the supervisors of election to join the Fusion Party just before election, was appointed counsel to the liquor board at $600 a year, the same salary as the new members. The previous salaries for the board and counsel were $2,400 a year.

Other Appointments.

Preston L. Snyder of Travilah, Republican, was appointed supervisor of school property to replace Frank Proctor at a salary of $2,400 a year. William Miles, of Forest Glen, Republican, was appointed a clerk in the county treasurer's office at a salary of $1,300 per annum to replace Miss Jean Skinner, resigned. Judge Harry Hunt, 3rd, Progressive Democrat, former judge of the Orphan's Court, was appointed clerk to the supervisors of assessments at $1,800 to replace Clyde Harris.

In a number of lesser appointments Republicans were given the following: Sam Duvall, Fred Howard and Richard Gates, all colored, janitors of the courthouse, $300 a year each; Pearl Washington, colored, charwoman of the courthouse, $60 a month; Charles H. Grimes, of Barnesville, elevator operator at the courthouse, $900, to replace James P. English; M. J. Dickerson, of Wheaton, night watchman at the Silver Spring liquor dispensary, to replace Donald Bowie, sr., at a salary of $100 a month.

The county commissioners voted to appropriate $1,500 to the Social Service League for the present month's deficit after considerable discussion. Charles E. King, Progressive Democratic member of the board, who declared the league had wasted funds and was keeping persons in idleness who should be working, did not vote. Other members of the board, however, said Mr. King apparently had confused the league with another board which gives aid to persons who are able to work but are unable to find work. The league cares only for persons who are not employable.

Robert E. Bondy told the commissioners the league expends funds donated by public-spirited persons in a far larger amount than that donated by the county commissioners and pointed out that the care of indigent and aged and of child welfare rightfully belongs with the county board of commissioners. He declared the league would turn over its functions to the board if that body wanted to take the responsibility.

Road Plan Presented.

The Bradley Hills Community League, through a delegation comprised of Maj. C. A. Keys, C. H. Merryman, Mrs. Lily Stone, Col. A. B. Barber and J. H. Cranford, presented a program of road building for Potomac district, emphasizing the need for improvement of Seven Locks road, which they declared to be impassable in bad weather. The commissioners said they hoped to be able to get to the work shortly if their plea for EWA labor and use of State roads commission machinery is granted.

The legislative committee of the Montgomery County Civic Federation appeared to urge adoption of the 11-point legislative program sponsored by the federation. Emphasis was placed on the federations proposal that the liquor control board be abolished and its functions maintained by the county commissioner board. W. I. Cleveland, H. S. Yohe and Robert E. Bondy appeared for the committee.

The commissioners indorsed the proposal of the Silver Spring Volunteer Fire Department that the $4,300 per annum limitation on its taxing ability be removed, retaining the 6-cent limitation. The department proposes that it prepare an annual budget for submission to the county commissioners and that its tax rate be fixed to care for this budget. Disputed items would be subject to a public hearing. The department, through Leo Bender and William J. Jouvenal, pointed out that it has a $7,200 budget this year and will receive but $5,800, leaving a $2,000 deficit, which it is powerless to overcome.

The legislative program of the Bethesda Chamber of Commerce was received and filed for reference.

Communications Commission members nominated are George Henry Payne, of New York; Irvin Stewart, of Texas; Norman Case, of Rhde Island; Paul Walker, of Oklahoma; Thad. H. Brown, of Ohio, and Eugene O. Sykes, of Mississippi.

The reappointment of Adolph C. Miller, formerly of California, as a member of the Federal Reserve Board, was included.

The following were nominated as members of the National (railway) Mediation Board: John Carmody, of New York; James W. Carmalt, of this city, and William M. Leiserson, of Ohio.

3 Women Injured In Virginia Wreck

Auto Plunges Into Creek After Roanoke Collision.

Roanoke, Va., Jan. 10 (AP).—Three women were injured this morning at Cloverdale Park near here, when their automobile collided with another car and plunged down an embankment into Tinker Creek.

The injured are Mrs. Robert E. Robinson, of Clifton Forge, her mother, Mrs. Susan Snead, of Charlottesville, and Mrs. Mary Bruce Harvey, of Clifton Forge. They were taken to the Chesapeake & Ohio Hospital at Clifton Forge in an ambulance from Troutville.

Mrs. Snead suffered a fractured collar bone and other injuries not fully determined late today at the hospital. She was considered the most seriously injured. Mrs. Robinson suffered a broken leg and cuts and bruises and Mrs. Harvey received lacerations about the head and minor cuts.

Young Mother Of 3 Is Suicide In Westminster

Mrs. Mary Hill Sends Her Small Daughter Away and Uses Shotgun.

Westminster, Md., Jan. 10 (AP).—An inquest into the shooting of Mrs. Mary Hill, 23, whose blood-stained body was found in her home today by a neighbor, was deemed unnecessary by Carroll County authorities.

Following an investigation by Coroner George E. Benson, Sheriff John A. Shipley and State's Attorney George N. Fringer, they expressed the belief Mrs. Hill shot herself with a shotgun, despondent over ill health.

Mrs. Hill, whose husband was working at a laundry at the time, had sent her 4-year-old daughter, Margaret, to tell the neighbor, Mrs. Kenneth Caple, to "come upstairs." Mrs. Caple, when she went upstairs, found the body on the floor.

Mrs. Caple told officials that Mrs. Hill had come to her house early in the day, complaining of not feeling well, she said she advised the young woman to return home to rest and volunteered to do the family wash for her.

Mrs. Hill is survived by her husband and three small children.

Roosevelt Lists Many Nearby ForPromotions

D. C., Maryland, Virginia Names Among 3,616 Sent to Senate.

Among 3,616 nominations sent to the Senate yesterday by President Roosevelt—most of them recess appointments—were promotions for numerous Government, Army and Navy officers of the District of Columbia, Maryland and Virginia.

Appointments in the State Department included Julius G Lay, of the District, to be minister to Uruguay; Clarence J. Spiker, of the District, consul general, and Dorsey Gassaway Fisher, of Maryland, secretary in the diplomatic service.

Is This Too Good for Your Cough?

Creomulsion may be a better help than you need. It combines several helps in one. It is made for quick relief, for safety.

Mild coughs often yield to less helps. No one can tell. No one knows which factor will do most for any certain cough. So careful people more and more, are using Creomulsion for any cough that starts.

The cost is a little more than a single help. But your druggist is authorized to guarantee it, so it costs nothing if it fails to bring you quick relief. Coughs are danger signals. For safety's sake, deal with them by the best way known.—Adv.

WATCH KIDNEYS SAME AS BOWELS

Wash Out Your 79,200 Feet of Kidney Tube

Your bowels contain only 27 feet of intestines, yet the kidneys contain nearly a million tiny tubes or filters which would measure 79,200 feet if laid end to end. Therefore, it is just as important to watch the kidneys as the bowels. Kidneys are working all the time and are Nature's chief way of taking the acids and poisonous waste out of the blood.

Healthy persons pass 3 pints a day through the bladder which contains nearly 4 pounds of waste matter. If you pass less than this amount, your 79,200 feet of kidney tubes may be clogged with poisonous waste. This is the danger signal and may be the beginning of nagging backache, leg pains, loss of pep and vitality, getting up nights, lumbago, swollen feet and ankles, rheumatic pains and dizziness.

Kidneys should be watched closely and need cleaning out the same as bowels. Ask your druggist for DOAN'S PILLS, an old prescription, which has been used successfully by millions of kidney sufferers for over 40 years. They give quick relief and will help to wash out your 79,200 feet of kidney tubes.

But don't take chances with strong drugs and so-called "kidney cures" which claim to fix you up in 15 minutes. Your common sense will tell you that this is impossible. Treatments of this nature may seriously injure and irritate delicate tissues. Insist on DOAN'S PILLS, the old reliable relief that contains no "dope" or habit-forming drugs. Be sure you get DOAN'S PILLS at your druggist. © 1934, Foster-Milburn Co.

Nice Selects W. W. Dawson As Attorney

Republican Gets Place on Montgomery County Board.

Democrat Retained as Chief Clerk in the Executive Offices.

Annapolis, Jan. 10 (Spl.).—Announcement of the appointment of Walter W. Dawson, Republican, as attorney for the Planning Commission of Montgomery County was among the first matters disposed of by Gov. Harry W. Nice when he began wading into business affairs of the executive office today.

Mr. Dawson is a cousin of Thomas W. Dawson, whose appointment as secretary of State was confirmed yesterday by the Senate. For a time he was considered in line for appointment to that post. The situation reached such a state that the Governor left it to the two cousins to decide, and Walter, the younger, stepped aside.

The planning commission's attorney was a member of the Montgomery County delegation in the House during the last two sessions of the Legislature and has been active in his party's affairs.

Chief Clerk Is Retained.

Although Gov. Nice has planned not to go into the matter of general appointments until the administration's legislative program is well on its way, he announced today the retention of R. Murray Hooper, formerly of Dorchester County, as chief clerk in the executive offices, key post in the office set-up. Hooper, a Democrat, has been connected with the office continuously for 25 years. He was first appointed assistant clerk by the late Gov. Austin L. Crothers, and became chief upon the death of Carl Hardy, 10 years ago. Because of his wide familiarity with the immense amount of detail, Gov. Nice determined it would be unwise to attempt a change.

Another reappointment among the State House employes, announced by the Governor, is that of Julian B. Spencer, of Annapolis, officially listed as "messenger to the executive," but whose chief duty is that of assisting in operating the elevator in the Capitol.

Governor on Job Early.

Refreshed somewhat from the strenuous activities of his inauguration yesterday, Gov. Nice plunged into work. He was at the executive office early and remained the greater portion of the day, devoting much time to consideration of his program of legislation, particularly to the State's finances. He found time, however, to receive a number of friends who called to offer congratulations.

The new chief executive is concentrating upon final stages of the budget bill which, he said, will be ready for presentation to the legislature when it reconvenes next week.

Petersburg Hospital Staff Holds Election

Petersburg, Va., Jan. 10 (Spl.).—At the annual meeting of the Petersburg Hospital staff, the following officers for 1935 were elected: Dr. D. W. Bowman, chairman; Dr. E. J. Nixon, vice chairman; Dr. Wright Clarkson, secretary; Dr. H. M. Snead, vice secretary, and Dr. H. C. Jones, member of the medical committee.

Dr. William A. Reese is the retiring chairman.

Chairmen of the various sections were elected as follows: Medicine, Dr. E. W. Young; secretary, Dr. W. B. McIlwaine; surgery, Dr. E. J. Nixon, chairman, and Dr. H. Cantor, secretary; eye, ear, nose and throat, Dr. Meade Edmunds, chairman; X-ray, Dr. W. A. Barker, chairman.

Rents Apartment Through Post Ad

The vacant room or apartment that you now have can be comfortably and profitably filled. It does seem that there is a shortage of desirable places to live—and that shortage is plainly evident among Post Classified readers. So if you are a penny-wise, prudent landlord with a vacant apartment or comfy room—do not keep them vacant. Follow the example of Mrs. W. T. Shreve, 1241 Evarts street northeast. She had a vacant, two-room apartment. She called The Post and ordered her "Rental" ad inserted for seven days. Called the second day to cancel the ad, for she already had rented to a most desirable tenant. The total cost to Mrs. Shreve to secure a tenant was 68 cents.

It makes no difference whether you wish to buy, sell, rent or exchange. Results are what you are seeking—and results are what you get, speedily and economically, when you use Post Classified Ads.

Governor Nice Brings State a "First Lady"

MRS. HARRY W. NICE,
new chatelaine of the Maryland gubernatorial mansion, with Buddy, the Boston terrier which is a member of the official family. In the background is a portrait of the Governor.

Boston Terrier, Second Butler and Second Maid Help Her Occupy Executive Mansion; She'll Do Own Shopping.

Annapolis, Md., Jan. 10 (Spl.).—Today, for the first time in 15 years, there is a "lady of the house" in the executive mansion.

Yesterday Mrs. Harry W. Nice saw her husband sworn in as Governor of Maryland. This morning she arose to reestablish the domestic routine which functioned so smoothly in the Nice's private home in Baltimore.

Gov. Albert C. Ritchie, who occupied the square brick mansion from 1921 until yesterday, maintained a masculine establishment. His butler is being retained by the new tenants of the mansion, and the domestic staff has been augmented by servants who have been with the Nices for years.

Mrs. Nice expressed herself on politics shortly after her husband was elected last November. Her activity is entirely indirect, she declared—it consists of making her husband as comfortable as possible. Whether life goes on in Annapolis or in Baltimore, in a private home or the Governor's official residence, it will be devoted to smoothing the domestic environment of the man she married 30 years ago.

"Hospitality" Assured.

Mrs. Nice has promised to bring to the mansion "the traditional hospitality for which Maryland is noted," she says.

"You may be quite sure there will be plenty of social life with us in the Governor's Mansion. We've always been fond of company. We like informal entertaining."

Maryland's first lady has decided to continue her Baltimore practice of doing her own shopping. Twice a week, she says, she will visit the excellent waterfront market of this little harbor and choose from the Eastern Shore produce which comes here in schooners big and little. There will be the products of the soil of southern Maryland, too, as well as the vast variety of seafood from Maryland's pride, the Chesapeake Bay.

Under Gov. Ritchie, the Democratic senators from the Eastern Shore had the laudable practice of bringing him, once each session, enough terrapin meat for a Lucullan feast. Invitations to these terrapin dinners were one of the most coveted prizes of political prominence. Gov. Nice is a Republican, but there are Republican senators from the Eastern Shore, too. Terrapin dinners at the executive mansion may not cease with the departure of Mr. Ritchie to private life.

Ritchie's Butler Stays.

Preparing for an expanded program of entertaining, Mrs. Nice has increased her staff of servants. Not only is Gov. Ritchie's butler being retained, but the butler's wife has been added to the menage. From Baltimore Mrs. Nice has brought her cook, Annie, who has been with her for 17 years, and Mary, the housemaid with seven years' service under the new Governor. There is also a second butler and a second maid. Gov. Ritchie advised them to get the second butler, it was learned.

The gubernatorial household will consist of the Governor and Mrs. Nice, their 25-year-old son, Harry, jr., and Buddy, the Boston bull pup. Buddy came to Annapolis with the party yesterday, and he will stay as long as the Nices do.

Use Own Furniture.

The strain on Mrs. Nice yesterday was considerable. She was barely able to see her husband through the crowd as he took the oath of office, but she could see that he was trembling visibly. She watched him perspire under the movie lights as he read his inaugural address. She stood beside him while countless well-wishers filed by him at the reception in the old Senate chamber. She was with him still when their more intimate friends came to a later reception in their new home. And it was 10 o'clock before the last guest left and they could retire.

Today she has not only to arrange the schedule of household duties. There is furniture to be moved in and placed. The Nices are bringing some of their own pieces from the Mount Washington home just outside Baltimore. Some of them were in place yesterday. Others will be brought down this week.

Mrs. Nice doesn't expect the change in the family's political fortunes to change her life much. Her home, she says, is her main interest, and a home has to be run whether it is in Annapolis or Baltimore. One change will be made—she always drove the new Governor to his office when he was in law practice in Baltimore. Now, with the State House just across the street from the executive mansion, this duty will become unnecessary.

Nor will the move to Annapolis change her recreations.

"I love my flowers. I love my car. I love my home and my husband most of all. I'm not at all a club woman. I don't play golf, I'm not crazy about bridge. I wouldn't commit suicide if I couldn't find a game. Wherever Mr. Nice goes, I take him. He never goes alone. I wait for him when he is attending evening meetings. If he's at lodge, I go to the movies. He knows where the car is parked."

And so, life in Annapolis for Mrs. Nice will not differ greatly from life in Baltimore. There will be more formal fetes and festivities. And for Annapolis, there will be a "lady of the house" if some vendor has the temerity to ring the polished brass bell of the executive mansion's door.

St. Marys Bank Condition Better

Leonardtown, Md., Jan. 10 (Spl.).—At the annual meeting of the officers and stockholders of the First National Bank of St. Marys County here all officials were reelected. They are: Directors, George W. Joy, Dr. F. F. Greenwell, Dr. L. B. Johnson, George Quirk, Claude Guy, L. J. Sterling and Daniel T. Dixon. Officers: George W. Joy, president; Daniel T. Carroll Sale Nets $4,330 For 18 Plots

Property Formerly Used for School Purposes Is Auctioned.

$900, Top Price, Paid by Union Bridge Fire Company.

Westminster, Md., Jan. 10 (AP).—A total of $4,330 was realized by Carroll County in the sale of 18 pieces of property which have formerly been used for public school purposes.

The sale was conducted yesterday by John W. Reaver, an auctioneer who served eight years as a member of the Board of County Commissioners. Two lots were withdrawn from the sale.

All of these public school properties have been abandoned as a result of the consolidation of the public schools of Carroll County. They were offered for public sale after being advertised for a month by the Board of Education of Carroll County.

Range of Prices.

The prices ranged from $900, which was bid by the Union Bridge Fire Company No. 1, for 2½ acres in the southwest section of Union Bridge, to $15 for less than half an acre near Bachmans Valley.

Many of these properties are to be converted by the new owners into residence sites. In some places the schools were abandoned after the settlement, including the general stores, blacksmith shop and homes, had been vacated.

The schools and lots sold at the public sale were:

Pine Hill, three-fourths acre with brick building and large trees, on Taneytown-Emmitsburg road near Monocacy River, sold to A. J. Ohler for $327.50.

Mayberry, one-half acre with brick building and some timber, in northeast section of Mayberry, sold to A. W. Feeser & Co. for $325.

Sale at Wisner.

Wisner, 55 square perches of land with brick building on the Deep Run School-Bachman's Valley road near Big Pipe Creek, sold to David C. Witter for $310.

Hood's Mills, three-fourths acre with frame building, in Freedom district near Hood's Mills, sold to H. L. Brown for $220.

Gaither, about 110 square perches of land with brick building, in village of Gaither near Sykesville, sold to W. R. McCardell for $305.

Ebbvale, one-half acre with brick building, in Manchester district on road from Bachman's Valley to Manchester, sold to H. C. Harris for $100.

Plot With Building.

Royer, one-half acre with brick building, near State highway half way between Manchester and Westminster, sold to J. Herring Brown for $265.

Lineboro, 68 square perches of land with large improved brick building, in town of Lineboro, sold to Denton Warehime for $450.

Bachman's, less than one-half acre, near Bachman Church, sold to Stanley Pennington for $15.

Cranberry, one-half acre with brick building, on Sullivan road two miles from Westminster, sold to H. C. Harris for $330.

Stonesifer, 57 square perches of land on old Bachmans Valley road, sold to heirs of the late Joshua Stonesifer for $20.

Sale at Leister.

Leister, 79 square perches of land with stone building, on State road from Leisters Church to Snydersburg, sold to Melvin Bollinger for $57.

Brown, one-half acre with brick building, in Hampstead District near end State road from Leisters Church to Houcksville, sold to John Neudecker for $100.

Park Hall, one-half acre with brick building near New Windsor, sold to Maurice Baker for $122.50.

Union Bridge, 2½ acres, in southwest section of Town of Union Bridge, sold to Union Bridge Fire Company No. 1 for $900, but possession reserved until July 1 and portable school building to be removed.

Frame Stucco Building.

Western Chapel, one-half acre with frame stucco building, between Westminster-Mount Airey road and Stone Chapel near Westminster, sold to A. A. Danner for $40.

Sweet Air, one-half acre with brick building, in Berrett District, on Sams Creek road, sold to Bethel Church of God for $250.

The two pieces of property withdrawn from sale were Pleasant Gap, 2 acres of land with a large improved frame building at Gist, and Winfield, 1 acre with brick building in Winfield.

Postmasters Listed For Carroll County

Westminster, Md., Jan. 10 (Spl.).—Recommendations for temporary appointment of Democratic postmasters in four Carroll County towns have been forwarded to Representative William P. Cole, jr., by the Democratic State central committee.

Those recommended until an examination for a four-year appointment is held were Millard H. Weer, Sykesville; John W. Murray, Hampstead; William D. Lovell, Jr., New Windsor, and Nelson Hitchcock, Taneytown.

Police Seize Illicit Liquor; Arrest Four

Largest Virginia Raid Since Repeal Made in Chesterfield.

Whisky, Gin, Alcohol and Ale Grabbed in Club Invasion.

Richmond, Va., Jan. 10 (AP).—Chesterfield County police today reported the seizure of a large quantity of liquor, which they said was being sold over a fully equipped bar at the Westover Club near here, and the arrest of four men.

The police called the raid the largest since the inauguration of State liquor control in Virginia.

The four men arrested, the police said, were the bartender and three others. Those arrested were Ralph Davidson, Robert Hastings, H. Woodlief and Jesse Lloyd. They were released under $500 bond for appearance in a magistrate's court Tuesday, when they will answer charges of violating State liquor laws.

Approximately 100 pints of whisky 26 containers of liquor and gin in fifths and quart sizes, a half-gallon of alcohol, 23 bottles of high-test ale and five gallons of home-made gin. The officers said it was bootleg gin and that some of the liquor containers bore no Federal or State stamps.

Bonds Set for Eight in Raid.

Salisbury, Md., Jan. 10 (Spl.).—United States Commissioner Lewis C. Merryman set bonds aggregating $35,500 today for eight Kent County (Md.) residents arrested in connection with the raid of a liquor still near Chestertown last Sunday, during which county and Federal officers engaged in an exchange of shots with a party of men suspected to have been associated with the still's operations.

Merritt Meekins, John Clayton, Albert Clayton and Wilbur Rodney, charged with possession of liquor and operation of the still, were held in $5,000 each. Bonds in similar amounts were fixed for each of three Negroes, Jefferson Freeman, Edward Butler and John Wilson, charged with taking part in the alleged attack upon the officers.

Bail for Charles Meeking was fixed at $500, which he furnished.

The other seven, except Albert Clayton, were held in jail here in default of bond. Albert Clayton is at Easton Emergency Hospital, where he is being treated for a shot wound in the hip. Formal hearing was deferred by Merryman until the wounded man is brought here from the hospital.

Marshall, Va., Bank Elects Officers

Page Valley Institution at Luray Also Acts.

Luray, Va., Jan. 10 (Spl.).—Of the 1,000 shares of capital stock of the Marshall National Bank & Trust Co., Marshall, 20 miles north of Luray, 788 shares were represented at the yearly election of officers. According to Cashier P. W. Anderson, the bank shows $65,743.67 in surplus and undivided profits. During the year $8,160 was charged off for depreciation of bonds, $2,000 as unpaid bank balance and $22,217 in loans and discounts. These acamounts, aggregating $32,367, are represented by bonds and notes held in an auxiliary account.

The bank shows an increase in business during the year of $120,000. The following directors have been elected: J. T. Ramey, C. F. Ramey, J. L. Baxley, T. N. Russell, Edward Ambler, G. R. Thompson, Robert Fletcher, P. W. Anderson, E. S. Renalds and G. H. Field.

At the meeting of the stockholders of the Page Valley National Bank, Luray, it was decided unanimously to increase the capital stock of the institution from $75,000 to $100,000. Among directors reelected are H. R. McKay, J. L. Spitler, W. P. Hershberger, Dr. John F. Long, A. A. Grove and W. V. Ford, attorney.

Virginians to Be Rhodes Scholars

Along the Tri-State Trail

with

C. B. Carr

Post State Editor

BETA, aloof, shifting, and popular as ever, has resumed his position as the undisputed canine ruler of the University of Virginia's traditional Albemarle. Beta, as he is known by practically all who have attended the university in the last seven years, is a spotted dog of ancestry suggesting both dachshund and hound.

Last Easter, when a member of the student body transferred to the University of Georgia, he took Beta with him. Mild pandemonium and petitions followed in the ranks of the student body. Virginia students even threatened a mass descent upon Georgia's Athens—but Beta still remained in the custody of his kidnaper.

But Beta is back now, making his daily rounds of inspection, visiting classrooms and eating his meals at the school cafeteria. It seems that the Georgian custodian had left a watch in Charlottesville and a bargaining party swapped the timepiece for Beta.

Baltimore police are going to draw their mufflers a little tighter around their necks in the future. Colds and grip in mild epidemic form are blamed for 125 policemen being off on sick leave. The average number on sick leave is about 25 a day. Including all ranks, Baltimore has 1,521 men on its police force.

At Ridgely, Md., the Carolina Sun, a weekly paper, has informed subscribers that it will accept farm produce, including corn, wheat, eggs, poultry and apples, in lieu of cash for new subscriptions or renewals.

E. P. Hall, of Easton, Md., is displaying a king crab he has caught which boasts a regal court of oysters. The crab, 14 inches long, has a four-inch oyster fringed by a retinue of smaller ones attached to the top of his shell. All were alive when caught.

The Governor's mansion at Annapolis not only changed occupants this week but it has also switched telephone numbers. Formerly the chief executive could be reached by calling Annapolis 4. The new Governor has had it moved up the scale to Annapolis 1.

At Cambridge, Md., J. Gorman Hill, State's attorney who was sworn into office just three days ago, has already won his first case. After taking oath before Judge Insley he immediately prosecuted a case against a man charged with unauthorized use of an automobile, driving while drunk and larceny. The prisoner was sentenced to three and one-half years in the House of Correction.

The Metz family of Barton, Md., claims a Sunday School record. The father, Thomas I. Metz, has had perfect attendance for eight consecutive years, and all seven others in the family have not missed a Sunday for the last year.

Broken Back Fatal To Maryland Miner

Cumberland, Md., Jan. 10 (Spl.).—John Smith, 28, Mount Savage, employed in the Brides Fuel Mine near that place, died at Allegany Hospital here today from a broken back, suffered when caught by a fall of rock yesterday. He was working alone. Attaches of the Maryland Bureau of Mines are investigating.

G.O.P. Warns Assembly Foe Of Patronage

West Virginian Informs Democrats Excesses Beat His Party.

Charleston Legislators Clear Decks for Action Monday.

Charleston, W. Va., Jan. 10 (AP).—A Republican's warning to the Democratic Legislature that his party was put out of power because of patronage excesses was the only anti-Administration word spoken today as the Legislature went ahead with its organization.

The delegates and senators turned homeward tonight, leaving their leaders until Monday afternoon to clear the way for action on legislation.

Delegate George Rairden (Republican), Mason, protested against the number of attaches on which the House Democrats had decided—137, one to be named by each of the 94 delegates, and the rest, appointed by the speaker and clerk, mostly office personnel, at a total salary of $818 a day.

Number of Attaches.

Asked by the Democratic woman delegate, Mrs. S. W. Price, of Fayette County, "How many attaches the last Republican House had when in control of this body?" Rairden replied:

"It looted and padded the pay roll and defeated the Republican Party."

Delegate Ralph M. Hiner, Democratic former speaker from Pendleton County, told him it is an old story.

"We continually have fights about attaches," Hiner said. "But it is absolutely necessary in order to carry on the functions of the House, that an adequate number of attaches be appointed."

Preliminary Tasks.

Committees still must be appointed and the scores of attaches chosen and at work before the legislative tasks can be started.

Assignments of members to committees will be completed over the week-end by President Hodges of the Senate and Speaker Pelter of the House.

The rules committee met again today and agreed to recommend readoption of House rules of procedure with only a few changes.

A similar committee was appointed by President Charles E. Hodges (Democrat), Monongalia, at a short and quiet session of the Senate.

Dr. Gaines, Wife Will Go for Cruise

Washington and Lee Head to See Mediterranean.

Lexington, Va., Jan. 10 (AP).—Dr. Francis P. Gaines, president of Washington and Lee University, and Mrs. Gaines will sail February 1 for a Mediterranean cruise, it was learned today. They will be accompanied by George Walker St. Clair, rector of the university, and Mrs. St. Clair, of Tazewell, Va.

The trip is being taken on advice of Dr. Gaines' physicians following a lengthy illness from a septic throat infection. He has been improving but spends only a few hours at his office each day.

The party is scheduled to sail from New York on the Aquitania and will return by March 8. Dr. Robert H. Tucker, dean of the university, will act as president during Dr. Gaines' absence.

The Abbey Theater Players Divulge the Arduous Genesis of Artistic Greatness

Preparation Is Matter of Long And Hard Study

Standards Are of Highest; New Fox Stage Revue; Theater News.

Reprinted From Yesterday's Last Edition.

By Nelson B. Bell.

On the assumption that the entire circulation of this estimable family journal is not a regular listener to the incomparable broadcasts originating on this desk for Wednesday morning dissemination over WJSV for a 15-minute period beginning at 10:45 a. m., it may be permissible to revert to yesterday morning's talk sufficiently to make clear why it is that the Abbey Theater Players, currently presenting a week of repertoire in the National Theater, are looked upon by these eyes as the foremost acting group in the contemporary English-speaking theater.

It was all made immeasurably clearer to me than it ever had been before during an hour or so of extremely pleasant visiting with the Dublin company Tuesday night, under the hospitable auspices of the Washington Branch of the League of American Pen Women, in the Burlington Hotel.

From Elbert A. Wickes, American impresario of the Abbey Theater company, through Arthur Shields, executive producer of the theater in Dublin, to the individual membership of the players, our conversations were, to me, both illuminating and inspiring—especially since by a few not too random remarks I have placed myself, in a manner of speaking, "on the spot" in the matter of a local theater representative of the National Capital, but not inseparably associated with the Broadway or commercial theater.

From Meager Beginnings.

Mr. Wickes suggested many avenues of thought relating to the genesis of the Abbey Theater's present greatness; Mr. Shields dwelt informatively upon the meager beginnings and the present rather opulent eventuations that have characterized the case history of a "national theater" that began with what he described as complete facilities for active play production, consisting of a total lack of players, plays and a playhouse

But of the perfection of diction, the unsurpassed utterance of the most flawless English spoken on the stage today, and the development of an acting technique that is without compare, it was from the players themselves that I learned the most.

Much of this I attempted feebly to put on the air yesterday morning, but, I fear, with largely fruitless results, owing to a paucity of time for the full exposition of so comprehensive a subject.

But it seems that what a member of the Abbey Theater Company goes through in preparation for an honored place among the recognized leaders of this unique organization is something like this:

The beginning of the arduous training begins virtually in childhood—at the age of 14 in the case of the actress from whom I derived my most detailed information. At the first test, the instructor is apt to ask for the dramatic rendition of some such speech as the "Mercy" passage from Shakespeare's "The Merchant of Venice." You know the one: "The quality of mercy is not strained, it droppeth like the gentle rain from heaven upon the place beneath, etc."

Having listened to the first reading of the speech the coach probably will say: "That's all very well, but you are appealing to every one of my senses. Let us consider the average audience. There will be those in it who are not in possession of all their senses. Now, let us suppose that I can hear, but am blind; make me grasp the full import of the passage solely by the power of hearing. Very good. Now, let us assume that I can see but am stone deaf; impart the full meaning of the lines to me, facial expression and pantomime."

A Long Novitiate.

This sort of thing goes on for days, weeks, months, years. A grinding, discouraging, devastating routine, to be sure, but it results in a faculty of expression that may not be obtained in any other way.

And in the item of speech—the pronunciation and the enunciation of words—what is done here? I am told by one who has been "through the mill," as we Americans would say, and knows that what happens is the explicit direction to utilize every organ of vocalization—vocal cords, larynx, tongue, palate, lips.

"In America," you will learn, "the upper lip is scarcely used in speaking. Intonations are ignored. An American's reading of any line is more apt than not to be traceable by a straight line, running from left to right on any graph of diction. The Abbey Theater Players are instructed to make their speech traceable only by the use of curves. We do not speak in a brogue. We merely speak in the purest English that it is possible to speak, with full value to all vowels and no slight to any consonant."

And there, very largely, you have it. Genius, after all, is only the capacity for taking infinite pains. The Abbey Theater Players have found the time and some modest incentives to become not only individually, but collectively, geniuses. They have paid a heavy price, but they are reaping a rich reward.

There is a profound lesson here for those concerned with the progress of the native stage—especially those who think that the Washington amateur theater really is going some place.

Tonight at 8:30 o'clock, the Senate Office Building will become a motion picture theater. The United States Senate, including perhaps the Vice President; many members of the lower house and other invited guests will view the screening of "The County Chairman," starring Will Rogers, at the invitation of Senator Elmer D. Thomas of Oklahoma. "The County Chairman" opens at Loew's Fox tomorrow. Mack-

"Happy Days Are Here Again!"

Or so it would seem from the smiling expressions worn by the two popular favorites pictured between the top line and this. On the left, of course, is Guy Lombardo, conductor of the famous Royal Canadians, one of the best of the modern orchestras, providing the evening stage entertainment at Loew's Fox Theater last night and tonight. At right, Ginger Rogers, that vivacious young comedienne whose talents now are pooled with Francis Lederer's in "Romance in Manhattan," the picture which on Friday follows the long run of "The Little Minister" at RKO-Keith's.

Certainly this is one of the most delicious exaggerations ever to find its way to the footlights. One performance is not even a beginning of enough of it for Washington.

Before drama came to Inish, life was simple and pleasant and merry in that little Irish seacoast town and no one ever bothered to wonder if it was worth living. They just lived and liked it.

But the summer that Constance Constantia and Hector De La Mare arrived with the great dramas of the world, "The Powers of Darkness," "The Master Builder," "The "Doll's House," dark, dismal and foreboding, the Irish sun went under a cloud and stayed under. The company played on and on in the pavilion to great crowds of seekers after meanings.

And strange things began to happen to Inish—attempted suicides (the tide was out when the melancholy Clancy lad leapt from the pier), suicide pacts, sinister plottings having to do with rat poison, and the loss of the government (the local T. D., who voted wrong, had been carried away by "The Enemy of the People"). All because life, it seems was complicated and if it must be lived, must be lived in a manner befitting its complexities. The Irish are a people of feeling and taste.

Flawless Playing.

Famed as a group, the Abbey Players seemed to play both as a group and individuals—giving the whole chuckling affair a spirit and unity and a naturalness that makes them seem less the truly remarkable actors they are than just the perplexed people of Inish.

The play is probably less typically Irish than any on their program. Of its 13 parts, each is good, length of line notwithstanding.

Our favorites—though we have a very great fondness for each and every one—were the Lizzie of Eileen Crowe, positively brilliant in its minor epic moments; the smooth rightness of F. J. McCormick as Hector, and the perfect Michael, the boots, of that sterling Arthur Shields. We particularly liked also Eddie and his misery as played by Denis O'Dea, the sharpness of the Annie of Maureen Delany, and Michael Dolan's poor, mild Peter Hurley, T. D.

The story of the writing of this gentle but penetratng satire is almost as much fun as the play itself. We don't know whether it's gospel or not, but it's nice.

lyn Arbuckle appeared in the title role of the original stage version of this George Ade comedy. Mr. Rogers and the late Mr. Arbuckle are miles apart in personality and method, but they say the play is just as good as ever. And it probably is—George Ade's writings were like that, as one Hoosier to another!

Lombardo Legatos.

Adding a fillip to the week's entertainment such as no local motion picture theater ever before has attempted, Guy Lombardo and his Royal Canadians last night at two performances took the place of N. T. Granlund's Paradise Cafe Revue and bowled the customers over in fine style.

Seldom is it that a cash customer has the opportunity to avail himself of a swell screen diversion and two stage shows in the same week at the same theater.

Not only did the Guy Lombardo Orchestra, one of the most thoroughly satisfying of all the popular bands now before the public, in the opinion of these aging eyes and ears—and I still can see and hear, at that—score its accustomed hit, but the specialists brought along for this four-performance engagement also clicked in a large way.

If you must have the details, names, addresses and telephone numbers—and try to get the last two or three of these!—Pat Barnes, who acts as master of ceremonies for this semicommercial interlude; the Viking Male Quartet, who get over in an impressive manner; the Embassy Trio, three personable young feminine vocalists; Joan Abbott, the "radio songbird," and Cross and Dunn, sure-fire comics, help to make this offering click as one of the high spots of the current season's entertainments.

Priority Note.

New Theater Week Promises A Varied Menu

Motion Picture Theaters Again All Open Friday; a Stage Premiere.

Reprinted From Yesterday's Last Edition.

Beginning next Monday night in the National Theater, "On to Fortune," a new "comedy of manners," by Lawrence Langner and Armina Marshall—easily identified as Mr. and Mrs. Lawrence Lagner, authors of "The Pursuit of Happiness"—will be presented for the first time on any metropolitan stage by Crosby Gaige and Charles Heidt.

The action of the new play is laid in the home of a prominent Middle West banker. Contrary to every implication, satire upon, or reference to, any aspect of modern banking is neither the theme nor the purpose of the comedy.

"On to Fortune" will be interpreted by an excellent cast, headed by Ilka Chase, Glenn Anders and Mary Rogers, daughter of the veteran comic, Will Rogers. There will be the usual matinees on Wednesday and Saturday.

• • • •

Miss Myrtis Morgan, managing director of the Belasco Art Theater Society, announces that next week's dramatic attraction on Lafayette Square will be "The Curtain Rises," by Benjamin M. Kaye. The story is said to be both charming and humorous, having to do with a stage-struck girl of the ugly duckling type who wins, through to success. The locale is Vienna. The three acts are set in the studio of the heroine who will be impersonated by Helen Kingsley. The opposite role will be played by Grandon Rhodes.

• • • •

Will Rogers, whose daughter, Mary, will be seen on the stage at the National, will be next week's screen star at Loew's Fox Theater in the articulate film version of George Ade's "The County Chairman," originally a highly successful stage vehicle for the droll talents of the late Macklyn Arbuckle. Kent Taylor, Evelyn Venable, Louise Dresser, Stepin Fetchit, Robert McWade, Burton Churchill and many others from the casts of "Judge Priest" and "David Harum" again will be seen in the star's support. On the stage, the vaudeville bill will be headlined by Vera Gordon, perhaps best remembered for her sterling work in the silent picturization of Fannie Hurst's "Humoresque." Others on the stage bill will be Rex Weber, the Stone & Vernon Foursome and Gold, Raye and Cross.

• • • •

Bing Crosby, Kitty Carlisle, Alison Skipworth, Roland Young and Reginald Owen are the foremost members of the cast of "Here Is My Heart," chief screen feature of the bill to be inaugurated tomorrow at the Warner Brothers' Earle Theater. The story, freely adapted from that earlier screen hit, "The Grand Duchess and the Waiter," by Alfred Savoir, is that of a millionaire crooner in quest of fun. Ralph Rainger and Lee Robin have written a group of new songs for this film that are said to provide both the star and Miss Carlisle with splendid outlets for their vocal gifts. On the stage, the Earle will present the ever-popular Sylvia Froos as topliner. She will be heard in a group of favorite tunes.

• • • •

Following the extended run of "Forsaking All Others," the attraction on the screen at Loew's Palace Theater, beginning tomorrow, will be "Bright Eyes," the new story of aviation and family jealousy, in which the stellar role is played with her habitual charm by Shirley Temple. In the tiny star's support will be seen such adult veterans as Jimmy Dunn, Lois Wilson, Judith Allen, Charles Sellon, Brandon Hurst and numerous others. News events, comedy and selected short-reel subjects will round out the bill.

• • • •

"Murder in the Clouds," a melodrama of the most thrilling sort, will take possession of the screen at the Metropolitan Theater tomorrow as chief feature of a bill that will include abbreviated camera subjects of the first rank and a full, 15-minute newsreel. The principal roles in the feature picture will be played by Ann Dvorak, Lyle Talbot and Gordon Westcott, supported by Robert Light, George Cooper, Charles Wilson, Henry O'Neill, Russell Hickes and Edward McWade.

• • • •

Described as an intensely human drama of love and intrigue in the teeming tenements of Greater New York, "Romance in Manhattan," opening tomorrow as chief screen feature at RKO-Keith's, affords Ginger Rogers and Francis Lederer their first joint starring vehicle. Mr. Lederer recently scored opposite Joan Bennett in "The Pursuit of Happiness;" Miss Rogers opposite Fred Astaire in "The Gay Divorcee." The new bill, succeeding the long run of Katharine Hepburn in "The Little Minister," will be supplemented by short-reel camera subjects and a new issue of the Pathe News.

Rollicking comedy and drama heavily charged with suspense are said to be the distinguishing features of "One Hour Late," the new screen play to be seen at Loew's Columbia Theater, beginning tomorrow, with Conrad Nagel, Helen Twelvetrees, Joe Morrison, Arline Judge, George E. Stone, Jed Prouty, Jack Mulhall, Gail Patrick and Toby Wing in the foremost roles.

• • • •

Returning to the stage of the Gayety Theater next week, beginning Sunday afternoon, the extra added attraction will be Nadja, the exotic singing and dancing star, already well known to Capital audiences. The vehicle of her return will be a new Independent Burlesque Association production, "Flirting Females" — formidable enough in all conscience. Leading the long list of principals are the Carroll Sisters, Al Hillier, Bobby Vail, George Murray, Joe Forte.

Hollywood, Jan. 9.

EVERY ONE during the last ten days has been busy selecting the ten best pictures.

In reading over the comments of the exhibitors—the men who pay and play them—in the Motion Picture Herald, I decided to see what they had to say about some of the best.

The top flicker of the year from all comments is "It Happened One Night." I have read the "What the Picture Did for Me" department weekly and have yet to read a dissenting vote. The latest nice remark is from Exhibitor Ross, jr., of St. George, S. C. He writes: "Nothing can be added to what other exhibitors have said about this picture. It is one swell piece of entertainment."

"One Night of Love" is well liked by the theater managers themselves, but they are disappointed in the business. Quoting P. G. Held, of Griswold, Iowa: "Grace Moore is a wonderful singer, but as a small town picture it was the bunk. It fell flat at the box office. We lost money on this."

• • • •

"The House of Rothschild" was well received and did good business in the majority of small town cinema palaces, but it didn't create the sensation that it did in the big town cinema palaces. However, it is still touring, and in some instances playing return engagements. Another on the best list which is receiving the same reception accorded "It Happened One Night" is "The Thin Man." Just one of the many is H. M. Johnson, of Avon Park, Fla., who writes: "Picture created exceptionally fine comment. Pleased 100 per cent."

Another example of the critics and the box office agreeing.

• • • •

By far the best musical of the season was "The Gay Divorcee." This is getting nothing but raves. Bert Silver, of Greenville, Mich., is only one of the many exhibitors who writes blurbs such as this: "This is 100 per cent entertainment. We have played none better . . . I can't tell you how big it is, but I have seen none bigger or better. Gave splendid satisfaction to all."

"The Barretts of Wimpole Street" in the majority of small towns is doing business, but it must be properly handled and exploited. As Exhibitor Johnson says: "This picture if sold right will get the money. Don't go after the Saturday night crowd with this one. Get the people that don't go often, and let them know about the picture, and they will come to see it. Keep the uneducated away if possible, as they will go out and knock the picture . . ." Which should give you an idea of the difficulties a fine picture experiences after it leaves the smart cities.

• • • •

"Viva Villa" was liked by the exhibitors and the male audiences, but as a rule the ladies didn't go for it. Therefore, it didn't do as big a business as it rated, for it is generally the lady who tells the gent with her what flicker to see. Here is the comment of Exhibitors Mr. and Mrs. Wilfred Racine, of Burns, Oreg., who give you the mister and missus view of it: "A great production . . . All of the men liked it and thought it was the best show ever. Women as a rule didn't like it. Thought it was too brutal . . . Many women stayed away during the showing, while the men came, so business wasn't as good as it should have been."

• • • •

These are the pictures which were on the majority of lists, but after these selections the critics varied as much as the handicappers who pick the winners of horse races. Some of the other flickers nominated included "Catherine the Great," "The Count of Monte Cristo," "The Lost Patrol" and "No Greater Glory." Every selector had a special favorite, and there is no need to relate how these specials failed at the box-office windows. There were several flickers listed as box-office champions which didn't make any critics' list. A Will Rogers, Janet Gaynor, Bing Crosby or Joan Crawford flicker, to state a few. These are the more obvious examples where critics and box office disagree.

It is much easier to name the ten worst pictures of the season than it is to name the ten best. Any picker could name "Down to Their Last Yacht" and complete the task.

• • • •

The exhibitors and the critics would agree on this one. B. J. Vanderby, of Doland, S. Dak., writes: "Fooey. Good acting on the part of the actors, but it must have had 15 or 20 writers and directors, as just a few men could not have made that many mistakes. I would suggest that they all take up plumbing—my apologies to the plumbers—and my congratulations to the artists who made the paper on it. I felt like standing in the lobby as they came out and saying, 'Aha, we fooled you.'"

And now that every one has compiled a list of the ten best, just to continue the game, how about a list of the ten best pickers of the people who pick the ten best?

Lodge to Entertain Past Commanders

Cumberland I. O. O. F. to Fete Pennsylvania Group.

Cumberland, Md., Jan. 10 (Spl.).—The Past Commanders Association of central Pennsylvania will be entertained Saturday night by Star of the East Commandery, No. 461, Ancient and Illustrious Order of Knights of Malta, at Odd Fellows Temple.

Large delegations are expected from Pittsburgh, Lewistown, Wilkinsburg, Johnstown, Uniontown, Connellsville, Altoona and South Fork, Pa. Victory Commandery, No. 4, Frostburg, the second oldest commandery in the United States, will send a delegation.

Daniel Evans, of Frostburg, who was elected president of the Past Commanders Association last June, will preside. The red cross degree will be conferred upon local and visiting delegates by the degree team of Altoona. Among grand officers expected to attend are Grand Commander Harry Kirker, of Beaver Falls, Pa., and Ralph Walton, of this city, grand sword bearer.

Bloodhounds on Hunt For Suspected Firebug

Woodstock, Va., Jan. 10 (Spl.).—The unoccupied house of the late Jack Vance, near Star Tannery, 13 miles west of here, was destroyed by fire early today.

Indications are that the blaze was incendiary. The house had been rented to William Spitler, of nearby West Virginia, who expected to move in the day the dwelling was destroyed. The fire and the surrounding circumstances were reported to Sheriff Luther G. Sheetz, who sent for the bloodhounds of D. H. Rudford, of Staunton. The dogs were taken to the scene this afternoon by their owner and Deputy Sheriff Jacob Sheetz, of Shenandoah County.

Suspensions To Wright, Meade

Leading Riders Banned by Florida Stewards for Rough Riding.

Like Rulings Made After Second, Fourth Races; Feature to Meade.

TROPICAL PARK, Fla., Jan. 10 (AP).—Don Meade and Wayne Wright, two of the Nation's leading riders, were suspended for the remainder of the Tropical Park meeting today. Both boys felt the sting of the stewards for rough riding. Meade was set down following his effort to win with Opinion, the favorite in the second race, while Wright joined his rival on the banned list after he had brought Epaulet to the finish line a nose behind Hastinip in the fourth race.

The rulings remove from competition the two best jockeys on the grounds. Wright is the leading rider of the meeting, having ridden his twentieth victory in the day's first race aboard Black Highbrow. An Idaho boy, Wright has gained a place among the first-flight pilots in the last year. He particularly was successful in Maryland this fall and nosed out Meade for the riding honors at Laurel.

The disciplinary action today was the first of a serious nature involving Meade since he was set down for rough riding at the finish of the 1933 Kentucky Derby aboard E. R. Bradley's Broker's Tip. Meade is under contract to the Kentucky sportsman and is generally considered the country's jockey king.

Meade Rides Stegal.

Both boys were allowed to finish out their engagements for the day and Meade stayed to ride E. F. Seagram's Stegal to victory in the day's feature race. The young gelding boosted his Florida Derby stock considerably by winning in easy fashion in the Cacilla Purse over the mile course.

The gelding, son of Galetin, romped to the judges a half dozen lengths clear of the highly regarded Foxy Agnes, another Derby hopeful. Paradisical was headed for the place. The winner, paying $5.30, was the first choice of the afternoon to win.

Stegal ran the 8 furlongs in the fast time of 1:38 3-5. He was picking up five pounds off his last start, when Foxy Agnes took his measure. The latter carried 10 additional pounds today. Don Meade, who, along with Wayne Wright, was suspended for the balance of the meeting for rough riding in previous races, was astride Stegal.

An accident nearly occurred as

Tilden Troupe Here Tonight

Capacity Crowd Expected at C. U. Gymnasium.

FOUR of the mighty men of tennis, Big Bill Tilden, George M. Lott, H. Ellsworth Vines and Lester R. Stoefen, arrive in Washington this morning equipped with a couple of dozen tennis racquets and the greatest collection of court artistry on the face of the globe. They will perform at the Catholic University gymnasium tonight.

For more than a week Washington has been making ready to give the four knights of the tennis byways a rousing welcome and, according to the ticket-sale progress reported yesterday, it will be a capacity crowd of 2,600 which greets Tilden and Lott when they stroll out for the opening match at 8:30 p. m.

As brilliant as the Tilden-Lott encounter promises to be, even the renewal of such a genuine and lasting feud is being overshadowed by the prospect of the doubles match betwen Lott and Stoefen and Vines and Tilden.

Triumphed in Upset.

Shortly after Tilden and Lott have completed their two-out-of-three-set engagement, the teams will pair off in the third chapter of an already warm and thriving rivalry which opened in New York Wednesday night, when Tilden and Vines fought three hours to score a five-set upset victory, 3—6, 14—16, 13—11, 8—6, 6—4. The series was continued last night at Philadelphia.

Sale of Canadiens Fails to Develop

Dandurand Rejects Three Offers to Buy Club.

New York, Jan. 10 (AP).—The oft-reported sale of the Montreal Canadiens, oldest and most colorful team in the National Hockey League, failed to materialize today.

Leo Dandurand, part owner and director of the club, talked with three prospective buyers in his hotel here, rejected all their offers and then flatly announced the club, pride and joy of Montreal's French quarter, is not on the market.

"I never put it there," he said. "The bids came out of the blue after newspaper stories indicated I wanted to get out and buy into the St. Louis Eagles. So far as I know, that club isn't for sale, either."

Chance Sun 8-1 In Kearney's Derby Book

Commonwealth Is Second; Black Helen Is Made Florida Choice.

ST. LOUIS, Jan. 10 (AP).—Tom Kearney, St. Louis betting commissioner, today posted his initial odds for this year's running of the Kentucky Derby and made Chance Sun an 8-to-1 favorite.

The odds against Chance Sun running second or third are 4 and 2 to 1, respectively, in the new Kearney futures book. A condition was made in the listings that wagers would be returned if a horse upon which money is invested is not nominated for the Derby.

Second to Chance Sun in the odds come five horses—Commonwealth, Balladier, Nellie Flag, Omaha and Psychic Bid—all stake winners at 12 to 1.

Rated at 15 to 1.

At 15 to 1 are Boxthorne and Black Helen, stablemates of Balladier, all three owned by E. R. Bradley, and Plat Eye, Earl Porter, Roman Soldier, Today, Rosemont, Sailor Beware, More-Pluck, Hasty Glance, Try Sympathy, Special Agent and Wise Prince are all quoted at 20 to 1.

Kearney also announced odds on the Florida Derby, the Santa Anita $100,000 stake and the Grand National Handicap Steeplechase, run at Aintree, England.

For the Miami Derby, Black Helen was made the future book choice at 8 to 11; Cavalcade and Equipoise were offered as 3-to-1 favorites for the Santa Anita Stake, and Mrs. Dorothy Paget's Golden Miller was made a 4-to-1 favorite in the Grand National Running.

Crawford Beats Quist To Advance to Finals

Melbourne, Australia, Jan. 10 (U.P.).—Jack Crawford, former titleholder, today moved into the final round of the Australian National Tennis Championship with a five-set victory over Adrien Quist. Scores were 6—1, 1—6, 6—2, 3—6, 6—3.

Fred Perry, of England, present champion, will play Vivian McGrath, left-handed Australian, in the other semifinal.

Golf Champs Face New Records

Cotton, Little and Miss Van Wie Offered Opportunities.

U. S. Amateur Titleists Held Dominant in Their Fields.

NEW YORK, Jan. 10 (AP).—Record-breaking opportunities await three holders of major golf championships in 1935, with each of the prospects standing a good chance of capitalizing on the occasion.

Not for almost two decades has an Englishman won the British Open golf championship two consecutive years, but repetition of that trick is within the realm of possibility for Henry Cotton, the British professional at the Waterloo Club in Brussels, Belgium, who won the title last June.

For William Lawson Little, jr., the San Francisco bombardier, 1935 offers openings for two fresh standards. No American has ever made it two straight in the British Amateur tournament. The other opportunity concerns the American Amateur, which for the second consecutive year will be conducted on an all-match play basis.

Little Is Dominant.

Little's almost savage triumphs in winning the title of world's amateur champion stamped him the nearest thing to the great Bob Jones and brought from experts at home and abroad the prediction that his reign can be for an indeterminate period.

Soft-spoken Virginia Van Wie, who has made it a policy to let her game speak for her—and it has proven a good system—has the opportunity to become the first player to win the national women's title four times in a row.

She dominates the women's field much as Glenna Collett Vare did several years ago, and unless some unknown comes in the picture next August at Interlachen Miss Van Wie should have the new record to add to her laurels.

Outlook Not Bright.

The outlook is not so bright for Olin Dutra, the swarthy Californian who holds the United States Open championship. With Bob Jones out of the way, that is one tournament in which past performances count for little.

If the law of averages does right by itself, the Ryder Cup will return to the trophy cabinet of the Professional Golfers Association of America. It will be the fifth meeting between rival American and British teams with the honors thus far evenly divided, the British victories scored on British soil and American victories registered here. The 1935 play will be at Ridgewood, N. J., late in September.

Virginia Five Beats Indians

25-21 Victory Is Marked by Poor Shooting.

CHARLOTTESVILLE, Va., Jan. 10 (Spl.).—Virginia's basket ball team won from William and Mary here tonight, 25 to 21, in a ragged game, both teams giving a poor exhibition of shooting.

The Cavaliers enjoyed an 8-point lead until near the close of the first half, when the Indians rallied to register 5 points, the half ending 11 to 7.

Quick shots by Flickenger and Crist knotted the count soon after the start of the second half, but midway the period the Cavaliers, led by Rogers and Zeisberg, launched a determined drive and soon enjoyed a 11-point lead.

Frequent fouls gave the Indians an opportunity to cut down the margin before the whistle sounded.

380,000 Spectators Seated In Old Rome's Biggest Arena

By Paul Gallico.

ROME, Jan. 4 (by mail).—Lest we be inclined to hint that, after all, the Coliseum held a mere 80,000 while Soldier Field, in Chicago, will accommodate close to 140,000 for a prize fight and 90,000 for a football game, it seems that the Roman Coliseum was just a little one, a sort of a St. Nick's or a Broadway Arena.

The Circus Maximus at one time accommodated 380,000 spectators. It was so big that I strongly suspect it accounted for the origin of the present three-ring circus. If they burned a martyr or a convict in the middle only, the people on the ends couldn't see, because the show was probably from a quarter to a half mile away. Not even the late Tex Rickard would have had the crust to call those ringside seats. And so it is very likely that, due to the overwhelming size of the arena and the stadium, they had to play the same show at both ends as well as in the middle.

Once in a while, though, apparently, they put on a show that used up the entire arena, as in the time of the Emperor Probus when they transformed the center into a huge forest, stocked it with thousands of ostriches, stags, wild boar, goat and

Rose Bowl Trophy Presented 'Bama

State Dignitaries Among Those at Banquet.

Tuscaloosa, Ala., Jan. 10 (AP).—Tuscaloosa and Alabama tonight paid homage to the 1934 Crimson Tide of the University of Alabama, gathered in a group for probably the last time, as Jack Rissman, of Los Angeles, presented the Rissman Trophy, emblematic of victory in Pasadena's Rose Bowl.

Every reservation, and there were 400 of them available, was taken for the annual banquet given by the Junior Chamber of Commerce to the Alabamans. State dignitaries, including Gov.-elect Bibb Graves, an alumnus, and Lieut. Gov.-elect Thomas E. Knight, jr., had reservations.

Two Who Will Push Punches for Washington and Lee

Virginians Set For Harvard Ringmen

Open Season Tomorrow; Both Teams Boast Co-Captains.

UNIVERSITY, Va., Jan. 10 (Spl.).—Co-captains will lead both Harvard and Virginia's boxing teams into action when the two swap punches in the Memorial Gymnasium here at 8 p. m. Saturday. Harvard will have three men who competed in the match last year when the Cavaliers won, 6 to 2. It is Virginia's first match, Harvard's second.

The rival co-captains won't meet however. Harvard's leaders are Peter Ward, lightweight, and William Smith, light-heavyweight, while the Virginia joint heads are Archie Hahn, jr., bantamweight, and Gordon Rainey, featherweight.

Against Hahn the Crimson entry probably will be Stuart Finer, who is fast and strong for a bantamweight. Or the Harvard 115-pounder may be James Kostarelos, who will be making his varsity debut, and who is known as a hard hitter.

Met Last Year.

The same two, who met last year in the 125-pound class, are to be matched again. Rainey, for Virginia, will be against James Kunen, who lost to the Cavalier featherweight a year ago. Kunen is reported to be much improved, and he won his first match of the winter over Ewald, of M. I. T., with a second-round knockout.

Harvard's co-captain, Peter Ward, a Culver product and a good all-round boxer, will probably have against him Marion Brooks, a Charlottesville lad who'll be representing Virginia in his first varsity match. Virginia's veteran welterweight, Maynard Womer, is due to meet Edgar Davis, Harvard sophomore, with freshman experience.

Mack Reported Eyeing Moe Berg

Rumor of Higgins Trade Also Bobs Up.

Philadelphia, Jan. 10 (AP).—Connie Mack, whose spectacular baseball trades have had a big part in making the game's history, wasn't home from the Orient 24 hours before reports of deals he has in the making were flying thick and fast in baseball circles today.

One of these said the Athletics' lean leader had his eye on Moe Berg, formerly of Washington and recently released by the Cleveland Indians, to fill in as relief catcher on the A's next season. In talking of this rumor, observers pointed out the club's need for a spare backstop.

Although Mack has put his official denial on reports circling around a trade involving Frank (Pinky) Higgins, third-base flash, this, too, was talked of among the hot-stovers, along with the similarly denied rumor of Babe Ruth's coming to the Athletics in some managerial capacity.

Release of Charley Berry, catcher, formerly with the Chicago White Sox, was announced today by Manager Mack.

Wrestling at W. & L. Threatened by Boxing

By Bill McCormick.

UNDER the careful ministrations of Lewis Martin, last year's Southern Conference finalist in the 175-pound division, boxing is doing nicely in its efforts to wrest the limelight from wrestling—the favorite indoor sport at Washington and Lee.

For some reason, the Generals seem to prefer the gentle art of bending bones to the gentle art of puncing noses for a pastime, which explains the supremacy of wrestling over boxing at the Lexington institute of learning.

Martin, whose interest in boxing is overwhelming, acted as unofficial godfather to the sport at Washington and Lee for many weeks. Just recently his appointment as assistant coach was announced and thus he was endowed with an official right to worry and fret over the prospects of the Generals' socking squad.

Three Dual Meets.

With only three dual meets scheduled and the opener, against Maryland, not slated until February 2, Martin has plenty of time to worry officially and plenty of time to select his team from among a fair-sized group of candidates.

Lee Reeser, a junior from Media, Pa., is the most likely candidate for the 115-pound division, if he decides to go out for his monogram. Lee fought once last year, defeating a V. P. I. boxer in his solo flight. He is a better fighter than boxer and more aggressive than most members of the peewee division.

Johnny Esbaugh probably will fall heir to the flyweight berth if Reeser does not chose to box. The Olcott, N. Y., junior has shown great promise in the gymnasium, but hasn't been in competition yet. His specialty is speed. D. A. Fallat, a slugging sophomore, is a possibility for a regular berth in the lightest division.

Davies Due to Get Call.

The 125-pound berth probably will fall to J. W. Davies, a letter man from last year. Davies fights in a puzzling crouch from which he pops a left hand to the body and chin and from which he occasionally straightens with a right uppercut.

Jack Cunningham, a sophomore whose poundage now is near the 135-pound mark, may make the 125-pound division if necessary. Green and not very aggressive, Cunningham has shown some promise in the gymnasium.

Billy Seaton, letter man in the 135-pound division, probably won't report for the punch pastime this season. The best-looking prospect for the lightweight berth at present is Brooks Skinner, a sophomore from Winston Salem. Skinner's specialty is a left jab.

Hardwick Stuart, from down Tennessee way, appears to have the inside track for the 145-pound posi-

Indians Seek Game in East

Outstanding Grid Rival Is Wanted by Stanford.

STANFORD UNIVERSITY, Calif., Jan. 10 (AP).—Stanford's football team will play an outstanding eleven in the East next season if Coach C. E. "Tiny" Thornhill's hopes materialize.

The Stanford leader said today he was anxious to line up an intersectional game either for the last week of November or the early part of December.

"I would like to take our 1935 team back East to show them what kind of football we play. We have not even started negotiations for such a game, but I am hopeful it will be arranged. There are plenty of strong teams either within the metropolitan area of New York or just outside it."

A suggestion for an early post-season contest with a Southern team, such as Alabama, did not appeal to Thornhill because of limited financial possibilities.

"Naturally, I would like to get even with Alabama for that New Year's Day beating, but in a contest of this kind we are also interested in the revenue," he said. "They are not prepared to accommodate a crowd in the South such as we could expect in the East."

School Fives Scrimmage.

Alexandria, Va., Jan. 10 (Spl.).—Episcopal High School and Alexandria High School held a lengthy scrimmage this afternoon in the Hilltop gym.

St. John's Lists Baseball Dates

Annapolis, Md., Jan. 10 (AP).—With the approval of baseball as an intercollegiate sport at St. John's College, a 12-game schedule was announced today by M. Talbot Riggs, Johnnies' athletic director.

Riggs will coach the team in the spring with Valentine Lentz as his assistant. The diamond at the Annapolis baseball park will be used by the college players.

April 6, Swarthmore, at Swarthmore; 19 and 20, Randolph-Macon, here; 24, Maryland, at College Park; 26 and 27, Hampden-Sydney, at Hampden-Sydney; 29 and 30, Randolph-Macon, at Ashland.

May 4, Washington College, at Chestertown; 8, Washington College, here; 10 and 11, Hampden-Sydney, here.

Seek Hamas As Foe of Champion

Lasky, Risko May Get 10-Round Shots at Confident Maxie.

Louis, Signed for Two Bouts, May Oppose King Levinsky.

CHICAGO, Jan. 10 (U.P.).—Jim Mullen, half fo the busy boxing firm of Mullen & Lewis, returned from New York today with contracts and plans that will make Chicago the boxing center of the world in 1935.

Nate Lewis, the other half of the firm, remained in the East to corner more new talent for appearances in the Chicago Stadium, world's largest boxing arena.

"We are going to put on the biggest boxing shows in the world at the Chicago Stadium," Mullen said. "Boxing has definitely come back and we are going to sign the country's best boxers for our winter season shows."

Max Baer has been signed for three 10-round, no-decision bouts in March, April and May. Steve Hamas will be Baer's first opponent, if he doesn't go to Germany an fight Max Schmeling. A $25,000 guarantee was to be posted in a United States bnak by February 1 or Hamas will not accept the Schmeling bout. If the Hamas-Schmeling bout goes through, Art Lasky, King Levinsky, Johnny Risko or Charley Retzlaff will be Baer's opponent in March.

Impellettiere Booked.

Ray Impellettiere, who weighs 275 pounds and is bigger than Primo Carnera, has been signed for a bout at the stadium in March. He is the son of a barber at West Point. A referee awarded him a technical knockout over Tommy Loughran, but the New York commission wouldn't allow the decision to stand. It made Impellettiere finish the match and Loughran received the decision.

Joe Louis, Detroit's sepia slasher, has been signed for two bouts in March, one in Chicago and the Navy Quintet to Play Columbia Tomorrow

Annapolis, Md., Jan. 10.—Navy's basket ball team will encounter its first formidable opposition of the season here Saturday in the annual clash with Columbia.

From all indications, it will take a mighty fine team to trim the Tars, who undoubtedly are stronger than last season. Sweeping victories were registered over Virginia Military Institute and Baltimore University in their two previous starts. Neither of these teams, however, extended Navy.

Ruxton Rye

CORRESPONDS TO

TWO YEAR OLD RYE

IN TASTE AND FLAVOR

Though Ruxton Rye Is Aged Eight Months

An analysis from a nationally known firm of chemists reports that Ruxton Rye corresponds to old-fashioned stored whiskey about two years old. One taste of Ruxton Rye will prove the truth of this analysis. Ruxton Rye is distilled from an exclusive formula in the old-fashioned way. It is not artificially aged, flavored or colored by the use of any "new-fangled" scientific developments. Ruxton Rye is natural through and through.

Jockeys Meade and Wright Are Suspended for Rough Riding

Two Jockeys Banned for Meeting

Action Is Taken After Different Races; Are Ardent Rivals.

the field swung out of the back stretch. Foxy Agnes came over and crowded horses on the inside. Tearout, which had been racing close up, nearly went down but managed to keep vertical. The mishap did Foxy Agnes no good, as the slow starting filly was making her move after the leaders.

Paradisical had the early foot of the field. The leaders raced well bunched, and Paradisical relinquished command to Hardware around the final bend. Stegal rushed up at Meade's command and, forging to the front at the turn for home, drew far clear. Foxy Agnes overtook Paradisical in the last stride. Hardware quit badly.

First Time Starter Wins.

Wright increased his lead over local riders in the first race when he piloted the first time starter, Black Highbrow, to victory in the dash for maiden juveniles. This was the Idaho boy's twentieth score of the meeting. Black Highbrow beat Banderilla by a half length, while Hastemond lost second money by five lengths. The winner and third horse were grouped in the field. Banderilla opened up an early lead, but succumbed to Black Highbrow's stretch bid in a hard drive. The winner paid $9.20

Players of field horses succeeded in making it two in a row by virtue of Octararo's nose triumph over Opinion, the favorite in the second. Meade, who rode the latter, was suspended for rough riding in the stretch. Energetic Boy was third, three lengths behind. Octararo disposed of Proteus early and withstood a bitter drive with Opinion when the latter challenged in the final quarter mile. Opinion was in trouble just after the start. He recovered, but could not outgame Octararo, which paid $55.40.

Pryor Also Defeated.

Pryor was the third straight choice to fall by the wayside. The gelding ran into a long lead only to stop all over in the stretch and wind up third. The 7-year-old Fervid, paying $11.60, prevailed by a length over the long shot Wise Revue, which paid $75.40 for place. Pryor was beaten a half length for the place. Fervid forced the pace and when Pryor quit, she held on gamely to thwart Wise Revue's late bid.

The stewards, two races after they had suspended Don Meade for the meeting for rough riding, meted out the same penalty to Wayne Wright, leading local rider, for the same offense. Wright rode Epaulet in the fourth race, the colt running second in a finish that saw the first three horses noses apart. Hastinip, returning $41.80, won the purse. Seawick, the favorite, was third after going into the air at the start. Epaulet entered the stretch with a narrow lead and lost out in the last jump to the slow starting Hastinip.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—OCTARORO, $55.40, $13.60, $4.90; OPINION, $3.10, $2.80; ENERGETIC BOY, $3.80.

OCTARORO, clear of early interference, was kept on the outside all the way to the stretch, where he finished on rail. OPINION was pounds the best and would have won but for being badly knocked about and shut off soon after the start. He circled his field and finished gamely. ENERGETIC BOY, away poorly, closed a big gap. PROTEUS displayed keen speed and is about ready to win. BUDS CHOICE, after being almost knocked down, came with a rush.

THIRD RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $600; claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 3:04. Off at 3:08. Winner, Mrs. J. M. Black's b. m. (7), by Dunlin—Parade. Trained by J. M. Black. Value to winner, $425; second, $100; third, $50; fourth, $25. Time, 1:13.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—PERVID, $11.60, $7.70, $4.60; WISE REVUE, $75.40, $17.70; PRYOR, $2.70.

PERVID was eased back off the early pace, came with a rush in the final furlong and won going away. WISE REVUE, on the outside, closed gamely. PRYOR opened wide gap early, but stopped to a walk and was lucky to finish third. PROTAGONIST, well up all the way, finished fast. LOTUS BUD ran a fair race.

FOURTH RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $700; claiming. For 3-year-olds. Start poor. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 3:38½. Off at 3:38½. Winner, Mrs. S. A. Ketchell's b. f. Two-dollar mutuels paid—HASTINIP, $41.80, $15.00, $5.30; EPAULET, $6.90, $3.70; SEAWICK, $3.00.

HASTINIP, under good handling, moved up very fast around turn, came wide entering stretch, closed fast, but was bearing out at the finish. EPAULET was kept close to pace all the way and held on gamely. SEAWICK, pounds the best, and should have won, but right at the start he went in the air and was forced to make up a world of lost ground. SISOWEN showed plenty of speed, but weakened in last sixteenth. MANUAL had a flash of early speed.

FIFTH RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $700; claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 4:10. Off at once. Winner, Philip Sanford's b. f. Two-dollar mutuels paid—CANDESCENT, $18.40, $5.80, $3.20; BROADSWORD, $3.20, $2.40; GENTEEL LADY, $2.80.

CANDESCENT, displaying a world of speed, raced PRINCE DRAKE into defeat, then drew away and at end held race safe. BROADSWORD broke very slow and was far back, circled field, finished fast under weak handling. GENTEEL LADY moved up very fast and ran good race. MOANE KEALA had speed for three furlongs, then dropped back. PRINCE DRAKE ran a very bad race. He stopped fast at end of three furlongs and was badly beaten at finish.

SIXTH RACE—One mile. Purse, $800. The Aucilla. For 3-year-olds. Start good. Won eased up; place, driving. Went to post at 4:38½. Off at 4:40. Winner, E. F. Seagram's ch. g. (3), by Galetian—Stefana. Trained by G. Gilpin. Value to winner, $625; second, $100; third, $50; fourth, $25. Time 1:38 3-5.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—STEGAL, $5.30, $2.80, $2.50; FOXY AGNES, $3.30, $2.30; PARADISICAL, $2.50.

STEGAL much the best. He was under stout restraint for entire trip. He took lead when ready and won galloping. FOXY AGNES trailed field to the far turn where she moved up and crowded the inside horses, then finished fast. PARADISICAL jumped away to a good lead, showed speed then held on gamely. BELLATOR was well up from the start. TEAROUT, on the inside, was almost knocked down when FOXY AGNES moved up. He never recovered. HARDWARE got away flying and had no mishap.

SEVENTH RACE—One mile. Purse, $700; claiming. For 3-year-olds. Start good. Won easily; place, same. Went to post at 5:07. Off at 5:09. Winner, T. B. and J. S. Mulvihill's b. or br. g. Tech Is Favorite for Title as Inter-High Series Opens Today

All Coaches Optimistic Over 1935

Tech Faces Roosevelt in Opener; Eastern Plays Central.

By John R. Vosburgh.

THE wildest, woolliest scramble for the interhigh basket ball championship since they concocted this winter dose for the sports fan some 30 years ago opens in hurricane fashion at 3:30 p. m., today.

Slightly less than a favorite to retain its hard-won 1934 title, Eastern meets the challenge of a rollicking sophomore team from Central while Tech gets away from the barrier against Roosevelt's veteran combination, a bare choice to regain the championship it relinquished last year.

The schools are departing this year from the long-established custom of playing both games at the same gymnasium, Eastern facing Central on the Roosevelt floor and Tech and Roosevelt playing at Tech.

Upsets Possibility.

Lending a distinct aspect of the unpredictable to the opening tussles is the marked possibility of either Central or Roosevelt, or both, springing an upset before the series has hardly gotten under way. On the basis of team confidence, neither Eastern nor Tech should rate the favorites to win that they do this morning.

None of the five coaches will count his team out of the running. Despite cautious statements by some, the feelings of each is that his team is the one to beat to win the championship.

Letting them speak for themselves:

Charlie Guyon, Eastern: "If Tech doesn't win, we will."

Artie Boyd, Tech: "We ought to get the championship back."

Jack Ray, Central: "Down at Richmond, they picked Central and Eastern together; they can't all be wrong."

Chance for Third.

Lynn Woodworth, Roosevelt: "Too early to say much; we have a chance for third place."

Cliff Moore, Western: "I'm pleased with the prospects."

The chances of the five schools of winning the championship appear to rate about like this:

Tech	7 to 5
Eastern	8 to 5
Roosevelt	6 to 1
Western	8 to 1
Central	10 to 1

Tech—Smooth-working, with a great scholastic forward in Reds Daly and a center of about the same caliber in John Billings; packing speed as well as finesse; bulwarked mentally with wins over the Catholic University and George Washington Freshmen; consistent; a combination of veterans; most experienced team in the series; favored by playing half its games on its own floor.

Eastern—Presenting the best guard in the series in Lawrie Dean; another veteran guard in Gay Edelin; handicapped by having played but four games, three on its own court; well-rounded team, well-equipped with reserves; unquestionably powerful.

Roosevelt—Another veteran team; has a high-scoring forward in Spiro Kollus, vastly improved over the player of a year ago; a good leader in Capt. Dave Donovan; slow to start, dangerous in the last half; finished passers; effective with pick-off plays; plenty of fight and experience; favored by playing half its games on its own floor.

Western—Has come through hardest schedule of any of the schools; heartened by win over C. U. Freshmen Tuesday; has virtually seven first-stringers, a regular sub for each position; three 1934 veterans in Maloney, Allen and Hanley; strengthened by return of Joe Brennan, out with illness last season; a trifle inconsistent; powerful at the peak.

Central—Improving with every game; four sophomores and a senior in starting line-up; making up with fight what it lacks in experience; a flashy star in Vermillion; a first-class ball handler in Nau; fastest team in the series; inconsistent but dangerous in top form.

Chicago Plans For Big Fights

other in Detroit, where Lewis and Mullen promote at the Olympia Arena. Levinsky is sought as Louis' opponent here.

"We are going to offer Levinsky a bout with Louis," Mullen said. "With the promise for a return bout with Baer if he beats Louis. A Louis-Levinsky bout will draw a capacity crowd of 23,000."

Garden May Vacate Barney Ross' Title

New York, Jan. 10 (U.P.).—Boxing in the metropolitan area may reach the seventh heaven of stupidity tomorrow with a five-act program of cauliflower follies staged in and out of the ring, and winding up with the Lou Ambers-Harry Dublinsky 10-rounder at Madison Square Garden.

The fistic frivolities will open when those three sterling master minds of maul, Messrs. Phelan, Brown and Wear, sit down at their boxing commission table and take up the matter of vacating Barney Ross' lightweight title.

Tomorrow is the deadline for Chicago's 135-pound king to answer "yea" to the commission's demand that Barney defend his title in New York this winter against the outstanding challenger. Barney hasn't defended this crown since September 12, 1933. The commission desires all champs under the heavy division to stake their laurels at least once every six months.

If he remains silent tomorrow, as he probably will, the astute commissioners are expected to declare the title vacant or suspend him. This action would be duplicated by the National Boxing Association.

The commissioners also are expected to strain their intellects over Art Lasky's request that he be named No. 1 heavyweight challenger. Chairman Phelan announced today receipt of Lasky's challenge accompanied by the necessary $2,500 check.

Meanwhile ancient Charlie Harvey, manager of Steve Hamas, plans invading the commission with a challenge for Baer.

West, Richmond, Given Clean Slate

Play in Semi-Pro Game Won't Hurt Standing.

Richmond, Jan. 10 (AP).—All controversy as to whether participation in a football game here with the "Collegiates" by Jimmy West, of the University of Richmond, would impair his eligibility to captain the Spider track team this year was removed today by Forest Fletcher, president of the Southern Conference, who gave him a clean slate.

The matter was taken up with the Southern Conference president by President F. M. Boatwright, of the University of Richmond, who said that although the university is not a member of the Southern Conference it played Southern Conference teams and operated under Southern Conference rules.

He pointed out to Mr. Fletcher that West had received no compensation for his participation in the game.

North Carolinians Rally, Beat W. & L.

Triumph by 36-34 Score in Last Five Seconds.

Lynchburg, Jan. 10 (AP).—North Carolina scored in the finel 5 seconds of play here tonight to defeat Washington and Lee's Southern Conference champions, 36 to 34.

Harris, a substitute guard, tossed in the winning goal after a slow but sure Carolina offensive had cancelled the 32 to 26 lead Washington and Lee held five minutes before the end.

The loss of Bob Field and Charlie Smith, Washington and Lee's outstanding men tonight, hurt the Generals. Carolina staged its final successful rally after these two went out on personal fouls.

Jim McCachren, after a so-so first half, returned in the second half to lead the Carolina attack with four goals and a foul shot.

Athletic Club Mapped At Woodstock Session

Woodstock, Va., Jan. 10 (Spl.).—Sixty men and boys of Woodstock turned out here for the first meeting of the proposed athetic club. Webb Riley, former Lynchburg College star, was elected temporary chairman and Clarence Golloday was named acting secretary.

A committee was appointed by the chairman to draw up by-laws. It was agreed that the organization be known as the Shamrock Athletic Club. Sports, including basket ball, boxing and wrestling will be sponsored by the club. A boxing and wrestling show will be put on here soon to aid in raising funds.

Frederick Fives Win, Lose to Middletown

Middletown, Md., Jan. 10 (Spl.). Frederick and Middletown broke even in the opening game of the county high school basket ball league, Frederick winning the boys' game, 25 to 13, while the city girls ran away with the county lassies, 44 to 13.

Franklin Lists Schedule.

Franklin, W. Va., Jan. 10 (Spl.).—The following schedule has been arranged for the Franklin High School basket ball team:

January 11, at home; 12, open; 18, Moorefield, home; 19, Thomas, away; 25, Romney, home; 26, Petersburg, away; 30, Marlinton, home.

February 1—Open; 2, open; 5, Greenbank, away; 8, Romney, away; 9, Petersburg, home; 12, Thomas, home; 15, open; 16, Moorefield, away; 22, Elk Garden, home; 23, open.

March 1, Bayard, home; 2, home.

Two Lettermen Back.

Hagerstown, Md., Jan. 10 (Spl.). St. James School will have a basket ball team this season which will be built around Gorman and Chapman, the only two varsity players back from last season's squad. The team is being whipped into shape for the start of the season of 15 games.

Martinsburg Team Bows in Volley Ball

Martinsburg, W. Va., Jan. 10 (Spl.).—A team of business and professional men was defeated by a team of experienced volley ball players from Hagerstown, Md., here last night by a score of three games to two.

Virginia Baseball Prospect.

University, Va., Jan. 10.—Robert Abbitt, of Clover, Va., center on Virginia's basket ball team, is expected to be one of the regular pitchers for the Cavaliers when the spring season opens. Abbitt is 6 feet, 5 inches in height.

Cavaliers 'One Up.'

University, Va., Jan. 10.—Virginia's basket ball team, which goes to play Washington and Lee at Lexington Saturday night, will meet the Generals one up in the Southern Conference as result of the 33-to-27 victory over South Carolina.

Terps to Meet Duke, V. M. I. Tonight

Face Blue Devil Courtmen and Cadet Ring Team in Double Bill.

MARYLAND'S first twin bill of the season will be staged tonight at Ritchie Coliseum, where the Terp courtmen clash with Duke, and the boxing team makes its debut against V. M. I.'s leather pushers. Basket ball leads the program, getting under way at 8 o'clock.

Duke lost to South Carolina, a team that Maryland massacred last week, but it has slowly improved after a poor start and comes to College Park with three consecutive victories under its belt.

Bell Lone Regular.

Sam Bell, the lone holdover from '34 who played regular; Charlie Kunkle, Pete Naktenis, Bunn Pollack and Herb Cheek probably will start for the Blue Devils. This team took the nod over Davidson, Wofford and Wake Forest after Coach Eddie Cameron's experimentations in the first three games produced only one victory.

Maryland is gunning for its third consecutive Conference victory, but with Vic Willis on the sidelines, will be seriously handicapped. Willis suffered an attack of appendicitis the day of the V. M. I. game and since has been confined to the infirmary.

Bill Andorka probably will replace him at center. That leaves Al Waters and "South" Sothoron or Bill Guckeyson for forwards, and Bernie Buscher and "Nat Holman" Keller or Fred Scheele for the guards.

Virginia Military's ring team includes four letter winners and two sophomores who dealt out terrific punishment to their freshman opponents last season. But the Terps also have a veteran array of punchers to throw at the visitors.

Maryland will enter the ring a slight favorite over the Cadets, largely because of the presence of Stew McCaw, Lyman McAboy, Walter Webb and Bill Waller. This quartet won consistently for the Terps last winter. McCaw is the Conference 165-pound champion, while McAboy went to the semi-finals in the 155-pound class before being forced to retire because of a badly gashed lip.

Probable boxing line-up:

Maryland.	Weight.	V. M. I.
Fimiani	115	Cavedo
Waller	125	Eastham
Nedomatsky	135	Trant
Webb	145	Burton
McAboy	155	Boyd
Herbsleb	165	Whittle
McCaw	175	Arnold
Stalfort	Heavy	Oatley

Storm Clouds Confront C. U.

Mate Is Even Better Than Bucknell Champion.

STORM clouds gathered for the Catholic University boxing team yesterday when it was learned that Cliff Dill, intercollegiate champion, had beeen knocked out by a sophomore, Billy Beck, in a contest to decide who would hold down the lightweight berth on the Bucknell team, which fights the Cards here tomorrow night.

Particularly ominous were the storm clouds to Capt. Eddie Thibodeau, Catholic University's 135-pounder. The prospect of fighting an intercollegiate champion was bad enough, but to face the fighter who put the snore on a collegiate champion is going from bad to worse.

Bob Pethick, light-heavyweight champion of the intercollegiate conference, is slated to mix with Red Fleming, of Catholic University. Like Fleming, Pethick is a member of the football team.

There is a possibility that Danny Pyne will fight in the heavyweight division for the Cards. Should he accept the heavier assignment, Tom Oliver will go in the middleweight spot and Rydewski fall heir to the heavyweight berth.

Tickets for the matches are on sale at Spalding's. General admission tickets are retailing at 55 cents and ringsides at 85 cents.

The probable line-up of both boxing teams:

115 pounds—Catholic U., Reuben Miroi; Bucknell, Al Peterson or Earl Herman.
125 pounds—Catholic U., Angelo Restaino; Bucknell, Tom Carey.
135 pounds—Catholic U., Capt. Eddie Thibodeau; Bucknell, Bill Beck.
145 pounds—Catholic U., Fred Mix; Bucknell, Dick Lauerman.
155 pounds—Catholic U., Salvatore Greco; Bucknell, Bob Thompson.
165 pounds—Catholic U., Tom Oliver or Danny Pyne.
175 pounds—Catholic U., Red Fleming; Bucknell, Capt. Bob Pethick.
Heavyweights—Catholic U., Fred Rydewski or Danny Pyne; Bucknell, Joe Rosati.

Renew Rivalry Here Tonight

the professional world and still flushed with the success of his all-conquereoring European tour, faces Stoefen in the concluding match.

Washington will be the third city to witness Lott and Stoefen in action since they donned the professional toga. It will be the second indoor appearance for Tilden and Vines in the Capital. They attracted a capacity crowd at the Tech High gymnasium last year.

Of no little interest tonight will be the physical condition of Tilden, an old man for an athlete. What the match with Lott and the strenuous, five-set struggle in the doubles in New York have done to him, capped by a repetition of the same test last night, should be borne out by his appearance here.

In Good Condition.

For Vines, reported in good condition, the exhibition should have little physical effect, but whether Stoefen and Lott are yet conditioned to the long barnstorming grind may be another factor brought out.

Thomas J. Mangan, jr., president of the Middle Atlantic Tennis Association, will umpire the feature doubles match, A. O. White the Tilden-Lott engagement, and Herbert Shephard that between Vines and Stoefen. William O. Shreve, secretary of the Washington Tennis Association, is in charge of the officials.

Several well-known Washington players will act as linesman, including Dooly Mitchell, Ralph McElvenny, Bud Markey, Pat Deck, Hy Ritzenberg, Allan Staubley and Larry Phillips.

A few hundred tickets were reported available at Spalding's, on Fourteenth street, last night.

Waynesboro Beaten.

Waynesboro, Pa., Jan. 10 (Spl.). Waynesboro High's Tornado lost its first game of the season to a steady Penn Avenue team of Cumberland, Md., 30-19. The stellar playing of Whiteman and Cornwell featured for the winners, while Geiser excelled for Waynesboro.

Only Three Dual Meets Scheduled This Year; Opener on Feb. 2.

tion. Stuart, a southpaw, fought only one fight last year and lost, but he has improved considerably since then. Southpaws being as poisonous as they are in collegiate circles, Stuart may prove a distinct surprise when the leather begins to fly.

Hasn't Boxed Much.

Bob Karacter, a junior, has been out for workouts in the 145-pound class a few times, but hasn't boxed much and does not boast the speed necessary to meet the stiff opposition found in the conference.

Ed Jean, the Generals' 155-pound letter man, boasts an unorthodox style that sometimes bewilders his opposition and sometimes does not. Jean fights on his heels and keeps popping a straight left from the most bewildering positions and poses imaginable. Ed seldoms shoots his right, but when he does it counts.

Dave Smith, a sophomore, may come out for the junior middleweight class.

Washington and Lee appears strongest in the middleweight position, held down by Capt. George Short. Short did not lose a dual meet bout last year. In the conference tournament, he was eliminated by Lyn Lee, Virginia's outstanding middleweight.

Short manipulates in a crouch and keeps firing a left hook continually. Although his left hook is his best weapon, he fires heavy enough with either hand to flatten most collegiate clouters. Dick Gumm, who now weighs 180, may whittle down to 165 for this berth if necessary.

Mower to Return.

Charlie Mower, an Oklahoman who fought in the heavyweight division last year, probably will carry the Generals' standard in the 175-pound class. Mower never weighed more than 175 all last year while campaigning as a heavyweight, and is expected to do much better in the lighter division. He also keeps firing left hooks continually—and boring in constantly.

Gumm, who won the intramurals last year, also may attempt to achieve a berth in the light-heavy division.

The heavyweight position will be amply protected by Tubby Owings, one of Washington and Lee's outstanding football players. The Norfolk lad weighs 257 pounds and is exceptionally fast for his tonnage. His usual method of procedure is to employ a short left jab to set 'em up, then knock 'em over with a murderous right.

The complete Washington and Lee schedule:

February 2, Maryland, at College Park; 9, V. P. I., at Blacksburg; 16, St. John's, at Annapolis; 22 and 23, Southern Conference tournament, at Charlottesville.

Spencer Cards 67 for New Record

Is Off Fairway Only Once, Breaks Beaver Dam's Par by 5 Shots.

By Dave Herman.

THREE-PUTTING one green, missing two greens and straying off the fairway only once, Cliff Spencer, Beaver Dam's tall professional, cracked out a 67 yesterday over his home layout to set a new unofficial course record.

Spencer negotiated the soggy Beaver Dam course in five under par figures. Out in 36, even par, Spencer burned up the incoming nine in 31, holing a 20-yard chip shot for an eagle 3 on the tenth, birdying the thirteenth, sixteenth and seventeenth, and missing a birdie by inches on the home hole.

The official course mark is a 69 made by Roger Peacock, of Indian Spring, in the medal round of the invitation last June. Spencer and Martin F. McCarthy have scored 69s in unofficial rounds. They are the only three golfers who have ever broken 70 on one of the longest and most difficult courses in the Middle Atlantic sector.

Playing with Spencer were Jess Baggett, who did a 75, and Dr. Leonard Lavine, who had an 85. Spencer holed every putt.

His card:

Out—
Par	4	4	4	5	3	4	4	4	—36
Spencer	4	5	4	4	3	4	4	4	—36
In—
Par	5	4	4	4	3	4	5	3	4—36—72
Spencer	3	4	4	3	3	4	4	2	4—31—67

The sub-par fever also afflicted Kenwood's Al Houghton, who played his home course for the first time in three weeks and scored 34-33—67, four under par. But such scores are not unusual for Houghton, especially at Kenwood, where he seldom goes over par.

Houghton collected five birdies, and three-putted only one green. He, too, holed every putt, as he had a match against par with Russ Hollebaugh, Al Jamison, his assistant; Henry Neimeyer, and Andy Bain. The Rev. L. V. Veath also was in the party.

His card:

Out—
Par	4	4	4	4	5	3	4	3	4—35
Houghton	5	5	4	4	4	2	4	2	5—34
In—
Par	3	4	5	5	4	4	3	4	—36—71
Houghton	3	4	5	4	4	3	3	3	4—33—67

The first of a series of lectures sponsored by the Middle Atlantic Association of Greenkeepers, postponed last Monday, will be held next Wednesday night at the Manor Club. Fred V. Grau, of the University of Maryland, will speak on "Every Day Chemistry."

Blue Ridge League To Hold Meeting

Martinsburg May Decide to Forsake Loop.

Hagerstown, Md., Jan. 10 (Spl.). Blue Ridge League officials are concerned over the possibility of Martinsburg dropping out of the league this season, as the result of the apparent inability of the baseball powers there to decide who is to represent the city at the annual league meeting in Frederick on January 27, when a decision will be made as to whether the league will reenter organized ball.

President Frank Colley has been informed that Hugh Shipper, who attended Sunday's preliminary meeting here, was not authorized to speak for that town. Ralph Edwards, who has been in charge since Don Parsons withdrew, failed to appear.

Gallaudet to Oppose Maryland Normal Five

Gallaudet's ambitious courtmen return to the basket ball wars tonight after a two-weeks lay-off, meeting Maryland State Normal at 8 p. m. in the Kendal Green gym.

Coach Wally Krug has decided to rely on the same team that succumbed to Wilson Teachers by a 34-26 count in the Blues' last game before the holidays, Jim Ellerhorst and Francis Higgins, forwards; "Cowboy" Burnett, center; Merle Goodin and Whitey Kuglitsch, guards, will take the floor for Gallaudet.

Harpers Ferry Team Opens Season Tonight

Harpers Ferry, W. Va., Jan. 10 (Spl.).—Harpers Ferry High's first game of the season will be played tomorrow night with Paw Paw. Sixteen more games remain on the card.

Coach Gene Ross has but one veteran, Clevenger, back this season, and has built his squad mainly from the football group. Among the group out are McDonald, Jones, Jefferson, Grandstaff, Glover, Staubs, Fritts and Morgan, all football men.

The schedule:

January 11, Paw Paw, there; 12, Lincoln, here; 16, R. M. A., there; 18, Shepherdstown, here; 22, Martinsburg, there; 25, Berkeley Springs, there; 26, Hedgesville, here; 29, Charles Town, here.

February 1, Shepherdstown, there; 5, Hedgesville, there; 6, Martinsburg, here; 8, Paw Paw, here; 15, Lincoln, there; 20, Bunker Hill, here; 22, Charles Town, there; 26, Berkeley Springs, here.

S. C. Will Choose Grid Coach Today

Advisory Board to Select Laval's Successor.

Columbia, S. C., Jan. 10 (AP).—The University of South Carolina's athletic advisory board will meet here tomorrow afternoon to choose a successor to William L. Laval as head coach.

Three names stood out in speculation over the probable selection of the board. They were Don McCallister, coach at Waite High School, Toledo, Ohio; Josh Cody, former head coach at Clemson College and now assistant at Vanderbilt, and Pooley Hubert, one-time Alabama football star, who is now coaching at Hattiesburg, Miss.

The three recently came to Columbia for interviews with athletic officials of the university. The man chosen will have the privilege of naming his assistants, Dr. Ralph K. Foster, director of athletics, said.

Woodberry Forest In Opener Tomorrow

Woodberry Forest, Va., Jan. 10 (Spl.).—The Woodberry Forest basket ball team will open its schedule against St. Christopher's in Richmond. Hopes for a victory in this encounter are very slim, as the inexperienced local quintet will make the trip with only four days of practice behind it.

The schedule:

January 12, St. Christopher's, there; 17, Young Men's Shop of Charlottesville, here; 19, University of Virginia Freshmen, there; 22, Lane High School, here; 26, Fishburne, there; 28, Staunton Military Academy, here; 30, University of Virginia Freshmen, here.

February 1, Massanutten, here; 2, Fork Union, there; 6, Swavely, here; 7, Davidson Freshmen, here; 9, R. M. A., there; 12, Fork Union, here; 13, Fishburne, here; 15, Tech High School, here; 16 V. P. S., here; 21, Virginia Presbyterian School, here; 23, Staunton Military Academy, there; 26, St. Christopher's, here.

March 2, Episcopal High School, here.

County Fives In 12 Games Today

Alexandria - Washington and Lee in Feature; Rockville Plays.

SUBURBAN high schools face a full schedule today, 12 schools playing in contests covering four counties and five leagues.

The feature contest is slated at 8 o'clock tonight when Alexandria High faces Washington and Lee at Ballston. The contest marks the visitors' debut in the Intersuburban League, is also billed as a northern Virginia mythical game and a Third District championship encounter. Lee-Jackson visits Falls Church with both schools battling to keep in the running for the Northern Virginia crown.

Montgomery County offers one of the features of the season today when Coach Allen Vogt's Rockville five, victor in five of six contests and billed as the strongest club to represent the county seat school, meets the in-and-out Silver Spring five, the latter seeking its third county win. The toss-up is at Rockville at 3:30.

Bethesda-Chevy Chase, defending its title, stages its annual game with Damascus at Leland, the hosts seeking their sixth win in seven starts and second county win.

Prince George County fives also see league action today. Laurel faces the defending champion Mount Rainier quintet at Mount Rainier, while a lively battle is in prospect at Hyattsville where the weakest host team in years, further handicapped by the sickness of two dependables, engages the Maryland Park High courtmen.

Wheat Values Gain Fraction On Supply Data

Cotton Prices Close Mixed; May Contracts Sell at 12.69.

Chicago, Jan. 10 (AP).—Surmises beforehand that official estimates of domestic farm reserve supplies of grain would be the smallest on record gave a lift to grain prices today.

The estimates were not issued until after today's trading had ended, but lively Eastern buying in the last half hour appeared to be based on correct anticipation. As a result of profit taking, however, top prices were not maintained.

Wheat closed nervous at the same as yesterday's finish to one-half cent higher; May, $1.01⅜ to $1.01½; corn, also unchanged to ⅛ up; oats at ⅛ decline to ⅜ advance, and provisions varying from 15 cents setback to a rise of 2 cents.

Late flurried buying appeared first in the corn market, but then wheat advanced quicker than corn; and scored a maximum gain of a cent a bushel. From the outset, prices both of wheat and corn showed a general upward trend. Aside from guesses about domestic farm reserves, comparative firmness of the Liverpool wheat market had a bracing effect. Helping further to strengthen values was word that as much as 2,500,000 bushels of Canadian wheat had been taken for export so far this week.

Cotton Market

New York, Jan. 10 (AP).—A moderately active opening in cotton today was followed by a generally quiet market and prices held within a comparatively narrow range. After selling up to 12.71 at the start, May reacted to 12.67 and closed at 12.69 with the general list steady, net 3 points lower to 1 point higher.

Steady Liverpool cables brought out buying through houses with both domestic and foreign trade connections in early trading and there was some scattered buying from local sources. The demand was supplied during the first hour, and business tapered off to comparatively small proportions.

Overnight report from Washington that approximately 200,000 bales of cotton were still held as collateral for the 10 cent loans of 1933 and outlining methods by which these loans might be liquidated by March 15 attracted very little comment, and was apparently without market effect. Exports today 14,074 making 2,672,763 so far this season. Port receipts 5,861. United States port stocks 2,992,286.

Steel Industry Faces New Era in Which Special Products Will Outweigh Importance of Tonnage Volume, Observer Says.

New York, Jan. 10.—The steel industry faces a new era in which special qualities of its products rather than tonnage volume will have to be stressed, it is the belief of several of its leaders. This attitude of mind is reflected in the large expenditures which various companies are making or plan to make to build new facilities and modernize old plants, despite the fact that they are working now at only a fraction of their rated capacity to produce.

After three years of relatively little new plant construction, the steel industry began to build new facilities during 1933. For that year, despite the relatively low average rate of operations, the steel industry as a whole added 1,191,449 gross tons, or 1.7 per cent, to its ingot producing capacity. For 1934, another increase was effected, so that the steel producing capacity of the country has been expanded to a new all-time record above 70,000,000 gross tons per annum.

With average operations last year only 36 per cent of capacity, as compared with 33 per cent in 1933, it may seem difficult to see on the surface why steel executives are now investing substantial sums of money in new producing facilities. Nevertheless, the Bethlehem Steel Corporation has announced plans for the erection of a new mill at Buffalo, N. Y., to cost from $10,000,000 to $15,000,000, and in all expenditures of about $50,000,000 are now being made or are planned to be made shortly in building new steel plants. And such expenditures are regarded by some leaders of the industry as only the beginning of a protracted period of construction of modern plant facilities.

Rates of Production Explained According to Kinds of Steel.

Two factors help to throw light on this apparent anomaly of an industry which is burdened with vast excess productive capacity, and yet which steadily adds new productive facilities. In the first place, while operations at Pittsburgh are currently around 27 per cent of capacity, activity is at 50 per cent of capacity in Chicago, 56 per cent in the Ohio Valley, 66 per cent in Detroit, 69 per cent at Cleveland, and 90 per cent in the Wheeling district. Pittsburgh is the center of heavy steel production, while in the outlying districts lighter steel products, and especially automobile steels, are produced to a greater extent. In the South, where heavy steel products are stressed also, operations are only 29 per cent of capacity at this time.

A second enlightening factor has been the ability of several steel companies, such as National Steel, to show substantial earnings right through the depression, while the large steel manufacturing companies have reported large deficits. Once again it is found that the companies making steel products of the lighter variety and special purpose steels are those which tend to do relatively well as regards earnings as compared with the large companies that specialize in producing raw steel or heavy products.

The fact of the matter is that the cessation of new railroad construction and the very severe contraction in railway maintenance work, the virtual stoppage of construction of large office buildings and apartment houses, and curtailed steel purchases by the public utility and oil industries have shrunk the demand for heavy steels. Furthermore, the steel industry has sought to pursue, during the depression, a policy of price stability such as it has favored since the early years of the century. In some quarters, it has been argued that if the price of steel would be brought down, and if labor costs and other factors entering into the cost of production of large buildings were reduced, a revival of such construction would result which would effect a recovery in the demand for heavy steel products.

On the other hand, the consensus of opinion in the steel industry is that the supply of many types of large buildings will prove quite adequate in many cities for a long time to come. The railroads, once the chief customers of the steel industry, furthermore are held quite unlikely to buy steel rails and other products purchased regardless of formerly purchased regardless of price, owing to their small traffic and earnings.

Producers of Special Steels Uncover Many New Markets.

Those steel producers which have perfected special purpose steels and alloys, however, have uncovered a number of new markets for the metal. There is considerable activity also in the perfection of new uses for steel, such as in frameworks for small homes, which would develop substantial new demand. The automobile industry is now the largest single purchase of steel, and those companies which have specialized in producing steel products for motor manufacturers have done relatively well.

The new $8,000,000,000 public works program proposed by the President in his budget message is not likely to result in any major revival of the demand for heavy steel. Only a part of the program will involve projects calling for large steel tonnages, and such work will merely replace the substantial demand for steel which Federal and local public works usually generated before the depression. The railroads and private construction of large structures, formerly the two chief sources of demand for heavy steel, will not be replaced by public works or any other factor now in sight.

Bond Market Firms Under Federal Loans

New Highs Are Recorded; Sales Volume Climbs to $17,313,000.

New York, Jan. 10 (AP).—Further strength of United States Government securities, together with the general firmness of prime investment corporation issues, gave the bond market an exceptionally bright appearance today.

The turnover in listed loans amounted to $17,313,000, par value, which, with the exception of January 3, was the larget aggregate for a single day since October 24, last.

Of today's total, the Federal group accounted for about $6,900,000.

Averages Are Up.

The Associated Press averages for selected utilities, industrials and low-yield issues were up from ¼ to ½ point. The composites for the rails and foreign loans were somewhat lower.

The increasing demand for United States Government bonds was said to have reflected, in part, the urge to invest idle funds, the belief that the Administration can put through its program without radical resistance from Congress, and that the general improvement in business and industry will enable Washington to taper off relief spending and thus bring the budget nearer a balance.

New Highs Recorded.

New highs were recorded by Treasury 3¼s of 1942-52, up 12-32ds at 102.24, and Home Owners Loan 2¾s, up 14-32ds at 97.20. Elsewhere advances in the Federals ranged from 1-32d to 19-32ds, with the greatest activity being shown by the Treasury 4¼-3¼s with a gain of 14-32ds at 104.

Of the corporate groups, the utilities gave the best account of themselves, although scattered industrials pushed steadily ahead.

In the foreign department Brazilian obligations dipped 1 to 3 points on rumors that a financial dictator would be appointed in that country. Brazilian government 8s were off 3 points at 29. The Germans were unsettled along with the Japanese.

Cleveland Steel Mills Operate Near Capacity

Youngstown Rate Lifted to 56 Per Cent; Open Hearths Active.

Cleveland, Jan. 10 (AP).—Steel operations in Ohio took another big bound upward today under the influence of expanding activity in the automotive industry and improvements in business generally.

At Youngstown, the rate of production was lifted to 56 per cent, a gain of six points from the first of the week, and plans were made for additional increases before the end of the month.

At Lorain, the National Tube Co. announced it would have three blast furnaces in operation next week for the first time since 1930.

Near Full Capacity.

Cleveland mills have been working at almost full capacity for several days, and the Cleveland skies have been red at night with the glow that signifies steel prosperity.

The Youngstown Sheet and Tube Co., was reported making plans to open a blast furnace at its Brier Hill plant which has been closed the last three years.

The National Tube Co. at Lorain has 11 of its 12 open hearths in operation, which is its practical capacity. About 5,000 men are at work in the Lorain steel mills.

Open Hearths Going.

In Cleveland, 13 out of the 14 open hearths at the Corrigan-McKinney Steel Co. are going, and three of its four blast furaces.

All of the eight open hearths at the Riverside plant of the Otis Steel Co. are in operation, and one of its two blast furnaces.

Steel men assert the improvement in Ohio's mills is largely due to orders from Detroit automobile factories, but that several other lines of business also have recently increased their buying.

Steel Prices Unchanged.

Daily Credit of Reserve Banks Averages Four Million Lower

The daily average volume of Federal Reserve bank credit outstanding during the week ended January 9, as reported by the Federal Reserve banks, was $2,464,000,000, a decrease of $4,000,000 compared with the preceding week and of $201,000,000 compared with the corresponding week in 1934.

On January 9 total Reserve Bank credit amounted to $2,467,000,000, an increase of $6,000,000 for the week. This increase corresponds with increases of $193,000,000 in member bank reserve balances and $6,000,000 in nonmember deposits and other Federal Reserve accounts and a decrease of $6,000,000 in Treasury and national bank currency, offset in part by an increase of $15,000,000 in monetary gold stock and decreases of $114,000,000 in money in circulation and $70,000,000 in Treasury cash and deposits with Federal Reserve banks.

There were practically no changes in the system's holdings of bills discounted, bills bought in open market and of United States Government securities. Holdings of industrial advances increased $1,000,000.

Changes in the amount of Reserve Bank credit outstanding and in related items during the week and the year ended January 9, 1935, were as follows:

Directors of the Minneapolis-Honeywell Regulator Co. today declared an extra dividend of 25 cents a share and a quarterly dividend of 75 cents, both payable February 15 to stock of record February 4. In the two preceding quarters extra dividends of 50 cents each were paid and 50 cents quarterly.

Cotton Producers Pool Holds Total Of 1,617,932 Bales

Group Controls in Addition 20,900 Units in Long Future Contracts.

The Cotton Producers Pool now holds a total of 1,617,932 bales of actual cotton and 20,900 bales of long futures contracts, it was announced today by Oscar Johnston, manager of the pool.

At the close of business on January 7, 1934, the status of the pool was as follows:

Cotton on hand unsold, 1,594,290 bales.

Cotton sold with price not fixed, 23,642 bales; total stock, 1,617,932 bales.

Cotton futures long contracts, 20,000 bales.

The futures are distributed through the months of May, July and October. The pool holds no short contracts.

The total amount of cotton acquired from the Farm Credit Administration in June of 1933 was 2,485,574 bales, including cotton futures. This cotton was optioned to producers at 6 cents per pound as a part of their compensation in the 1933 emergency cotton adjustment program.

White Marks Half Century in Capital Banks

Robert V. Fleming Named President and Chairman of Riggs National.

By Karl von Lewinski.

George W. White yesterday celebrated his fiftieth year in the banking profession by being reelected president of the National Metropolitan Bank for the twenty-sixth time.

When he was 15 years old he started as a runner at the same institution of which he became president 24 years later.

Except for the period between 1904 and 1909, during which time he served as vice president of another Washington bank, Mr. White has been connected constantly with the Metropolitan Bank.

Under his leadership the bank has progressed substantially, having added both the savings department and trust department. It recently completed 121 years of active banking service.

Other officers were elected as follows: O. H. P. Johnson, vice president; A. A. Hoehling, vice president, general counsel and trust officer; C. F. Jacobsen, cashier; R. P. Hollingsworth, assistant trust officer; S. W. Burwell, assistant trust officer; H. A. Kertz, assistant trust officer; C. E. Bright, assistant cashier; A. H. Bedford, assistant cashier; C. L. Eckloff, assistant cashier; R. E. Briggs, assistant cashier; F. E. Hildebrand, assistant cashier; H. F. Stokes, assistant cashier, and F. V. N. Cook, auditor.

More than $200,000,000 was spent on housing improvements in the last six months of 1934, according to an estimate made yesterday by Federal Housing Administration officials.

Perceptible stimulation of the building industry in answer to the impetus from the Federal housing act is shown also by late car loadings figures for building materials.

M. J. Alger, vice president of the New York Central Lines, reports that November of 1934 saw an increase of 41.5 per cent in that loadings classification over the same month of the preceding year.

The Boston & Maine Railroad also cited increases in their business as a result of interest in the housing program. Three manufacturers of building materials shipping over their lines report increases of 180 per cent, 116 per cent, and 40 per cent during the past year.

Riggs Bank Officers.

At the organization meeting of the board of directors of the Riggs National Bank, held yesterday, Charles C. Glover was designated honorary chairman of the board; Robert V. Fleming was reelected president and elected chairman of the board; Charles C. Glover, jr., was reelected vice chairman of the board, and Frank J. Hogan was reelected general counsel of the bank. All other officers were reelected to succeed themselves, as follows:

In the banking division, William J. Flather, vice president; Avon M. Nevius, vice president; George O. Vass, vice president and cashier; H. G. Hoskinson, vice president; J. R. McMullen, assistant vice president; Earle M. Amick, assistant vice president; Nelson B. O'Neal, assistant vice president; F. G. Burrough, assistant vice president; I. J. Roberts, assistant cashier; B. Gwynn 'Dent, assistant cashier; George F. Rainey, assistant cashier; Hulbert T. Bisselle, assistant cashier; D. J. Callahan, jr., assistant cashier; Raymond G. Marx, comptroller; R. Earle Haycock, auditor.

For the trust department, Sidney F. Taliaferro, vice president and trust officer; George M. McKee, trust officer; Kenneth F. Brooks, trust officer; Henry K. Dierkoph, assistant trust officer.

For assistant general counsel, William H. Donovan.

In the branch offices, Farmers & Mechanics Branch, Harry L. Selby, assistant cashier and manager, and L. O. DeLashmutt, assistant manager; Dupont Circle Branch, Ralph R. DePrez, assistant cashier and manager, and Louis E. Jeffries, jr., assistant cashier and assistant manager; Park Road Branch, Carl H. Donch, assistant cashier and manager, and Joseph A. Keene, assistant manager; Northwest Branch, Gregg C. Burns, assistant cashier and manager, and Charles G. Hubbard, assistant manager; Chevy Chase Branch, Harold W. Burnside, assistant cashier and manager, and J. Ezra Troth, assistant manager; Seventh Street Branch, Bernard I. Boudren, assistant cashier and manager; Friendship Branch, W. Edmund Freeman, assistant cashier and manager.

McLachlen Officers.

Directors of the McLachlen Banking Corporation organized yesterday by reelecting the following officers: Lanier P. McLachlen, president; Firman R. Horner, vice president; John A. Massie, vice president and treasurer; Archibald McLachlen, secretary and assistant treasurer; Guy D. Cowl, assistant treasurer, and E. L. W. Goldney, auditor.

Lincoln National Bank.

Directors of the Lincoln National Bank yesterday elected these officers: Floyd E. Davis, president; Albert S. Gatley, executive vice president; James A. Soper, vice president and cashier; H. T. Offterdinger, vice president; George Francis Williams, general counsel and trust officer; W. W. Millan, associate counsel; J. Frank White, assistant cashier and assistant trust officer; Robert E. Lee, assistant cashier; Richard A. Norris, assistant cashier and branch manager; D. Hammond Wetzel, assistant cashier; Floyd S. Davis, assistant cashier; Nelson M. Stokes, assistant manager of branch office; M. C. Hazen, secretary of board, and William M. Harris, auditor.

Trading on the Exchange.

On the Washington Stock Exchange yesterday 10 shares of Liberty National Bank stock sold at 83. There was a $1,000 sale in Barber & Ross 6½ per cent bonds at 38. Gas 6s, series B, sold at 103¼, and Potomac Electric Power 5½ per cent preferred stock moved at 111¼.

Curb's Prices Driven Higher; Utilities Lead

Activity Is Unrestricted; Sales Volume Rises to 160,000 Shares.

New York, Jan. 10 (AP).—Buying in utilities and specialties gave the curb market a steady tone in the late dealings today. The improvement was shaded in the final minutes of trading, but closing prices revealed a predominance of advances.

Activity continued restricted. Volume broadened somewhat around 2 o'clock when the demand for power issues developed. American Gas & Electric preferred, Commonwealth Edison and Consolidated Gas & Electric of Baltimore got up a point or more on the move. Electric Bond & Share edged up fractionally.

Singer Manufacturing rose some 5 points on a light buying flurry. Bunker Hill & Sullivan, Dow Chemical and A. O. Smith gained around 3 each. Dictograph Co. was up 2½, but Sherwin Williams lost as much.

Fractional recessions were recorded by Aluminum Co. of America, Newmont and Distillers Corporation-Seagrams.

Transfers approximated 160,000 shares compared with 147,000 yesterday.

London—Business on the Stock Exchange was fairly active today. Gilt-edged securities swung upward on good buying and rumors of a governmental conversion scheme, several issues touching new high records. Gold mining stocks, Kaffirs and industrials improved, while transatlantic and oil issues eased. The market closed irregular.

Paris—Rentes led a general advance on the Bourse today, gaining from three-quarters to half a point. Gold mining shares and Young loan issues also showed gains. The closing was weak.

Berlin—Although prices on stocks were generally lowered, the Boerse maintained a friendly tone. The closing was steady.

The Federal Diary

(Trade-Mark Applied For.)

By Morgan Baker.

PROSPECTS of the 6,000 Agricultural Adjustment Administration employes for obtaining civil service ratings grew a shade brighter yesterday as Secretary of Agriculture Henry A. Wallace affirmed his support of the merit system.

BAKER.

Urging "certain developments" and "improvements" in the civil service, Mr. Wallace declared:

"It is a pleasure for me to say, in connection with the observance of the fifty-second anniversary of the enactment of the national civil service law, that I am a sincere believer in the wisdom of having the bulk of the Government personnel under the civil service.

"It would be impossible for executive departments to carry on as well from Administration to Administration if there were not this large body of men and women to give continuity and consistency in dependable Government service.

"I think that the Civil Service as an institution might be strengthened by certain developments of it. It is in the injection of new policies in new administrations that I think we have a field for study that would lead to the introduction of certain elements of greater elasticity. But this is simply a matter of seeing in this particular field, as one can see in every field, the possibility of improvement. Certainly, the Civil Service Commission is most responsive to administrative needs, and certainly the Civil Service workers, by and large, give a splendid accounting of themselves."

The consistent support of the merit system by Mr. Wallace has been revealed in the personnel policies of his department and of the AAA.

Observance of National Civil Service Week, from January 13 to 19, is under sponsorship of the American Federation of Government Employes, in cooperation with the Civil Service Commission and scores of civic and patriotic groups throughout the country.

Press Is Favorable.

President Roosevelt, members of the House and Senate Civil Service Committees and other high officials were presented with tangible evidence of the overwhelming sentiment of newspapers throughout the country in behalf of the merit system by the National Federation of Federal Employes.

The evidence is contained in a 32-page booklet of a cross section of editorial comment from coast to coast and representing every shade of political opinion.

"This book of editorials," Luther C. Steward, NFFE, president, declares, "is the most tangible possible evidence of the public revulsion against the spoils personnel policies which have ruled during the past two years.

"Democratic editors are shown to be as vigorous in their denunciation of current Federal personnel policies as those of Republican sympathies. All Americans concerned in the cause of good Government know the vital importance of a civil service untainted by politics and based upon the sound principles set up during 50 years of experience."

Employes of Procurement Division, Treasury, are planning a benefit dance to be held at the Shoreham Hotel February 2. Morris Weingarten (P), is chairman of the arrangements committee.

Federal Bridge League.

Two more teams have enrolled in the Federal Bridge League as the second half of their 1934-35 season opened this week at 2400 Sixteenth street northwest. This increase is attributed to the recent ruling, allowing wives of Government employes to play. Several more teams are expected to register.

The Agriculture team won 12 out of 14 boards with an average of .857 in Section A. High North and South honors went to F. Muchmeyer and C. C. McDonnell, Agriculture, with .692 average. High East and West score was made by W. R. Clardy and J. J. Hughes, Internal Revenue, with .629 average.

In Section B the Leathernecks won 16 out of 24 boards with .667 average. North and South high score was made by J. H. Lebley, (C), and Paul Phinney, (C), Leathernecks, with .637 average. East and West high score was made by P. W. Le Duc and Rexel Goodman and Aggie Pastimes, with .559 average.

Diary Guest Tickets.

IF (F), (P) or (C) follows your name in this column, call in person on the Federal Diary Editor. You will receive tickets to Loew's Fox (stage, Vera Gordon and roundup of vaudeville stars; screen, Will Rogers in "The County Chairman"); or to Loew's Palace (Shirley Temple and James Dunne in "Bright Eyes"); or to Loew's Columbia (Helen Twelvetrees and Conrad Nagel in "One Hour Late").

Diary office hours are daily, except Sunday, 12 noon to 1 p. m. and from 4:30 to 6 p. m.; Saturday, 12 noon to 2:30 p. m.

Gerald M. Brundrett (F), Agriculture, has just obtained a patent on a portable apparatus for use in spraying plants.

AN efficiency rating system which is not a "one-way street"—one not exclusively of penalties—is urged by the National Federation of Postoffice Clerks. However, the Federation reminds us that ingenuity has not yet been able to devise any system of rating, which is not, in the last analysis, the opinion of some supervisor. A rating system must diminish this personal element, is the view of the NFPOC, which also advocates the immediate establishment of a court of appeals.

"But it should be a court of final appeal for the purpose of adjudicating wrongs which can not be settled elsewhere. To do otherwise is to impose a superbureaucracy over other bureaucracies without assurance that the ills aimed at would not be accentuated rather than diminished."

PEELLE, LESH & DRAIN, E. WOODRUFF WEAVER, 1422 F street northwest.

IN THE SUPREME COURT OF THE DISTRICT of Columbia, holding an Equity Court. Lily Scott et al., Plaintiffs, vs. Frank Tomlinson et al., Defendants. Equity, No. 47606. Order of publication. The object of this suit is to secure the substitution of trustees under two deeds of trust, one dated October 23, 1930, covering lots 805 and 807, in square 211, and recorded in Liber 6496, at folio 353 et seq., securing payment of promissory notes totaling $200,000, made by Frank Tomlinson; the other dated September 15, 1930, covering lot 807, in said square 211, and recorded in Liber 6484, at folio 315 et seq., securing an indebtedness in the sum of $7,000, to the Union Trust Company of the District of Columbia, as trustee under the will of Katherine E. McNally, deceased; to have foreclosure sales thereunder; to have a money decree against Frank Tomlinson for any deficiency due on the notes secured by the deed of trust first above mentioned after said foreclosure sales; and for other purposes. It is, therefore, this 10th day of January, 1935, ordered that the defendants, Frank Tomlinson and Beulah B. Tomlinson, appear in this Court on or before the fortieth day, exclusive of Sundays and legal holidays, after the day of the first publication of this order; otherwise as to them the cause will be proceeded with as in the case of default. Provided, that a copy of this order shall be published at least once a week for three successive weeks in the Washington Law Reporter and The Washington Post, other or further publication being dispensed with for good cause shown. Walt Mason, Himself

Plenty to Read.

Another strong and forceful book has gained the critics' praise; at it I take a wistful look, this volume, "Forty Days." They say it is a work of art, it is a gem, a pearl, with drama that will stir the heart and make the whiskers curl. It analyzes human souls, but action has its place, and warriors with tenfoot poles are standing face to face. It is a work of wondrous charm, the "air" announcers say; the wise man mortgages his farm, to buy it right away. I journeyed to the bookman's store, expecting I would buy; I read it for an hour or more, and left it with a sigh. I said, "No doubt it's brave and strong, it's noble and sublime, but it's about a mile too long—I can not spare the time. Eight hundred pages of fine print would make me rend my gown; the author ought to take a hint and boil his products down. Eight hundred pages of fine print are more than man can bear, and he springs words of lurid tint and kicks rungs from his chair. A book so weighty and so fat can gain no human friend; before one reads the half of that he's longing for the end. He's tired of all the characters that throng the ample page; a yarn so lengthy only stirs in him a futile rage. He's tired of all the dialogue, he's weary of the plot, and he goes out and kicks the dog, he's so incensed and hot. I do not like the modern book which stretches league on league; I read it in my inglenook and only know fatigue."

I JUST CAN'T BELIEVE WE'RE REALLY ON OUR WAY TO GREENACRES AND MY OLD HOME. IT'S THE FIRST TIME DENNIE'S EVER SEEN THE COUNTRY, BILL.
BUT GRAN'MA—WHY ARE THE TREES ALL DEAD?
AW, THEY AIN'T DEAD, KID—ONLY SLEEPIN'.
THEY'LL BE GREEN AGAIN IN THE SPRING, DENNIE. OH, LOOK! APPLE TREES!
WHERE? I DON'T SEE ANY APPLES.
GEE, YUH SURE DON'T KNOW MUCH—
HE DOES TOO!! HE'S NEVER BEEN IN THE COUNTRY BEFORE, SO HOW D'YA EXPECT HIM TO KNOW ABOUT IT?
AW, NOW MARY, I DIDN'T MEAN NO HARM BUT IT DOES SEEM FUNNY—
OH! LET'S OPEN THE LUNCH, GRAN'MA. I'M HUNGRY.
SAY, HE IS A PRETTY SMART KID, AT THAT!

Silver Jubilee To Be Observed By City Scouts

Challenges Issued to Test Local Troops During Coming Year.

February 8 is a memorable day to millions of American boys and men for it was on that day 25 years ago that American Scouting was organized in Washington, D. C.

In this year of Scouting's silver jubilee, Washington Scouts are favored with some great events and some great opportunities, the first of which comes during the anniversary week, February 8 to February 14, in the form of a series of challenges to the organization, a sort of a test to see if they are prepared.

The anniversary committee, under the leadership of Commodore W. E. Longfellow, local field commissioner for dramatics, met last night and formulated plans; one of the features of which was a challenge by Brig. Gen. F. R. Keefer, chairman of the disaster preparedness committee of the District of Columbia Chapter, American Red Cross, as follows:

"In connection with the celebration of the twenty-fifth anniversary of scouting in America, which begins February 8, 1935, I hereby issue the following challenge to all Scouters and Scouts who have qualified for the junior, senior or advanced first-aid certificates or for the merit badge in first aid. That on Monday evening, February 11, before 8 o'clock, you present yourself in uniform (with first-aid kit, if any) at the Hall of Service, Red Cross Chapter House, 1730 E street northwest, to be inspected by a committee of leading physicians, who shall satisfy themselves of the quality of training you have taken. Troop or divisional first-aid teams or patrons will be inspected as such and any who present themselves will stand in readiness for interrogation or to demonstrate any of the material in first aid required of a first-class Scout. With the increasing number of automobile accidents resulting in fatalities in Washington it behooves all well-disposed Americans to be prepared to render first aid in harmony with the Scout motto, 'Be Prepared' and the Red Cross motto, 'Service to Humanity.'"

Another challenge is expected from the park police, in which Scouts will be asked to assist in searching for lost children in the park. Several hundred Scouts will participate in this "child" hunt, following which the participants will be fed by the disaster relief committee of the Red Cross.

Several other challenges are being arranged and will include the schools, churches, Fire Department and other community activities.

Another big event will be the broadcast "Scouting' Comes to America," which will go out at 4 p. m. on February 8.

The week will be climaxed on February 14 with a huge leaders' rally for all scouters, junior officers and patrol leaders.

Advancement Records Broken.

At the annual meeting of the District of Columbia Boy Scout Council, which will probably be held at the Willard Hotel, January 28, the report submitted by Dr. Paul Bartsch, chiarman of the Court of Honor, will show among accomplishments for the year 1934 that Boy Scouts achieved the greatest advancement record in the history of the local organization. A total of 66 boys and young men were awarded the Eagle badge, the highest single rank in scouting. Fifty-eight palms were awarded to Eagle Scouts; 112 Scouts reached the rank of life; 258 Star, 322 become First Class, 891 reached Second Class, and a total of 4,915 merit badges were granted to the Scouts during the year.

"Personal Health" badge seemed the most popular, with 353 Scouts earnings this award. "Handicraft" and "Safety" were next in popularity, 298 Scouts receiving the former and 233 the latter.

The sympathy of the Scout field has been extended to Scoutmaster Daniel J. Tyrrell of Troop 100, at the local Y. M. C. A., who sustained a broken kneecap last week while on a hike.

Troop 14, under the leadership of Scoutmaster W. C. Cronenburg, will occupy their troop camp on the Potomac near Great Falls this weekend. A pioneer bridge and other projects constitute the program.

Redskin Division, No. 12, is represented in an exposition and carnival to be held under the Community Center Department of the Buchanan School, Fifteenth and D streets southeast, February 8. Scouts will give demonstrations of the many phases of scoutcraft.

Troop 5, at St. Alban's Episcopal Church, is planning a huge demonstration meeting February 8, at which parents and friends of this large troop will be entertained.

Courts—7:30 p. m., January 19, Powell Junior High School, Hiatt place and Lamont street; February 6, Langley Junior High School, Second and T streets northeast.

Jamboree News.

Plans for the huge Scout Jamboree, to be held in Washngton in August of this year, are going forward rapidly.

President Chester Wells, of the local council, has started organization of a committee which will include representation from every phase of Washington business and social life.

This commttee, cooperating with national headquarters men, one or more of whom will be in Washington almost constantly, will be responsible for the success of this huge undertaking, in which 30,000 to 35,000 scouts will be encamped, and perhaps as many as 100,000 additional friends and relatives will be vistors.

A "Know Your City" campaign among scouts has gotten under way and has aroused the greatest interest, not only among scouts, but among people in general.

The Boy Scout Press Club in the District of Columbia have organized in 12 districts and three compact press groups will handle the Silver Jubilee publicity, issuing a monthly publication called Jubilee Journal. This will continue monthly until the jamboree opens when it will be taken over by the National Boy Scout Press Club and operated as a daily paper during the period in which scouts are camped.

Court of Honor and Review.

At the court of honor and review held at the Langley Junior High School January 2, the following scouts advanced in rank:

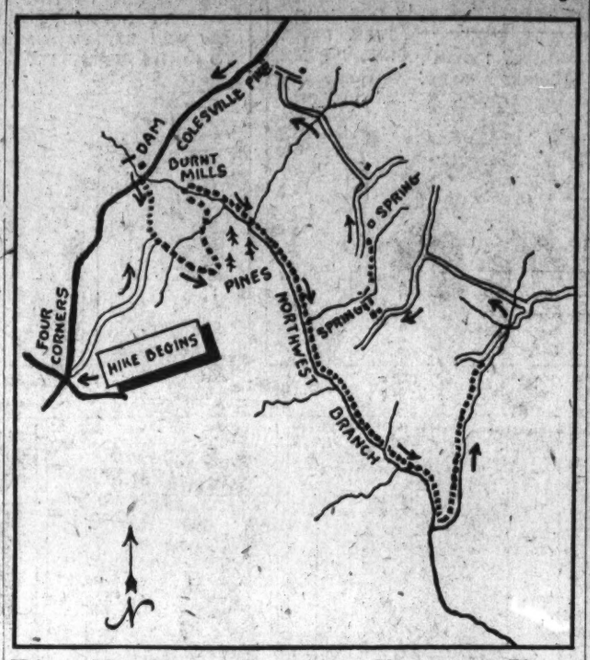
Wanderbirds to View Beauty Of Northwest Branch Sunday



Hikers May Observe Evergreens, Mosses and Plants, Also Geological Phenomena; Lunch at Burnt Mills.

By Robert Shosteck.

While Sunday's trip of the Wanderbirds Hiking Club to the Northwest Branch will be somewhat reminiscent of the scenic trip to Black Pond, it will not present the hazards of the rocky jaunt of two weeks ago. Besides viewing the scenic beauty of the area, the hikers will tramp through a primeval pine woods overlooking the branch. The carpet of greenery covering the bed of pine needles recall the beauty of the autumn woods.

Readers of The Washington Post are invited to join the Wanderbirds on this 5½-mile jaunt. The group will meet in front of The Post Building at 10 a. m., boarding buses which will carry the hikers to Four Corners, where the hike begins. To be sure of a seat one must phone in reservations in advance at National 4200. The round-trip fare will be 30 cents, the buses returning to the city about 6 o'clock. Hikers should bring lunch, a cup for coffee and wear durable clothing.

Trail Into Open.

At Four Corners the course will be along a dirt road leading northward to Burnt Mills. Passing through fields of weeds and scrubby pines, the road finally turns right and ends abruptly near the ruins of a house. The trail continues eastward through open country, where the silvery pampas grass, forming huge clumps here and there, tells the story of some mansion which once stood nearby. Now the big clumps are the hideout of cottontails. The hikers desert the trail, entering the pine woods to the left.

This woods is of great interest to the naturalist because of an abundance of evergreen ferns, mosses and flowering plants. Christmas fern and princess pine are everywhere to be seen, while the gray clumps of reindeer moss are a striking contrast to the brown pine needles. Among the attractive flowering plants to be found are the rattlesnake plantain, which, incidentally, is a member of the orchid family; the mottled pipissewa and its cousin, the shinleaf. Scores of varieties of mosses grow here, from tiny pin-cushion forms to the large club mosses, related to the ferns.

We now pick up a trail along a brook leading to the Northwest Branch. We are now among the mountain laurel which covers solidly the steep slope of the branch. For a short distance along the main stream—until we reach the plank bridge—the trail is rather rough, but quite passable. A short distance above the Boy Scout swimming pool the hikers can view an interesting geological phenomenon, an intersecting dike. This consists of two bands of white quartz in the gray igneous rock, the bands crossing in the form of a giant letter X. The right arm of one band has slipped a foot below the other arm. These bands tell the story of a tremendous fracture in the earth's crust in bygone days, a crack which was gradually filled up with quartz. A subsequent fracture accompanied by a slipping downward of one block, followed by another quartz fill-in complete the story of this curious banding.

Over Plank Bridge.

Crossing the plank bridge over the roaring branch, the hikers will follow the easy trail along the left bank for nearly 2 miles to a small run leading up into the hills. We now come into farm land, following a dirt road to the left as shown on the map. A spring is located near a farm house in a hollow off the road. The group will follow the brook up a short way, crossing over a field to another road, thence through a gate and along a road which leads to the pike.

We followed the pike to Burnt Mills and entered the woods by a trail leading off to the left at the far end of the bridge. Here among the pines the Wanderbirds will rest and refreshen with coffee, returning to the buses about 5 p. m.

Followers of Izaak Walton will be interested in an illustrated lecture on the "Fishes of the District of Columbia and Vicinity" to be given by S. F. Hildebrand, of the Bureau of Fisheries, before the Biological Society tomorrow at 8 p. m. This meeting will be held in the Assembly Hall of the Cosmos Club.

The Potomac Appalachian Trails Club announces a trip to scenic Marys Rock via Free State Hollow to Nethers. This 13-mile trip, scheduled for Sunday, will be led by Herman F. Nolte, 1736 G street northwest, with whom reservations must be made.

Young Cuba Party Is Accused of Plot For Soviet State

Havana, Jan. 10 (U.P.).—Charges that members of the Young Cuba Party believed guilty of recent terrorism were plotting a nationwide revolt to set up a soviet state were voiced in urgency court today.

Maj. Raimundo Ferrer, one of the high army officers searching for Antonio Guiteras, alleged leader of the terrorist-Communist group, keeping Havana and vicinity in turmoil with bomb outrages, made the charge during inquiry into the recent violence.

The major said the army investigators so far had failed to run down Guiteras, believed in hiding in Havana since a recent attempt to "put on the spot" a number of officials regarded by the outlaws as "traitors" to the rebellion.

The search is continuing in the hope of finding arms deposits as well as the ringleaders in the purported Red uprising against President Carlos Mendieta and his comparatively conservative regime.

U. S. Silver Plan Peril to China, Shanghai Says

Nationalists Charge Buying of Metal Is Forcing Their Nation Into Slump.

Shanghai, Jan. 10 (AP).—An indirect accusation that America's silver buying policy is forcing China into economic depression the seriousness of which the world little realizes was made today in National government circles.

A commission "for study of silver values and commodity prices," recently created by the ministry of industry, in its preliminary report declared:

"Foreign nations which hope to trade with China, but which at the same time pursue a policy calculated to raise silver values, will be interested to know that the depression in China resulting from rising silver values already has curtailed Chinese imports."

While the commission's findings did not specifically name the United States, it was said unanimously in informed circles that the report was aimed at the American silver program which has caused the National government the gravest anxiety as to China's economic welfare and monetary well being.

"Rising silver prices have affected Chinese economic life particularly in the form of declining farm prices," said Leonard Hsu, eminent Chinese economist and chairman of the commission studying silver values.

That the United States Government is giving consideration to the effect on China of its silver policy was evidenced when the commission revealed that John Lossing Buck, husband of the author, Pearl Buck, and American rural economist long resident in China, is now in Washington on the invitation of the American Treasury Department to discuss with it the silver question as it relates to China.

Strikers Urge Militia Release 28 'Prisoners'

Georgia Strike Leaders Say 'Agitators' Are Illegally Held.

Rossville, Ga., Jan. 10 (AP).—Labor union leaders today sought Federal court action to obtain release of 28 military prisoners as the deadline for reemploying striking workers passed quietly at the Richmond hosiery mils.

The 28 men were taken into custody here by National Guardsmen sent by Gov. Talmadge to preserve order, and taken to Atlanta, where they were placed under guard in an armory. They were charged with being "agitators," or with "pernicious milling."

Eleven others under military arrest have not been sent to Atlanta.

Petition for the prisoners' release was brought in the form of habeas corpus proceedings filed in Federal court in Atlanta by Jack C. Savage, attorney for the Georgia Federation of Labor.

The petition was filed in the name of Charles Williams, a Tennessee resident, and directed against Adjutant General Lindley M. Camp, Georgia National Guard commander. Judge E. Marvin Underwood set Saturday for the hearing.

The petition contends Williams' arrest was illegal "because no proclamation declaring a state of civil war has been issued by the Governor of Georgia."

Replying to the charge, Gov. Eugene Talmadge said his martial law proclamation during strike disorders last September had never been revoked.

Garnett Andrews, president, said here today that operations were at 75 per cent and that full-time operation will be resumed the first of next week.
